Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The preference visa petition was denied by the Director, Nebraska Service Center and now is before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The petitioner is a dental lab. It seeks to employ the beneficiary permanently in the United States as a dental lab technician. As required by statute, the petition is accompanied by a Form ETA 750, Application for Alien Employment Certification, approved by the United States Department of Labor (DOL). The director determined that the petitioner had not established that it had the continuing ability to pay the beneficiary the proffered wage beginning on the priority date of the visa petition. The director denied the petition accordingly.

The record shows that the appeal is properly filed, timely and makes a specific allegation of error in law or fact. The procedural history in this case is documented by the record and incorporated into the decision. Further elaboration of the procedural history will be made only as necessary.

As set forth in the director's May 31, 2008 denial, the issue in this case is whether or not the petitioner has the ability to pay the proffered wage as of the priority date and continuing until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence.

Section 203(b)(3)(A)(i) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1153(b)(3)(A)(i), provides for the granting of preference classification to qualified immigrants who are capable, at the time of petitioning for classification under this paragraph, of performing skilled labor (requiring at least two years training or experience), not of a temporary nature, for which qualified workers are not available in the United States.

The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2) states in pertinent part:

Ability of prospective employer to pay wage. Any petition filed by or for an employment-based immigrant which requires an offer of employment must be accompanied by evidence that the prospective United States employer has the ability to pay the proffered wage. The petitioner must demonstrate this ability at the time the priority date is established and continuing until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence. Evidence of this ability shall be either in the form of copies of annual reports, federal tax returns, or audited financial statements.

The petitioner must demonstrate the continuing ability to pay the proffered wage beginning on the priority date, which is the date the Form ETA 750, Application for Alien Employment Certification, was accepted for processing by any office within the employment system of the DOL. See 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(d). The petitioner must also demonstrate that, on the priority date, the beneficiary had the qualifications stated on its Form ETA 750, Application for Alien Employment Certification, as certified by the DOL and submitted with the instant petition. Matter of Wing's Tea House, 16 I&N Dec. 158 (Act. Reg. Comm. 1977).

Here, the Form ETA 750 was accepted on April 9, 2004. The proffered wage as stated on the Form ETA 750 is $23.00 per hour ($47,840 per year). The Form ETA 750 states that the position requires two years of experience in the position offered as a dental lab technician.

The AAO conducts appellate review on a de novo basis. Soltane v. DOJ, 381 F.3d 143, 145 (3d Cir. 2004). The AAO considers all pertinent evidence in the record, including new evidence properly submitted upon appeal.¹

The evidence in the record of proceeding shows that the petitioner is structured as an S corporation. On the petition, the petitioner stated that it was established in 2002 and currently employs two workers and one independent contractor. According to the tax returns in the record, the petitioner's fiscal year is based on the calendar year. On the Form ETA 750B, signed by the beneficiary on April 2, 2004, the beneficiary did not claim to have worked for the petitioner.

The petitioner must establish that its job offer to the beneficiary is a realistic one. Because the filing of an ETA 750 labor certification application establishes a priority date for any immigrant petition later based on the ETA 750, the petitioner must establish that the job offer was realistic as of the priority date and that the offer remained realistic for each year thereafter, until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence. The petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage is an essential element in evaluating whether a job offer is realistic. See Matter of Great Wall, 16 I&N Dec. 142 (Acting Reg. Comm. 1977); see also 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2). In evaluating whether a job offer is realistic, United States Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) requires the petitioner to demonstrate financial resources sufficient to pay the beneficiary's proffered wages, although the totality of the circumstances affecting the petitioning business will be considered if the evidence warrants such consideration. See Matter of Sonogawa, 12 I&N Dec. 612 (Reg. Comm. 1967).

In determining the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage during a given period, USCIS will first examine whether the petitioner employed and paid the beneficiary during that period. If the petitioner establishes by documentary evidence that it employed the beneficiary at a salary equal to or greater than the proffered wage, the evidence will be considered prima facie proof of the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage. The petitioner provided the following Forms 1099:

- The 2007 Form 1099 states that the petitioner paid [REDACTED] Identification number of [REDACTED], $50,588.
- The 2006 Form 1099 states that the petitioner paid [REDACTED] Identification number of [REDACTED], $73,000.
- The 2005 Form 1099 states that the petitioner paid [REDACTED] Identification number of [REDACTED] $72,000.

The evidence submitted does not establish that the wages were paid by the petitioner to the beneficiary individually and solely for the duties set forth in the certified labor certification. The director considered the Forms 1099 and stated that “it is unclear . . . who these wages went to and for what services the wages [were] paid for, therefore this financial documentation cannot be considered credible evidence.” The Form 1099 was issued to the [REDACTED]. Even though the address of the Studio is the same as the beneficiary’s residence, as noted by counsel on appeal, no evidence was submitted with the initial filing or on appeal to show that the beneficiary received the entire payment (as opposed to running a business with other expenses or employees) or that the business or the beneficiary were being paid to perform the work described on the labor certification. Nothing shows the specific amount of wages that the petitioner paid to the beneficiary. The record does not contain the IRS Forms 1040 of the beneficiary that would allow USCIS to determine whether and to what extent the money paid to the beneficiary’s art studio should be credited to the petitioner as wages to perform the duties of the labor certification. Therefore, the petitioner will need to establish its ability to pay the full proffered wage in each year.

If the petitioner does not establish that it employed and paid the beneficiary an amount at least equal to the proffered wage during that period, USCIS will next examine the net income figure reflected on the petitioner’s federal income tax return, without consideration of depreciation or other expenses. River Street Donuts, LLC v. Napolitano, 558 F.3d 111 (1st Cir. 2009); Taco Especial v. Napolitano, 696 F. Supp. 2d 873, 881 (E.D. Mich. 2010). Reliance on federal income tax returns as a basis for determining a petitioner’s ability to pay the proffered wage is well established by judicial precedent. Elatos Restaurant Corp. v. Sava, 632 F. Supp. 1049, 1054 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) (citing Tongatapu Woodcraft Hawaii, Ltd. v. Feldman, 736 F.2d 1305 (9th Cir. 1984)); see also Chi-Feng Chang v. Thornburgh, 719 F. Supp. 532 (N.D. Texas 1989); K.C.P. Food Co., Inc. v. Sava, 623 F. Supp. 1080 (S.D.N.Y. 1985); Ubeda v. Palmer, 539 F. Supp. 647 (N.D. Ill. 1982), aff’d, 703 F.2d 571 (7th Cir. 1983). Reliance on the petitioner’s gross receipts and wage expense is misplaced. Showing that the petitioner’s gross receipts exceeded the proffered wage is insufficient. Similarly, showing that the petitioner paid wages in excess of the proffered wage is insufficient.

In K.C.P. Food Co., Inc. v. Sava, 623 F. Supp. at 1084, the court held that the Immigration and Naturalization Service, now USCIS, had properly relied on the petitioner’s net income figure, as stated on the petitioner’s corporate income tax returns, rather than the petitioner’s gross income. The court specifically rejected the argument that USCIS should have considered income before expenses were paid rather than net income. See Taco Especial, 696 F. Supp. at 881 (gross profits overstate an employer’s ability to pay because it ignores other necessary expenses).

With respect to depreciation, the court in River Street Donuts noted:

The AAO recognized that a depreciation deduction is a systematic allocation of the cost of a tangible long-term asset and does not represent a specific cash expenditure during the year claimed. Furthermore, the AAO indicated that the allocation of the depreciation of a long-term asset could be spread out over the years or concentrated into a few depending on the petitioner’s choice of accounting and depreciation methods. Nonetheless, the AAO explained that depreciation represents an actual cost of doing business, which could represent either the diminution in value of buildings and equipment or the accumulation of funds necessary to replace perishable equipment and buildings. Accordingly, the AAO stressed that even though amounts deducted for depreciation do not represent current use of cash, neither does it represent amounts available to pay wages.

We find that the AAO has a rational explanation for its policy of not adding depreciation back to net income. Namely, that the amount spent on a long term tangible asset is a "real" expense.

River Street Donuts, 558 F.3d at 116. “[USCIS] and judicial precedent support the use of tax returns and the net income figures in determining petitioner’s ability to pay. Plaintiffs’ argument that these figures should be revised by the court by adding back depreciation is without support.” Chi-Feng Chang, 719 F.Supp. at 537 (emphasis added).

The record before the director closed with the receipt by the director of the petitioner’s response to the Request for Evidence on May 1, 2008. As of that date, the most current tax return available was the petitioner’s 2007 federal tax return. The petitioner submitted the following Forms 1120S:

- In 2004, the Form 1120S stated net income² of $23,576.
- In 2005, the Form 1120S stated net income of $14,966.³

² Where an S corporation’s income is exclusively from a trade or business, USCIS considers net income to be the figure for ordinary income, shown on line 21 of page one of the petitioner’s IRS Form 1120S. However, where an S corporation has income, credits, deductions or other adjustments from sources other than a trade or business, they are reported on Schedule K. If the Schedule K has relevant entries for additional income, credits, deductions or other adjustments, net income is found on line 23 (1997-2003), line 17e (2004-2005), or line 18 (2006) of Schedule K. See Instructions for Form 1120S, 2008, at <http://www.irs.gov/pub/irs-pdf/i1120s.pdf> (accessed November 3, 2009) (indicating that Schedule K is a summary schedule of all shareholder’s shares of the corporation’s income, deductions, credits, etc.). Because the petitioner had additional adjustments shown on its Schedule K in 2004, the petitioner’s net income is found on Schedule K for that year alone and on line 21 of its tax returns for all other years.

³ On appeal, the petitioner submitted a copy of its 2005 federal tax return, which was stamped “proposed” throughout. Although this matches the return submitted with the initial filing, the “proposed” stamp calls into question the veracity of the petitioner’s tax return for this year. “It is incumbent on the petitioner to resolve any inconsistencies in the record by independent objective evidence, and attempts to explain or reconcile such inconsistencies, absent competent objective evidence pointing to where the truth, in fact, lies, will not suffice.” Matter of Ho, 19 I&N Dec. 582, 591-592 (BIA 1988). “Doubt cast on any aspect of the petitioner’s proof may, of course, lead to a reevaluation of the reliability and sufficiency of the remaining evidence offered in support of the visa petition.” Id. at 591.

- In 2006, the Form 1120S stated net income of -$40,453.
- In 2007, the Form 1120S stated net income of $32,678.

Therefore, the petitioner demonstrated insufficient net income to pay the proffered wage in any year.

As an alternate means of determining the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage, USCIS may review the petitioner's net current assets. Net current assets are the difference between the petitioner's current assets and current liabilities.⁴ A corporation's year-end current assets are shown on Schedule L, lines 1 through 6. Its year-end current liabilities are shown on lines 16 through 18. If the total of a corporation's end-of-year net current assets and the wages paid to the beneficiary (if any) are equal to or greater than the proffered wage, the petitioner is expected to be able to pay the proffered wage using those net current assets. The petitioner's Forms 1120S stated:

- In 2004, the Form 1120S stated net current assets of $59,986.
- In 2005, the Form 1120S stated net current assets of $47,792.
- In 2006, the Form 1120S stated net current assets of $9,633.
- In 2007, the Form 1120S stated net current assets of $38,916.

Therefore, the petitioner did not demonstrate sufficient net current assets to pay the proffered wage in 2005, 2006, or 2007. The petitioner's net current assets in 2004 are sufficient to demonstrate the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage in that year alone.

Therefore, from the date the Form ETA 750 was accepted for processing by the DOL, the petitioner has not established that it had the continuing ability to pay the beneficiary the proffered wage as of the priority date through an examination of wages paid to the beneficiary, or its net income or net current assets.

The petitioner submitted copies of its monthly bank statements for July, August, and September 2006. Reliance on the balance in the petitioner's bank account is misplaced. First, bank statements are not among the three types of evidence, enumerated in 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2), required to illustrate a petitioner's ability to pay a proffered wage. While this regulation allows additional material "in appropriate cases," the petitioner in this case has not demonstrated why the documentation specified at 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2) is inapplicable or otherwise paints an inaccurate financial picture of the petitioner. Second, bank statements show the amount in an account on a given date, and cannot show the sustainable ability to pay a proffered wage. Third, no evidence was submitted to demonstrate that the funds reported on the petitioner's bank statements somehow reflect additional available funds that were not reflected on its tax return, such as the petitioner's taxable income (income minus deductions) or the cash specified on Schedule L and considered in determining the petitioner's net current assets.

On appeal, counsel stated that the May 4, 2004 memorandum from [REDACTED] states that petitioners may submit relevant financial evidence in lieu of other evidence.⁵ See Interoffice Memo. from William R. Yates, Associate Director of Operations, USCIS, to Service Center Directors and other USCIS officials, Determination of Ability to Pay under 8 CFR 204.5(g)(2), at 2, (May 4, 2004). We first note that this memo was rescinded by a subsequent memorandum dated May 14, 2005 from William Yates. The Yates' Memorandum relied upon by counsel provides guidance to adjudicators to review a record of proceeding and make a positive determination of a petitioning entity's ability to pay if, in the context of the beneficiary's employment, "[t]he record contains credible verifiable evidence that the petitioner is not only employing the beneficiary but also has paid or currently is paying the proffered wage." The Memorandum states that an ability to pay may be found where the petitioner has paid the beneficiary at a rate equal to or exceeding the proffered wage in every year from the priority date onwards, where the petitioner's net income is equal to or exceeds the proffered wage in every year from the priority date onwards, or where the petitioner's net current assets are equal to or exceed the proffered wage in every year from the priority date onwards. The AAO consistently adjudicates appeals in accordance with the Yates Memorandum.

USCIS may consider the overall magnitude of the petitioner's business activities in its determination of the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage. See Matter of Sonogawa, 12 I&N Dec. 612 (BIA 1967). The petitioning entity in Sonogawa had been in business for over 11 years and routinely earned a gross annual income of about $100,000. During the year in which the petition was filed in that case, the petitioner changed business locations and paid rent on both the old and new locations for five months. There were large moving costs and also a period of time when the petitioner was unable to do regular business. The Regional Commissioner determined that the petitioner's prospects for a resumption of successful business operations were well established. The petitioner was a fashion designer whose work had been featured in Time and Look magazines. Her clients included Miss Universe, movie actresses, and society matrons. The petitioner's clients had been included in the lists of the best-dressed California women. The petitioner lectured on fashion design at design and fashion shows throughout the United States and at colleges and universities in California. The Regional Commissioner's determination in Sonogawa was based in part on the petitioner's sound business reputation and outstanding reputation as a couturiere. As in Sonogawa, USCIS may, at its discretion, consider evidence relevant to the petitioner's financial ability that falls outside of a petitioner's net income and net current assets. USCIS may consider such factors as the number of years the petitioner has been doing business, the established historical growth of the petitioner's business, the overall number of employees, the occurrence of any uncharacteristic business expenditures or losses, the petitioner's reputation within its industry, whether the beneficiary is replacing a former employee or an outsourced service, or any other evidence that USCIS deems relevant to the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage.

⁵ The May 4, 2004 memo concerns requests for evidence.

In the instant case, the tax returns demonstrate minimal or negative net income in every year and minimal net current assets. The tax returns also reflect total salaries paid which are less than the beneficiary's proffered wage in 2006 and 2007.⁶ The petitioner's tax returns also reflect that its gross receipts have declined from 2004 to 2007. Counsel stated on appeal that the amounts paid in officer compensation should be added back in to the net income to demonstrate the petitioner's ability to pay.⁷ The petitioner submitted no evidence that its officers were willing or able to forego their compensation. Going on record without supporting documentary evidence is not sufficient for purposes of meeting the burden of proof in these proceedings. Matter of Soffici, 22 I&N Dec. 158, 165 (Comm. 1998) (citing Matter of Treasure Craft of California, 14 I&N Dec. 190 (Reg. Comm. 1972)). The petitioner submitted no evidence as to its reputation or any evidence showing that 2005, 2006, and 2007 had unusual circumstances or were not representative of the petitioner's overall financial picture. Thus, assessing the totality of the circumstances in this individual case, it is concluded that the petitioner has not established that it had the continuing ability to pay the proffered wage.

Additionally, the petitioner's payments to the beneficiary's company as an independent contractor call into question whether the petitioner intends to be the beneficiary's actual employer. The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(c) provides that "[a]ny United States employer desiring and intending to employ an alien may file a petition for classification of the alien under...section 203(b)(3) of the Act." In addition, the Department of Labor (DOL) regulation at 20 C.F.R. § 656.3⁸ states:

Employer means a person, association, firm, or a corporation which currently has a location within the United States to which U.S. workers may be referred for employment, and which proposes to employ a full-time worker at a place within the United States or the authorized representative of such a person, association, firm, or corporation.

⁷ The sole shareholder of a corporation has the authority to allocate expenses of the corporation for various legitimate business purposes, including for the purpose of reducing the corporation's taxable income. Compensation of officers is an expense category explicitly stated on the Form 1120S. The petitioner's tax returns reflect that it has a sole shareholder, however, no evidence was submitted regarding the number of officers, the recipient(s) of any officer compensation, or the ability of any officer(s) to forego that compensation.

In determining whether there is an “employee-employer relationship,” the Supreme Court of the United States has determined that where a federal statute fails to clearly define the term “employee,” courts should conclude “that Congress intended to describe the conventional master-servant relationship as understood by common-law agency doctrine.” Nationwide Mutual Ins. Co. v. Darden, 503 U.S. 318, 322-323 (1992) (hereinafter “Darden”) (quoting Community for Creative Non-Violence v. Reid, 490 U.S. 730 (1989)). That definition is as follows:

In determining whether a hired party is an employee under the general common law of agency, we consider the hiring party's right to control the manner and means by which the product is accomplished. Among the other factors relevant to this inquiry are the skill required; the source of the instrumentalities and tools; the location of the work; the duration of the relationship between the parties; whether the hiring party has the right to assign additional projects to the hired party; the extent of the hired party's discretion over when and how long to work; the method of payment; the hired party's role in hiring and paying assistants; whether the work is part of the regular business of the hiring party; whether the hiring party is in business; the provision of employee benefits; and the tax treatment of the hired party.

Darden, 503 U.S. at 323-324; see also Restatement (Second) of Agency § 220(2) (1958); Clackamas Gastroenterology Associates, P.C. v. Wells, 538 U.S. 440 (2003) (hereinafter “Clackamas”). As the common-law test contains “no shorthand formula or magic phrase that can be applied to find the answer, ... all of the incidents of the relationship must be assessed and weighed with no one factor being decisive.” Darden, 503 U.S. at 324 (quoting NLRB v. United Ins. Co. of America, 390 U.S. 254, 258 (1968)).

In this case, the petitioner has failed to establish that it would actually employ the beneficiary. Under the current relationship between the petitioner and the beneficiary, the beneficiary appears to be employing himself through his art studio. The petitioner submitted no evidence demonstrating that this relationship would change. On the petition, the petitioner claims to have two employees and one independent contractor. In any further proceedings, the petitioner must establish its intention to employ the beneficiary full-time at such time as the beneficiary has become a lawful permanent resident.

In visa petition proceedings, the burden of proving eligibility for the benefit sought remains entirely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. Here, that burden has not been met.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
