Robert P. Wiemann, Director
Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The employment-based immigrant visa petition was denied by the Director, Texas Service Center, and is now before the Administrative Appeals Office on appeal. The appeal will be summarily dismissed.

The petitioner is a church. It seeks to classify the beneficiary as a special immigrant religious worker pursuant to section 203(b)(4) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1153(b)(4), to perform services as a "director of evangelism for Spanish-speaking people." The director determined that the petitioner had not established that the beneficiary had the requisite two years of continuous work experience in the occupation immediately preceding the filing date of the petition. In addition, the director determined that the petitioner had not established its ability to pay the proffered wage to the beneficiary.

8 C.F.R. § 103.3(a)(1)(v) states, in pertinent part, "[a]n officer to whom an appeal is taken shall summarily dismiss any appeal when the party concerned fails to identify specifically any erroneous conclusion of law or statement of fact for the appeal."

On the Form I-290B Notice of Appeal, filed on July 15, 2002, counsel indicated that a brief would be forthcoming within thirty days. To date, nearly eleven months later, careful review of the record reveals no subsequent submission; all other documentation in the record predates the issuance of the notice of decision.

The statement on the appeal form reads simply "[t]he decision made by the District Director [sic] was arbitrary and capricious. The church states they have sufficient funds to pay the salary of a religious worker and the beneficiary has completed the two year requirement." These are general statements, which contain no specific allegation of error. The bare assertion that the director somehow erred in rendering the decision is not sufficient basis for a substantive appeal.

Inasmuch as counsel has failed to identify specifically an erroneous conclusion of law or a statement of fact as a basis for the appeal, the regulations mandate the summary dismissal of the appeal.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
