FOR THE ASSOCIATE COMMISSIONER, EXAMINATIONS

Robert P. Wiemann, Director
Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The nonimmigrant visa petition was denied by the director and is now before the Associate Commissioner for Examinations on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The petitioner imports and trades Indian grocery, household, religious, and music products. It has six employees and a gross annual income of $1.9 million. It seeks to employ the beneficiary as a marketing manager for an approximate period of three years. The director determined the petitioner had not established that the proffered position is a specialty occupation.

On appeal, the petitioner's vice president submits a brief.

8 C.F.R. 214.2(h)(4)(ii) defines the term "specialty occupation" as:

an occupation which requires theoretical and practical application of a body of highly specialized knowledge in fields of human endeavor including, but not limited to, architecture, engineering, mathematics, physical sciences, social sciences, medicine and health, education, business specialties, accounting, law, theology, and the arts, and which requires the attainment of a bachelor's degree or higher in a specific specialty, or its equivalent, as a minimum for entry into the occupation in the United States.

The director denied the petition because the duties described by the petitioner did not appear to be so complex as to require a baccalaureate degree. On appeal, the petitioner states, in part, that the proffered position is a senior level position, and highly complex and technical in nature. The petitioner further states that, in addition to heading the wholesale and retail marketing division, the beneficiary also has knowledge of seven different Indian languages which further qualifies him for the proffered position.

The petitioner's statement on appeal is not persuasive. The Service does not use a title, by itself, when determining whether a particular job qualifies as a specialty occupation. The specific duties of the offered position combined with the nature of the petitioning entity's business operations are factors that the Service considers. In the initial I-129 petition, the petitioner described the duties of the offered position as follows:

. . . reviewing and analyzing data, make recommendations and assist in the implementation of proposals, set up the infrastructure required including acquiring computers, software, etc. He shall be responsible for sales planning, especially strategic planning in tune with the competition. For distribution and marketing of company's products, he shall also be called upon to do mater [sic] scheduling and distribution planning and analysis for which he shall be using spreadsheets and database packages and other such tools. He shall also prepare financial and other reports pertaining to the marketing division of the company. Besides, he will also review, analyze and suggest improvements to business and organizational systems to assist, management in operating distribution functions more efficiently and effectively, design systems and procedures, conduct work simplification in sales and distribution, besides devising and implementing marketing plans for increasing the sales and revenue, incorporate systems checks for minimizing errors and frauds.

Pursuant to 8 C.F.R. 214.2(h) (4) (iii) (A), to qualify as a specialty occupation, the position must meet one of the following criteria:

1. A baccalaureate or higher degree or its equivalent is normally the minimum requirement for entry into the particular position;
2. The degree requirement is common to the industry in parallel positions among similar organizations or, in the alternative, an employer may show that its particular position is so complex or unique that it can be performed only by an individual with a degree;
3. The employer normally requires a degree or its equivalent for the position; or
4. The nature of the specific duties is so specialized and complex that knowledge required to perform the duties is usually associated with the attainment of a baccalaureate or higher degree.

The petitioner has not met any of the above requirements to classify the offered position as a specialty occupation.

First, the Service does not agree with the petitioner's argument that the proffered position would normally require a bachelor's degree in business administration specializing in marketing and finance. A review of the Department of Labor's Occupational Outlook Handbook, 2002-2003 edition, at page 28, finds no requirement of a baccalaureate or higher degree in a specialized area for employment as a marketing manager. A wide range of educational backgrounds are considered suitable for entry into marketing managerial positions. Some employers prefer a bachelor's or master's degree in business administration with an emphasis on marketing, but many employers prefer those with experience in related occupations plus a broad liberal arts background. In addition, certain personal qualities and participation in in-house training programs are often considered as significant as the beneficiary's specific educational background.

Furthermore, the petitioner has not established that the beneficiary's duties involving seven different Indian languages are of such complexity that a baccalaureate degree in a specific specialty, as distinguished from familiarity with such languages or a less extensive education, is necessary for the successful completion of its duties. Thus, the petitioner has not shown that a bachelor's degree or its equivalent is required for the position being offered to the beneficiary.

Second, the petitioner has not shown that it has, in the past, required the services of individuals with baccalaureate or higher degrees in a specialized area such as business administration specializing in marketing and finance, for the offered position. Third, the petitioner did not present any documentary evidence that businesses similar to the petitioner in their type of operations, number of employees, and amount of gross annual income, require the services of individuals in parallel positions. Finally, the petitioner did not demonstrate that the nature of the beneficiary's proposed duties is so specialized and complex that the knowledge required to perform the duties is usually associated with the attainment of a baccalaureate or higher degree.

The petitioner has failed to establish that any of the four factors enumerated above are present in this proceeding. Accordingly, it is concluded that the petitioner has not demonstrated that the offered position is a specialty occupation within the meaning of the regulations.

Beyond the decision of the director, the record does not contain independent evidence to demonstrate that any of the evaluations of the beneficiary's credentials were performed by an official with authority to grant college-level credit for training and/or experience in the specialty at an accredited college or university which has a program for granting such credit based on an individual's training and/or work experience, as required by 8 C.F.R. 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(D)(1). As this matter will be dismissed on the grounds discussed, this issue need not be examined further.

The burden of proof in these proceedings rests solely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. 1361. The petitioner has not sustained that burden.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
