for Robert P. Wiemann, Director
Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The immigrant visa petition was denied by the Acting Director, California Service Center. The matter is now before the Administrative Appeals Office on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The petitioner is a church. It seeks classification of the beneficiary as a special immigrant religious worker pursuant to section 203(b)(4) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the "Act"), 8 U.S.C. § 1153(b)(4), to perform services as an assistant director of religious education at a salary of $1,500 per month.

The acting director determined that the beneficiary's voluntary services with the petitioning entity, while pursuing full-time university studies, did not satisfy the statutory requirement that he had been continuously carrying on a religious occupation for two full years immediately preceding the filing of the petition.

On appeal, counsel for the petitioner submits a statement arguing that the regulations do not require that the prior experience have been in a paid capacity.

Section 203(b)(4) of the Act provides classification to qualified special immigrant religious workers as described in § 101(a)(27)(C) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(27)(C), which pertains to an immigrant who:

(i) for at least 2 years immediately preceding the time of application for admission, has been a member of a religious denomination having a bona fide nonprofit, religious organization in the United States;

(ii) seeks to enter the United States--

I) solely for the purpose of carrying on the vocation of a minister of that religious denomination,

II) before October 1, 2003, in order to work for the organization at the request of the organization in a professional capacity in a religious vocation or occupation, or

III) before October 1, 2003, in order to work for the organization (or for a bona fide organization which is affiliated with the religious denomination and is exempt from taxation as an organization described in section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Code of 1986) at the request of the organization in a religious vocation or occupation; and

(iii) has been carrying on such vocation, professional work, or other work continuously for at least the 2-year period described in clause (i).

8 C.F.R. § 204.5(m)(1) states, in pertinent part:

Such a petition may be filed by or for an alien, who (either abroad or in the United States) for at least the two years immediately preceding the filing of the petition has been a member of a religious denomination which has a bona fide nonprofit religious organization in the United States. The alien must be coming to the United States solely for the purpose of carrying on the vocation of a minister of that religious denomination, working for the organization at the organization's request in a professional capacity in a religious vocation or occupation for the organization or a bona fide organization which is affiliated with the religious denomination and is exempt from taxation as an organization described in section 501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 at the request of the organization. All three types of religious workers must have been performing the vocation, professional work, or other work continuously (either abroad or in the United States) for at least the two-year period immediately preceding the filing of the petition.

At issue in this proceeding is whether the beneficiary had been engaged continuously in a qualifying religious vocation or occupation for two full years immediately preceding the filing of the petition.

The petition was filed on April 26, 2001. Therefore, the petitioner must establish that the beneficiary was working continuously in a religious occupation from April 26, 1999 until April 26, 2001. The record indicates that the petitioner last entered the United States as an F-1 student on August 23, 1998. The petition, Form I-360, indicates that the beneficiary has not worked in the United States without permission.

In an attempt to establish the beneficiary's work history, the petitioner submitted a letter dated March 19, 2001, from a senior pastor in Bogota, Colombia who claimed that the beneficiary was the "President of Youth Group" for six years at the Bogota Mission Oriental Church.

A certificate of employment, dated April 24, 2001, from the Austin Korean Presbyterian Church in Austin, Texas reflects that since January 1999, the beneficiary has been employed as an "Assistant Religious Education Director/Instructor." The beneficiary's duties are described as:

conduct bible study sessions, discussion groups, and retreats. Also plan religious mission studies and activities. Responsible to develop, organize, and religious program [sic] and promote religious education to church members. Creates religious study courses and programs, provide spiritual counseling and guidance and assistance to church members. Also make bible study book on text [sic], and other material for Sunday school and Academy after school program [sic]. And develop new program [sic] and special activities.

The petitioner indicated that the beneficiary's employment at the Austin Korean Presbyterian Church occurred from January 1999 to June 2001. The petitioner also indicated that the beneficiary received financial support from "his parent." The petitioner asserted that the beneficiary will be employed at its church once the petition has been approved.

The pertinent regulations were drafted in recognition of the special circumstances of some religious workers, specifically those engaged in a religious vocation, in that they may not be salaried in the conventional sense and may not follow a conventional work schedule. The regulations distinguish religious vocations from lay religious occupations. 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(m)(2) defines a religious vocation, in part, as a calling to religious life evidenced by the taking of vows. While such persons are not employed per se in the conventional sense of salaried employment, they are fully financially supported and maintained by their religious institution and are answerable to that institution. The regulation defines lay religious occupations, in contrast, in general terms as an activity related to a "traditional religious function." Id. Such lay persons are employed in the conventional sense of salaried employment. The regulations recognize this distinction by requiring that in order to qualify for special immigrant classification in a religious occupation, the job offer for a lay employee of a religious organization must show that he or she will be employed in the conventional sense of salaried employment and will not be dependent on supplemental employment. See 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(m)(4). Because the statute requires two years of continuous experience in the same position for which special immigrant classification is sought, the Bureau interprets its own regulations to require that, in cases of lay persons seeking to engage in a religious occupation, the prior experience must have been full-time salaried employment in order to qualify as well.

Furthermore, in evaluating a claim of prior work experience, the Bureau must distinguish between common participation in the religious life of a denomination and engaging continuously in a religious occupation. It is traditional in many religious organizations for members to volunteer a great deal of their time serving on committees, visiting the sick, serving in the choir, teaching children's religion classes, and assisting the ordained ministry without being considered to be carrying on a religious occupation. It is not reasonable to assume that the petitioning religious organization, or any employer, could place the same responsibilities, the same control of time, and the same delegation of duties on an unpaid volunteer as it could on a salaried employee. Nor is there any means for the Bureau to verify a claim of past "volunteer work" similar to verifying a claim of past employment. For all these reasons, the Bureau holds that lay persons who perform volunteer activities, especially while also engaged in a secular occupation, are not engaged in a religious occupation and that the voluntary activities do not constitute qualifying work experience for the purpose of an employment-based special immigrant visa petition.

In this case, the beneficiary was engaged in the occupation of a full-time engineering student at the Austin Community College (in Texas). The beneficiary's voluntary participation in activities with his church does not constitute employment in a religious occupation. For the reasons discussed above, voluntary activities, while also engaged in a secular occupation, even if the volunteer work involved a qualifying religious organization, does not satisfy the two-year prior experience requirement.

Beyond the discussion of the director's decision, the petitioner has failed to demonstrate eligibility on another ground.

8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2) requires that the prospective employer to submit its annual reports, federal tax returns, or audited financial statements to demonstrate the ability to pay the proffered wage. The petitioner failed to submit such required documentation. As the appeal will be dismissed on the grounds discussed, this issue need not be examined further.

In reviewing an immigrant visa petition, the Bureau must consider the extent of the documentation furnished and the credibility of that documentation as a whole. The petitioner bears the burden of proof in an employment-based visa petition to establish that it will employ the alien in the manner stated. See Matter of Izdebska, 12 I&N Dec. 54 (Reg. Comm. 1966); Matter of Semerjian, 11 I&N Dec. 751 (Reg. Comm. 1966).

The burden of proof in these proceedings rests solely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. Here, the petitioner has not sustained that burden.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
