Robert P. Wiemann, Director
Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The employment-based visa petition was denied by the Director, California Service Center. The matter is now before the Administrative Appeals Office on appeal. The appeal will be sustained.

The petitioner is a corporation organized in the State of Hawaii in March 1997. It is engaged in providing services for the Japanese bridal market sold through its parent company in Japan. It seeks to employ the beneficiary as its president and general manager. Accordingly, the petitioner endeavors to classify the beneficiary as an employment-based immigrant pursuant to section 203(b)(1)(C) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1153(b)(1)(C), as a multinational executive or manager. The director determined that the petitioner had not established that the beneficiary would be employed in a primarily managerial or executive capacity.

On appeal, counsel for the petitioner asserts the beneficiary's primary duties are primarily executive and/or managerial in nature. Counsel submits the beneficiary's declaration that provides a more detailed and comprehensive description of the beneficiary's duties as well as the percentage of time the beneficiary spends on each of his duties.

Section 203(b) of the Act states, in pertinent part:

(1) Priority Workers. -- Visas shall first be made available . . . to qualified immigrants who are aliens described in any of the following subparagraphs (A) through (C):

* * *

(C) Certain Multinational Executives and Managers. -
- An alien is described in this subparagraph if the alien, in the 3 years preceding the time of the alien's application for classification and admission into the United States under this subparagraph, has been employed for at least 1 year by a firm or corporation or other legal entity or an affiliate or subsidiary thereof and who seeks to enter the United States in order to continue to render services to the same employer or to a subsidiary or affiliate thereof in a capacity that is managerial or executive.

The language of the statute is specific in limiting this provision to only those executives and managers who have previously worked for the firm, corporation or other legal entity, or an affiliate or subsidiary of that entity, and are coming to the United States to work for the same entity, or its affiliate or subsidiary.

A United States employer may file a petition on Form I-140 for classification of an alien under section 203(b)(1)(C) of the Act as a multinational executive or manager. No labor certification is required for this classification. The prospective employer in the United States must furnish a job offer in the form of a statement that indicates that the alien is to be employed in the United States in a managerial or executive capacity. Such a statement must clearly describe the duties to be performed by the alien. 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(j)(5).

The issue in this proceeding is whether the beneficiary will perform primarily managerial or executive duties for the petitioner.

Section 101(a)(44)(A) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(44)(A), provides:

The term "managerial capacity" means an assignment within an organization in which the employee primarily-

i. manages the organization, or a department, subdivision, function, or component of the organization;

ii. supervises and controls the work of other supervisory, professional, or managerial employees, or manages an essential function within the organization, or a department or subdivision of the organization;

iii. if another employee or other employees are directly supervised, has the authority to hire and fire or recommend those as well as other personnel actions (such as promotion and leave authorization), or if no other employee is directly supervised, functions at a senior level within the organizational hierarchy or with respect to the function managed; and

iv. exercises discretion over the day-to-day operations of the activity or function for which the employee has authority. A first-line supervisor is not considered to be acting in a managerial capacity merely by virtue of the supervisor's supervisory duties unless the employees supervised are professional.

Section 101(a)(44)(B) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(44)(B), provides:

The term "executive capacity" means an assignment within an organization in which the employee primarily-

- i. directs the management of the organization or a major component or function of the organization;
- ii. establishes the goals and policies of the organization, component, or function;
- iii. exercises wide latitude in discretionary decision-making; and
- iv. receives only general supervision or direction from higher level executives, the board of directors, or stockholders of the organization.

The petitioner initially provided a detailed description of the beneficiary's duties for the petitioner but did not include sufficient evidence and descriptions of the job duties of the beneficiary's subordinate employees. The director requested additional evidence on this issue and the information was provided. However, even with the additional evidence and the detailed description of the beneficiary's job duties, it was not clear whether the beneficiary would be primarily performing managerial or executive duties in relation to the various tasks described or whether the beneficiary would be actually performing the tasks described. In addition, it appeared from the totality of the record that the beneficiary would be directly providing a number of services for the petitioner rather than directing or managing the services through the work of others. An employee who primarily performs the tasks necessary to produce a product or to provide services is not considered to be employed in a managerial or executive capacity. Matter of Church Scientology International, 19 I&N Dec. 593, 604 (Comm. 1988).

On appeal, counsel provided a declaration by the beneficiary on behalf of the petitioner in his capacity as president and general manager of the petitioner. The declaration clarified the already detailed description of the beneficiary's duties and also ascribed the percentage of time the beneficiary allocated to each duty. In examining the executive or managerial capacity of the beneficiary the Bureau will look first to the petitioner's description of the job duties. See 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(j)(5). In this case, the evidence provided on appeal substantiates counsel's assertion that the beneficiary's primary duties are managerial and executive duties. Moreover, the evidence on appeal does not conflict with the previously submitted job descriptions or evidence in the record, but rather, supports and clarifies the record. The petitioner's evidence on appeal overcomes the well-reasoned decision of the director.

In visa petition proceedings, the burden of proving eligibility for the benefit sought remains entirely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. Here, that burden has been met.

ORDER: The appeal is sustained.
