DISCUSSION: The application for permanent resident status under the Legal Immigration Family Equity (LIFE) Act was denied by the Interim District Director, San Francisco, California, and is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be sustained.

The district director denied the application because the applicant had not demonstrated that he had continuously resided in the United States in an unlawful status from before January 1, 1982 through May 4, 1988.

On appeal, counsel asserts that the applicant has submitted sufficient evidence to support his claim of continuous residence in this country since prior to January 1, 1982. Counsel contends that the purported discrepancy regarding the applicant's date of entry into the United States arose from a miscommunication on his wife's part.

An applicant for permanent resident status must establish entry into the United States before January 1, 1982 and continuous residence in the United States in an unlawful status since such date and through May 4, 1988. 8 C.F.R. § 245a.11(b).

An applicant for permanent resident status under section 1104 of the LIFE Act has the burden to establish by a preponderance of the evidence that he or she has resided in the United States for the requisite periods, is admissible to the United States and is otherwise eligible for adjustment of status under this section. 8 C.F.R. § 245a.12(e). When something is to be established by a preponderance of evidence it is sufficient that the proof only establish that it is probably true. See Matter of E-- M--, 20 I. & N. Dec. 77 (Comm. 1989).

The inference to be drawn from the documentation provided shall depend on the extent of the documentation, its credibility and amenability to verification. 8 C.F.R. § 245a.12(e).

Although the regulations provide an illustrative list of contemporaneous documents that an applicant may submit, the list also permits the submission of affidavits and any other relevant document. See 8 C.F.R. § 245a.2(d)(3)(vi)(L).

The record shows that the applicant submitted his Form I-485 LIFE Act application on May 1, 2002. In support of his claim of continuous unlawful residence since before January 1, 1982, the applicant submitted three affidavits of residence, a copy of his son's immunization record, and a postmarked envelope.

In the notice of denial issued on January 17, 2003, the district director questioned the veracity of the applicant's claimed entry into the United States in September 1981 because his wife had testified that they entered this country in February 1981 when she was interviewed in connection with her separate LIFE Act application on March 11, 2003. However, an examination of the applicant's wife's [REDACTED] reveals that she testified that she first entered the United States in 1981 without specifying which month in 1981 she entered the country. In addition, such testimony was provided to describe events that occurred over twenty-one years ago, a significant and considerable period of time. The explanation offered on appeal that any purported discrepancy regarding his or his wife's date of entry into this country is the result of a miscommunication is considered reasonable under these circumstances and appears to have credibly resolved the questions raised by the district director regarding applicant's entry into this country prior to January 1, 1982.

In this instance, the applicant submitted evidence, including affidavits and contemporaneous documents, which tends to corroborate his claim of residence in the United States during the requisite period. The district director has not established that the information in this evidence was inconsistent with the claims made on the application, or that it was false information. As stated on Matter of E--M--, supra, when something is to be established by a preponderance of evidence, the applicant only has to establish that the proof is probably true. That decision also points out that, under the preponderance of evidence standard, an application may be granted even though some doubt remains regarding the evidence. The documents that have been furnished may be accorded substantial evidentiary weight and are sufficient to meet the applicant's burden of proof of residence in the United States for the requisite period.

The documentation provided by the applicant supports by a preponderance of the evidence that the applicant satisfies the statutory and regulatory criteria of entry into the United States before January 1, 1982, as well as continuous unlawful residence in the country during the ensuing time frame of January 1, 1982 through May 4, 1988, as required for eligibility for legalization under section 1104(c)(2)(B)(i) of the LIFE Act.

Accordingly, the applicant's appeal will be sustained. The district director shall continue the adjudication of the application for permanent resident status.

ORDER: The appeal is sustained.
