FOR THE ASSOCIATE COMMISSIONER, EXAMINATIONS

Robert P. Wiemann, Director
Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The nonimmigrant visa petition was denied by the director and is now before the Associate Commissioner for Examinations on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The petitioner is a direct market outlet for fine crafts and artwork originating in Thailand and China. It has five employees and a gross annual income of $500,000. It seeks to employ the beneficiary as a marketing manager for a period of three years. The director determined the petitioner had not established that the proffered position is a specialty occupation.

On appeal, the petitioner's president submits a brief.

8 C.F.R. 214.2(h)(4)(ii) defines the term "specialty occupation" as:

an occupation which requires theoretical and practical application of a body of highly specialized knowledge in fields of human endeavor including, but not limited to, architecture, engineering, mathematics, physical sciences, social sciences, medicine and health, education, business specialties, accounting, law, theology, and the arts, and which requires the attainment of a bachelor's degree or higher in a specific specialty, or its equivalent, as a minimum for entry into the occupation in the United States.

The director denied the petition because the duties described by the petitioner did not appear to be so complex as to require a baccalaureate degree. On appeal, the petitioner's president states, in part, that the proposed duties, which require considerable expertise in Asian art, are so complex as to require a baccalaureate degree in business administration with an emphasis in marketing. The petitioner's president submits an expanded description of the duties the petitioner anticipates the beneficiary would perform as a marketing manager.

The petitioner's statement on appeal is not persuasive. The Service does not use a title, by itself, when determining whether a particular job qualifies as a specialty occupation. The specific duties of the offered position combined with the nature of the petitioning entity's business operations are factors that the Service considers. In the initial I-129 petition, the petitioner described the duties of the offered position as follows:

A skilled professional is needed to develop, plan and execute this project utilizing knowledge of paper products and distribution. A skilled professional . . . is needed to coordinate sales distribution by establishing sales territories and goals and advising dealers, studying, statistics, assessing and evaluating supply/demand needs and forecasting future trends. His duties and responsibilities will include researching and analyzing potential and existing client markets in the U.S. and then relating the acquired information to executives after he formulates innovative sales programs and creates aggressive sales methods for our business. He will also effectively oversea [sic] sales projections and promote our products' quantity, quality and price projections.

Pursuant to 8 C.F.R. 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A), to qualify as a specialty occupation, the position must meet one of the following criteria:

1. A baccalaureate or higher degree or its equivalent is normally the minimum requirement for entry into the particular position;
2. The degree requirement is common to the industry in parallel positions among similar organizations or, in the alternative, an employer may show that its particular position is so complex or unique that it can be performed only by an individual with a degree;
3. The employer normally requires a degree or its equivalent for the position; or
4. The nature of the specific duties is so specialized and complex that knowledge required to perform the duties is usually associated with the attainment of a baccalaureate or higher degree.

The petitioner has not met any of the above requirements to classify the offered position as a specialty occupation.

First, the Service does not agree with counsel's argument that the proffered position would normally require a bachelor's degree in business administration or a related field. The Department of Labor's Occupational Outlook Handbook, 2002-2003 edition, finds no requirement of a baccalaureate or higher degree in a specialized area for employment as a marketing manager. A wide range of educational backgrounds are considered suitable for entry into marketing managerial positions. Some employers prefer a bachelor's or master's degree in business administration with an emphasis on marketing, but many employers prefer those with experience in related occupations plus a broad liberal arts background. In addition, certain personal qualities and participation in in-house training programs are often considered as significant as the beneficiary's specific educational background.

The comments by the petitioner's president regarding the beneficiary's expertise in Asian art are noted. The proffered position, however, is not that of an art designer, nor has the petitioner established that the beneficiary's art-related duties are of such complexity that a baccalaureate degree in a specific specialty, as distinguished from familiarity with Asian art or a less extensive education, is necessary for the successful completion of its duties. Thus, the petitioner has not shown that a bachelor's degree in a specialized area or its equivalent is required for the position being offered to the beneficiary.

Second, the petitioner has not shown that it has, in the past, required the services of individuals with baccalaureate or higher degrees in a specialized area such as business administration, for the offered position. Third, the petitioner did not present any documentary evidence that businesses similar to the petitioner in their type of operations, number of employees, and amount of gross annual income, require the services of individuals in parallel positions. Finally, the petitioner did not demonstrate that the nature of the beneficiary's proposed duties is so specialized and complex that the knowledge required to perform the duties is usually associated with the attainment of a baccalaureate or higher degree.

The petitioner has failed to establish that any of the four factors enumerated above are present in this proceeding. Accordingly, it is concluded that the petitioner has not demonstrated that the offered position is a specialty occupation within the meaning of the regulations.

The burden of proof in these proceedings rests solely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. 1361. The petitioner has not sustained that burden.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
