DISCUSSION: The preference visa petition was denied by the Director, Nebraska Service Center. The matter is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be summarily dismissed.

The petitioner is a Washington limited liability company that seeks to employ the beneficiary in the United States as its general manager. The petitioner seeks to classify the beneficiary as an employment-based immigrant pursuant to section 203(b)(1)(C) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1153(b)(1)(C), as a multinational executive or manager.

On May 4, 2010, the director issued a decision denying the petition based on the common law definition of the term “employee” and the petitioner’s inability to establish that the beneficiary fits that definition.

Although counsel submitted a properly executed Form I-290B indicating that the director’s decision was being appealed, he did not dispute or address the director’s adverse determination. Rather, he indicated that an appellate brief and/or additional information would be submitted within 30 days in support of the appeal. The record shows that since the June 1, 2010 filing date of the Form I-290B, no additional evidence or information has been submitted. Accordingly, the record will be considered complete as currently constituted.

The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 103.3(a)(1)(v) states, in pertinent part:

An officer to whom an appeal is taken shall summarily dismiss any appeal when the party concerned fails to identify specifically any erroneous conclusion of law or statement of fact for the appeal.

In visa petition proceedings, the burden of proving eligibility for the benefit sought remains entirely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. Inasmuch as the petitioner has failed to identify specifically an erroneous conclusion of law or a statement of fact in this proceeding, the petitioner has not sustained that burden. Therefore, the appeal will be summarily dismissed.

ORDER: The appeal is summarily dismissed.
