IN RE:

Applicant:

APPLICATION: Application for Permanent Residence Pursuant to Section 1 of the Cuban Adjustment Act of November 2, 1966 (P.L. 89-732)

ON BEHALF OF APPLICANT: SELF-REPRESENTED

INSTRUCTIONS:

This is the decision of the Administrative Appeals Office in your case. All documents have been returned to the office that originally decided your case. Any further inquiry must be made to that office.

Robert P. Wiemann, Director
Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The application was denied by the Director, Texas Service Center, who certified her decision to the Administrative Appeals Office for review. The director's decision will be affirmed.

The applicant is a native and citizen of Cuba who filed this application for adjustment of status to that of a lawful permanent resident under section 1 of the Cuban Adjustment Act (CAA) of November 2, 1966. The CAA provides, in part:

[T]he status of any alien who is a native or citizen of Cuba and who has been inspected and admitted or paroled into the United States subsequent to January 1, 1959 and has been physically present in the United States for at least one year, may be adjusted by the Attorney General, (now the Secretary of Homeland Security, (Secretary)), in his discretion and under such regulations as he may prescribe, to that of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence if the alien makes an application for such adjustment, and the alien is eligible to receive an immigrant visa and is admissible to the United States for permanent residence.

The director determined that the applicant had not been physically present in the United States for one year prior to the filing of the application. The director, therefore, concluded that the applicant was ineligible for adjustment of status and denied the application. See Director's Decision dated February 20, 2004.

8 C.F.R. § 245.2(a)(2)(ii) provides, in part:

An application for the benefits of section 1 of the Act of November 2, 1966 is not properly filed unless the applicant was inspected and admitted or paroled into the United States subsequent to January 1, 1959. An applicant is ineligible for the benefits of the Act of November 2, 1966 unless he or she has been physically present in the United States for one year.

The record reflects that the applicant was paroled into the United States on December 31, 1999. On October 24, 2000, less than one year after being paroled into the United States, the applicant filed the application in this matter for adjustment of status under section 1 of the Cuban Adjustment Act.

On notice of certification, the applicant was offered an opportunity to submit evidence in opposition to the Director's findings. The applicant submits a letter in which she states that she filed the adjustment application earlier because an Immigration and Naturalization Service (now known as Citizenship and Immigration Service (CIS)) representative announced on television that people should apply three months before their deadline. Additionally the applicant states that she is a hard working woman, she would have to spend over $500.00 in order to file a new application and she should not be penalized because she followed the instructions she heard on the television believed to be from the District office.

The applicant did not present any evidence to show that a CIS representative gave the information she heard on TV or that the applications being referred to on TV were for adjustment of status. Notwithstanding the applicant's arguments the regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 245.2(a)(2)(ii) is very specific and applicable.

The applicant was not physically present in the United States for one year at the time of filing the adjustment application as required. She is, therefore, ineligible for the benefit sought. The director's decision will be affirmed.

This decision, however, is without prejudice to the filing of a new application for adjustment of status, along with supporting documentation and the appropriate fee, now that the applicant has been physically present in the United States for at least one year.

ORDER: The director's decision is affirmed.
