FOR THE ASSOCIATE COMMISSIONER, EXAMINATIONS

Robert P. Wiemann
Robert P. Wiemann, Director
Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The preference visa petition was denied by the Director, Vermont Service Center, and is now before the Associate Commissioner for Examinations on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The petitioner is a software development and consulting firm. It seeks to employ the beneficiary permanently in the United States as a senior programmer. As required by statute, the petition is accompanied by an individual labor certification approved by the Department of Labor. The director determined that the petitioner had not established that it had the financial ability to pay the beneficiary the proffered wage as of the filing date of the visa petition.

On appeal, counsel submits a brief and additional evidence.

Section 203(b)(3)(A)(i) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. 1153(b)(3)(A)(i), provides for the granting of preference classification to qualified immigrants who are capable, at the time of petitioning for classification under this paragraph, of performing skilled labor (requiring at least two years training or experience), not of a temporary or seasonal nature, for which qualified workers are not available in the United States.

8 C.F.R. 204.5(g)(2) states in pertinent part:

Ability of prospective employer to pay wage. Any petition filed by or for an employment-based immigrant which requires an offer of employment must be accompanied by evidence that the prospective United States employer has the ability to pay the proffered wage. The petitioner must demonstrate this ability at the time the priority date is established and continuing until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence. Evidence of this ability shall be either in the form of copies of annual reports, federal tax returns, or audited financial statements.

Eligibility in this matter hinges on the petitioner's ability to pay the wage offered as of the petition's filing date, which is the date the request for labor certification was accepted for processing by any office within the employment system of the Department of Labor. Matter of Wing's Tea House, 16 I&N Dec. 158 (Act. Reg. Comm. 1977). Here, the petition's filing date is March 4, 1996. The beneficiary's salary as stated on the labor certification is $95,000.00 per annum.

Counsel submitted copies of the petitioner's 1996, 1997, and 1998, and 1999 Form 1120 U.S. Corporation Income Tax Return. The federal tax return for 1996 reflected gross receipts of $795,995; gross profit of $465,352; compensation of officers of $115,678; salaries and wages paid of $175,902; and a taxable income before net operating loss deduction and special deductions of $59,046. The federal tax return for 1997 reflected gross receipts of $941,365; gross profit of $730,208; compensation of officers of $141,268; salaries and wages paid of $360,689; and a taxable income before net operating loss deduction and special deductions of -$1,931.

The federal tax return for 1998 reflected gross receipts of $605,495; gross profit of $527,822; compensation of officers of $101,815; salaries and wages paid of $294,213; and a taxable income before net operating loss deduction and special deductions of -$56,753. The federal tax return for 1999 reflected gross receipts of $1,066,759; gross profit of $937,617; compensation of officers of $126,255; salaries and wages paid of $368,945; and a taxable income before net operating loss deduction and special deductions of $104,661.

The director determined that the evidence did not establish that the petitioner had the ability to pay the proffered wage and denied the petition accordingly.

On appeal, counsel argues that the beneficiary has been working in H-1B status for the petitioner's subsidiary since 1997 and further argues that:

Finally, it bears noting that [REDACTED] continues to evolve through development projects and continuous production use at major clients. It is common for many IT businesses to have significant research and development expenses in the initial phases. [REDACTED] has invested thousands of man-hours in the development of its customizable risk-management software applications. Although there were losses initially, subsequent tax returns were more promising.

The petitioner's Form 1120 for calendar year 1996 shows a taxable income of $59,046. This amount is not sufficient to pay the annual salary of $95,000.00.

Additionally, the federal tax returns for 1997 and 1998 continue to show an inability to pay the wage offered.

Although the petitioner has established its ability to pay the wage offered in 1999, the petitioner must show that it had the ability to pay the proffered wage at the time of filing of the petition and continuing until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent resident status. See 8 C.F.R. 204.5(g)(2).

Accordingly, after a review of the federal tax returns submitted, it is concluded that the petitioner has not established that it had sufficient available funds to pay the salary offered at the time of filing of the petition.

The burden of proof in these proceedings rests solely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. 1361. The petitioner has not met that burden.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
