

(b)(6)

U.S. Department of Homeland Security
U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services
Administrative Appeals Office (AAO)
20 Massachusetts Ave., N.W., MS 2090
Washington, DC 20529-2090

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration
Services

DATE: APR 02 2013

OFFICE: CALIFORNIA SERVICE CENTER

FILE: [REDACTED]

IN RE:

Petitioner:

Beneficiary: [REDACTED]

PETITION: Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker Pursuant to Section 101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b)

ON BEHALF OF PETITIONER:

SELF-REPRESENTED

INSTRUCTIONS:

Enclosed please find the decision of the Administrative Appeals Office in your case. All of the documents related to this matter have been returned to the office that originally decided your case. Please be advised that any further inquiry that you might have concerning your case must be made to that office.

If you believe the AAO inappropriately applied the law in reaching its decision, or you have additional information that you wish to have considered, you may file a motion to reconsider or a motion to reopen in accordance with the instructions on Form I-290B, Notice of Appeal or Motion, with a fee of $630. The specific requirements for filing such a motion can be found at 8 C.F.R. § 103.5. Do not file any motion directly with the AAO. Please be aware that 8 C.F.R. § 103.5(a)(1)(i) requires any motion to be filed within 30 days of the decision that the motion seeks to reconsider or reopen.

Thank you,

for
Ron Rosenberg
Acting Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The service center director denied the nonimmigrant visa petition, and the matter is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed. The petition will be denied.

On the Form I-129 visa petition, the petitioner describes itself as an information technology services company¹ established in 2006. In order to employ the beneficiary in what it designates as a systems analyst position,² the petitioner seeks to classify him as a nonimmigrant worker in a specialty occupation pursuant to section 101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b).

The director denied the petition on the basis of her determination that the petitioner had failed to demonstrate the existence of an employer-employee relationship between the petitioner and the beneficiary.

The record of proceeding before the AAO contains the following: (1) the Form I-129 and supporting documentation; (2) the director's request for additional evidence (RFE); (3) the petitioner's response to the RFE; (4) the director's letter denying the petition; and (5) the Form I-290B and supporting documentation.

Upon review of the entire record of proceeding, the AAO finds that the petitioner has failed to overcome the director's ground for denying this petition. It has not established that it will have "an employer-employee relationship with respect to employees under this part, as indicated by the fact that it may hire, pay, fire, supervise, or otherwise control the work of any such employee." 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii). Accordingly, the appeal will be dismissed, and the petition will be denied.

Beyond the decision of the director, the AAO finds two additional aspects which, although not addressed in the director's decision, nevertheless also preclude approval of the petition, namely: (1) the petitioner's failure to establish that the proffered position qualifies for classification as a specialty occupation; and (2) its failure to demonstrate that it had secured work for the entire period of requested employment when it filed the petition.³ For these additional two reasons, the petition must also be denied.

Section 101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b) of the Act defines an H-1B nonimmigrant in pertinent part as an alien:

¹ The petitioner provided a North American Industry Classification System (NAICS) Code of 541511, "Custom Computer Programming Services." U.S. Dep't of Commerce, U.S. Census Bureau, North American Industry Classification System, 2012 NAICS Definition, "541511 Custom Computer Programming Services," <http://www.census.gov/cgi-bin/sssd/naics/naicsrch> (accessed Feb. 13, 2013).

² The Labor Condition Application (LCA) submitted by the petitioner in support of the petition was certified for the SOC (O*NET/OES) Code 15-1121, the associated Occupational Classification of "Computer Systems Analysts," and a Level I (entry-level) prevailing wage rate.

³ The AAO conducts appellate review on a de novo basis (See Soltane v. DOJ, 381 F.3d 143, 145 (3d Cir. 2004)), and it was in the course of this review that the AAO identified these additional two grounds for denial.

subject to section 212(j)(2), who is coming temporarily to the United States to perform services . . . in a specialty occupation described in section 214(i)(1) . . ., who meets the requirements for the occupation specified in section 214(i)(2) . . ., and with respect to whom the Secretary of Labor determines and certifies to the [Secretary of Homeland Security] that the intending employer has filed with the Secretary [of Labor] an application under section 212(n)(1)

“United States employer” is defined at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii) as follows:

United States employer means a person, firm, corporation, contractor, or other association, or organization in the United States which:

- (1) Engages a person to work within the United States;
- (2) Has an employer-employee relationship with respect to employees under this part, as indicated by the fact that it may hire, pay, fire, supervise, or otherwise control the work of any such employee; and
- (3) Has an Internal Revenue Service Tax identification number.

The record is not persuasive in establishing that the petitioner or any of its clients will have an employer-employee relationship with the beneficiary.

Although “United States employer” is defined in the regulations at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii), it is noted that the terms “employee” and “employer-employee relationship” are not defined for purposes of the H-1B visa classification. Section 101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b) of the Act indicates that an alien coming to the United States to perform services in a specialty occupation will have an “intending employer” who will file a Labor Condition Application with the Secretary of Labor pursuant to section 212(n)(1) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(n)(1) (2012). The intending employer is described as offering full-time or part-time “employment” to the H-1B “employee.” Subsections 212(n)(1)(A)(i) and 212(n)(2)(C)(vii) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(n)(1)(A)(i), (2)(C)(vii) (2012). Further, the regulations indicate that “United States employers” must file a Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129) in order to classify aliens as H-1B temporary “employees.” 8 C.F.R. §§ 214.2(h)(1), (2)(i)(A). Finally, the definition of “United States employer” indicates in its second prong that the petitioner must have an “employer-employee relationship” with the “employees under this part,” i.e., the H-1B beneficiary, and that this relationship be evidenced by the employer’s ability to “hire, pay, fire, supervise, or otherwise control the work of any such employee.” 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii) (defining the term “United States employer”).

Neither the legacy Immigration and Naturalization Service (“INS”) nor U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (“USCIS”) defined the terms “employee” or “employer-employee relationship” by regulation for purposes of the H-1B visa classification, even though the regulation describes H-1B beneficiaries as being “employees” who must have an “employer-employee relationship” with a “United States employer.” Id. Therefore, for purposes of the H-1B visa classification, these terms are undefined.

The United States Supreme Court has determined that where federal law fails to clearly define the term “employee,” courts should conclude that the term was “intended to describe the conventional master-servant relationship as understood by common-law agency doctrine.” Nationwide Mutual Ins. Co. v. Darden, 503 U.S. 318, 322-323 (1992) (hereinafter “Darden”) (quoting Community for Creative Non-Violence v. Reid, 490 U.S. 730 (1989)). The Supreme Court stated:

“In determining whether a hired party is an employee under the general common law of agency, we consider the hiring party's right to control the manner and means by which the product is accomplished. Among the other factors relevant to this inquiry are the skill required; the source of the instrumentalities and tools; the location of the work; the duration of the relationship between the parties; whether the hiring party has the right to assign additional projects to the hired party; the extent of the hired party's discretion over when and how long to work; the method of payment; the hired party's role in hiring and paying assistants; whether the work is part of the regular business of the hiring party; whether the hiring party is in business; the provision of employee benefits; and the tax treatment of the hired party.”

Darden, 503 U.S. at 323-324 (quoting Community for Creative Non-Violence v. Reid, 490 U.S. at 751-752); see also Clackamas Gastroenterology Associates, P.C. v. Wells, 538 U.S. at 440 (hereinafter “Clackamas”). As the common-law test contains “no shorthand formula or magic phrase that can be applied to find the answer, . . . all of the incidents of the relationship must be assessed and weighed with no one factor being decisive.” Darden, 503 U.S. at 324 (quoting NLRB v. United Ins. Co. of America, 390 U.S. 254, 258 (1968)).

In this matter, the Act does not exhibit a legislative intent to extend the definition of “employer” in section 101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b) of the Act, “employment” in section 212(n)(1)(A)(i) of the Act, or “employee” in section 212(n)(2)(C)(vii) of the Act beyond the traditional common law definitions. See generally 136 Cong. Rec. S17106 (daily ed. Oct. 26, 1990); 136 Cong. Rec. H12358 (daily ed. Oct. 27, 1990). On the contrary, in the context of the H-1B visa classification, the regulations define the term “United States employer” to be even more restrictive than the common law agency definition.⁴

⁴ While the Darden court considered only the definition of “employee” under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (“ERISA”), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(6), and did not address the definition of “employer,” courts have generally refused to extend the common law agency definition to ERISA’s use of employer because “the definition of ‘employer’ in ERISA, unlike the definition of ‘employee,’ clearly indicates legislative intent to extend the definition beyond the traditional common law definition.” See, e.g., Bowers v. Andrew Weir Shipping, Ltd., 810 F. Supp. 522 (S.D.N.Y. 1992), aff’d, 27 F.3d 800 (2nd Cir.), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1000 (1994).

However, in this matter, the Act does not exhibit a legislative intent to extend the definition of “employer” in section 101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b) of the Act, “employment” in section 212(n)(1)(A)(i) of the Act, or “employee” in section 212(n)(2)(C)(vii) of the Act beyond the traditional common law definitions. Instead, in the context of the H-1B visa classification, the term “United States employer” was defined in the regulations to be even more restrictive than the common law agency definition. A federal agency’s interpretation of a statute whose

Specifically, the regulatory definition of “United States employer” requires H-1B employers to have a tax identification number, to engage a person to work within the United States, and to have an “employer-employee relationship” with the H-1B “employee.” 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii). Accordingly, the term “United States employer” not only requires H-1B employers and employees to have an “employer-employee relationship” as understood by common-law agency doctrine, it imposes additional requirements of having a tax identification number and to employ persons in the United States. The lack of an express expansion of the definition regarding the terms “employee” or “employer-employee relationship” combined with the agency’s otherwise generally circular definition of United States employer in 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii) indicates that the regulations do not intend to extend the definition beyond “the traditional common law definition” or, more importantly, that construing these terms in this manner would thwart congressional design or lead to absurd results. Cf. Darden, 503 U.S. at 318-319.⁵

Therefore, in the absence of an express congressional intent to impose broader definitions, both the “conventional master-servant relationship as understood by common-law agency doctrine” and the Darden construction test apply to the terms “employee” and “employer-employee relationship” as used administration is entrusted to it is to be accepted unless Congress has spoken directly on the issue. See Chevron, U.S.A., Inc. v. Natural Resources Defense Council, Inc., 467 U.S. 837, 844-845 (1984).

The regulatory definition of “United States employer” requires H-1B employers to have a tax identification number, to employ persons in the United States, and to have an “employer-employee relationship” with the H-1B “employee.” 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii). Accordingly, the term “United States employer” not only requires H-1B employers and employees to have an “employer-employee relationship” as understood by common-law agency doctrine, it imposes additional requirements of having a tax identification number and to employ persons in the United States. The lack of an express expansion of the definition regarding the terms “employee,” “employed,” “employment” or “employer-employee relationship” indicates that the regulations do not intend to extend the definition beyond “the traditional common law definition.” Therefore, in the absence of an intent to impose broader definitions by either Congress or USCIS, the “conventional master-servant relationship as understood by common-law agency doctrine,” and the Darden construction test, apply to the terms “employee,” “employer-employee relationship,” “employed,” and “employment” as used in section 101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b) of the Act, section 212(n) of the Act, and 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h). That being said, there are instances in the Act where Congress may have intended a broader application of the term “employer” than what is encompassed in the conventional master-servant relationship. See, e.g., section 214(c)(2)(F) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1184(c)(2)(F) (referring to “unaffiliated employers” supervising and controlling L-1B intracompany transferees having specialized knowledge); section 274A of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1324a (referring to the employment of unauthorized aliens).

⁵ To the extent the regulations are ambiguous with regard to the terms “employee” or “employer-employee relationship,” the agency’s interpretation of these terms should be found to be controlling unless “plainly erroneous or inconsistent with the regulation.” Auer v. Robbins, 519 U.S. 452, 461 (1997) (citing Robertson v. Methow Valley Citizens Council, 490 U.S. 332, 359, 109 S.Ct. 1835, 1850, 104 L.Ed.2d 351 (1989) (quoting Bowles v. Seminole Rock & Sand Co., 325 U.S. 410, 414, 65 S.Ct. 1215, 1217, 89 L.Ed. 1700 (1945))).

in section 101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b) of the Act, section 212(n) of the Act, and 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h).⁶

Therefore, in considering whether or not one will be an “employee” in an “employer-employee relationship” with a “United States employer” for purposes of H-1B nonimmigrant petitions, USCIS must focus on the common-law touchstone of “control.” Clackamas, 538 U.S. at 450; see also 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii) (defining a “United States employer” as one who “has an employer-employee relationship with respect to employees under this part, as indicated by the fact that it may hire, pay, fire, supervise, or otherwise control the work of any such employee” (emphasis added)).

The factors indicating that a worker is or will be an “employee” of an “employer” are clearly delineated in both the Darden and Clackamas decisions. Darden, 503 U.S. at 323-324; Clackamas, 538 U.S. at 445; see also Restatement (Second) of Agency § 220(2) (1958). Such indicia of control include when, where, and how a worker performs the job; the continuity of the worker’s relationship with the employer; the tax treatment of the worker; the provision of employee benefits; and whether the work performed by the worker is part of the employer’s regular business. See Clackamas, 538 U.S. at 445; see also New Compliance Manual, Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, § 2-III(A)(1) (adopting a materially identical test and indicating that said test was based on the Darden decision); see also Defensor v. Meissner, 201 F.3d 384, 388 (5th Cir. 2000) (determining that hospitals, as the recipients of beneficiaries’ services, are the “true employers” of H-1B nurses under 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h), even though a medical contract service agency is the actual petitioner, because the hospitals ultimately hire, pay, fire, supervise, or otherwise control the work of the beneficiaries).

It is important to note, however, that the factors listed in Darden and Clackamas are not exhaustive and must be evaluated on a case-by-case basis. Other aspects of the relationship between the parties relevant to control may affect the determination of whether an employer-employee relationship exists. Furthermore, not all or even a majority of the listed criteria need be met; however, the fact finder must weigh and compare a combination of the factors in analyzing the facts of each individual case. The determination must be based on all of the circumstances in the relationship between the parties, regardless of whether the parties refer to it as an employee or as an independent contractor relationship. See Clackamas, 538 U.S. at 448-449; New Compliance Manual at § 2-III(A)(1).

Furthermore, when examining the factors relevant to determining control, USCIS must assess and weigh each actual factor itself as it exists or will exist and not the claimed employer’s right to influence or change that factor, unless specifically provided for by the common-law test. See Darden, 503 U.S. at 323-324. For example, while the assignment of additional projects is dependent on who has the right to assign them, it is the actual source of the instrumentalities and tools that must be examined, not who has the right to provide the tools required to complete an assigned project. See id. at 323.

Lastly, the “mere existence of a document styled ‘employment agreement’” shall not lead inexorably to the conclusion that the worker is an employee. Clackamas, 538 U.S. at 450. “Rather, . . . the answer to whether [an individual] is an employee depends on ‘all of the incidents of the relationship . . . with no one factor being decisive.’” Id. at 451 (quoting Darden, 503 U.S. at 324).

⁶ That said, there are instances in the Act where Congress may have intended a broader application of the term “employer” than what is encompassed in the conventional master-servant relationship. See, e.g., section 214(c)(2)(F) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1184(c)(2)(F) (referring to “unaffiliated employers” supervising and controlling L-1B intracompany transferees having specialized knowledge); section 274A of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1324a (referring to the employment of unauthorized aliens).

Page 7

Applying the Darden and Clackamas tests to this matter, the AAO finds that the petitioner has not established that it will be a “United States employer” having an “employer-employee relationship” with the beneficiary as an H-1B temporary “employee.”

The petitioner’s April 2, 2012 letter, which the beneficiary also signed, called for the beneficiary to be placed “at a Company client site,” which would be at a “location designated by the Company.” A document entitled “Addendum to Employment Contract Dated April 27, 2012,”⁷ which was also signed by both the petitioner and the beneficiary, called for the beneficiary to work as a systems analyst for both the petitioner and its end-clients. On the Form I-129, the petitioner stated that the beneficiary would perform his duties at [REDACTED] in Jackson, Michigan.⁸

When the petitioner filed the petition, it submitted a Statement of Work (“SOW”) that it executed with [REDACTED] on March 14, 2012, which called for the beneficiary to provide his services to [REDACTED]’s client, [REDACTED] and [REDACTED]’s client, [REDACTED]”), for a period of 12 months, beginning on March 26, 2012.¹⁰ The petitioner also submitted a Master Service Agreement (“MSA”) executed between the petitioner and [REDACTED] on March 14, 2012, which called for the petitioner to provide personnel to [REDACTED]’s clients and those clients’ subsidiaries, affiliates, successors, or assigns, as well as a Task Order issued pursuant to the MSA. This Task Order called for the beneficiary to provide his service’s to [REDACTED] and its client, [REDACTED], for a period of 12 months, beginning on March 26, 2012.

When it filed the petition the petitioner also submitted a May 2, 2012 letter from [REDACTED], which clarified the relationship between that company and [REDACTED]. In its letter [REDACTED] stated that the beneficiary would be an employee of [REDACTED], and that [REDACTED] would be

⁷ It is noted that the record of proceeding does not contain a copy of the referenced April 27, 2012 employment contract.

⁸ The petitioner’s office is located in Schaumburg, Illinois.

⁹ The AAO notes that, according to the website of the Illinois Secretary of State, the petitioner’s president is also [REDACTED]’s secretary. See State of Illinois, Office of the Secretary of State, Business Services, “Corporation/LLC Search/Certificate of Good Standing,” http://www.cyberdriveillinois.com/departments/business_services/corp.html (last accessed Feb. 13, 2013).

¹⁰ The SOW executed between the petitioner and [REDACTED] referenced an “Agreement” between the two companies that had been executed on March 14, 2012, and stated further that the SOW “shall be incorporated” into that Agreement. However, the record of proceeding does not contain a copy of this Agreement.

responsible for the beneficiary's salary, benefits, and travel expenses.¹¹ [REDACTED] also provided the name of an Account Manager at [REDACTED] who would be, in the words of [REDACTED]; [REDACTED] "responsible for directing all of [the beneficiary's] activities."

The director found this evidence insufficient to demonstrate the requisite employer-employee relationship between the petitioner and the beneficiary, and, on May 18, 2012 she issued an RFE requesting additional evidence from the petitioner to make such a demonstration.

In its May 30, 2012 response to the RFE, the petitioner claimed that it would have the right to control the beneficiary's work; that the petitioner would assign the beneficiary's work on a daily and weekly basis, and evaluate his performance; stated that it would deduct all employee taxes from the beneficiary's paycheck and described his benefits package; and submitted, inter alia, a copy of the beneficiary's identification badge issued by [REDACTED] an affidavit from a co-worker regarding his work for [REDACTED], and copies of weekly status reports and time sheets. The petitioner also resubmitted many of the documents it submitted when it filed the petition.

The director was not persuaded, and she denied the petition on June 19, 2012.

On appeal, the petitioner claims that although [REDACTED] is the end client and user of the beneficiary's services, neither that company nor [REDACTED] or [REDACTED] "have any supervisory control over the beneficiary's project work and daily activities." According to the petitioner, the beneficiary would only report to the petitioner's president. However, both of these statements are contradicted directly by the aforementioned May 2, 2012 letter from [REDACTED]. As noted above, in that letter [REDACTED] stated: (1) that [REDACTED] would be the beneficiary's employee, and that [REDACTED] would assume responsibility for the beneficiary's salary, benefits, and travel expenses; and (2) that [REDACTED]'s Account Manager would assume responsibility for directing all of the beneficiary's activities while working at [REDACTED]. It is incumbent upon the petitioner to resolve any inconsistencies in the record by independent objective evidence. Any attempt to explain or reconcile such inconsistencies will not suffice unless the petitioner submits competent objective evidence pointing to where the truth lies. Matter of Ho, 19 I&N Dec. 582, 591-92 (BIA 1988).

Furthermore, apart from this direct and uncontested evidence that the petitioner would not engage the beneficiary in an employer-employee relationship, the record simply lacks adequate evidence from [REDACTED] regarding the scope and nature of the services that the beneficiary would perform for that entity to establish that such a relationship in fact exists with the petitioner. Beyond the fact that the single letter from [REDACTED] contained in the record of proceeding directly contradicts the petitioner's claim to engage in the requisite employer-employee relationship with the beneficiary, it is noted that the representative from [REDACTED] who prepared this letter did not provide any probative information detailing the nature and scope of the beneficiary's employment.

¹¹ [REDACTED] referenced a Service Agreement it executed with [REDACTED], which became effective on September 29, 2011 in its May 2, 2012 letter. The record of proceeding does not contain a copy of this Agreement.

While social security contributions, worker's compensation contributions, unemployment insurance contributions, federal and state income tax withholdings, and other benefits are still relevant factors in determining who will control an alien beneficiary, other incidents of the relationship, e.g., who will oversee and direct the work of the beneficiary, who will provide the instrumentalities and tools, where will the work be located, and who has the right or ability to affect the projects to which the alien beneficiary is assigned, must also be assessed and weighed in order to make a determination as to who will be the beneficiary's employer. Without full disclosure of all relevant factors, the AAO is unable to find that the requisite employer-employee relationship will exist between the petitioner and the beneficiary.

The evidence, therefore, is insufficient to establish that the petitioner qualifies as a United States employer, as defined by 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii). Merely claiming in its letters that the petitioner exercises complete control over the beneficiary, without evidence supporting the claim, does not establish eligibility in this matter, particularly in a situation, such as exists here, where the petitioner would be providing the beneficiary to one of its clients for that client's assignment to one of its clients for work to be determined by that third entity, which is a client of the petitioner's client. Going on record without supporting documentary evidence is not sufficient for purposes of meeting the burden of proof in these proceedings. Matter of Soffici, 22 I&N Dec. 158, 165 (Comm'r 1998) (citing Matter of Treasure Craft of California, 14 I&N Dec. 190 (Reg. Comm'r 1972)).

Based on the tests outlined above, the petitioner has not established that it or any of its clients will be a "United States employer" having an "employer-employee relationship" with the beneficiary as an H-1B temporary "employee." 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii). Accordingly, the appeal will be dismissed and the petition will be denied on this basis.

Beyond the decision of the director, the petition must also be denied due to the petitioner's failure to establish that the proffered position qualifies for classification as a specialty occupation. As recognized in Defensor v. Meissner, it is necessary for the end-client to provide sufficient information regarding the proposed job duties to be performed at its location in order to properly ascertain the minimum educational requirements necessary to perform those duties. See Defensor v. Meissner, 201 F.3d at 387-388. In other words, as the nurses in that case would provide services to the end-client hospitals and not to the petitioning staffing company, the petitioner-provided job duties and alleged requirements to perform those duties were irrelevant to a specialty occupation determination. See id.

Here, the record of proceeding in this case is similarly devoid of sufficient information from the end-client, [REDACTED] regarding the job duties to be performed by the beneficiary for it. The petitioner's failure to establish the substantive nature of the work to be performed by the beneficiary, therefore, precludes a finding that the proffered position satisfies any criterion at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A), because it is the substantive nature of that work that determines (1) the normal minimum educational requirement for the particular position, which is the focus of criterion 1; (2) industry positions which are parallel to the proffered position and thus appropriate for review for a common degree requirement, under the first alternate prong of criterion 2; (3) the level of complexity or uniqueness of the proffered position, which is the focus of the second alternate prong of criterion 2;

(4) the factual justification for a petitioner normally requiring a degree or its equivalent, when that is an issue under criterion 3; and (5) the degree of specialization and complexity of the specific duties, which is the focus of criterion 4.¹²

Accordingly, as the petitioner has not established that it has satisfied any of the criteria at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A), it cannot be found that the proffered position qualifies as a specialty

¹² Furthermore, even if the proffered position had been established as belonging to the Computer Systems Analysts occupational classification, a review of the U.S. Department of Labor's (DOL's) Occupational Outlook Handbook (the Handbook) indicates that a particular position's inclusion in that occupational category is not in itself sufficient to qualify that position as a specialty occupation, in that the Handbook does not report that a U.S. bachelor's or higher degree, or its equivalent, in a specific specialty is normally the minimum requirement for entry into that occupational category. See U.S. Dep't of Labor, Bureau of Labor Statistics, Occupational Outlook Handbook, 2012-13 ed., "Computer Systems Analysts," <http://www.bls.gov/oooh/computer-and-information-technology/computer-systems-analysts.htm#tab-2> (accessed Feb. 13, 2013).

It is noted further that the petitioner submitted a certified Labor Condition Application that was certified for a wage-level that is only appropriate for a comparatively low, entry-level position relative to others within its occupation, which signifies that the beneficiary is only expected to possess a basic understanding of the occupation.

The Prevailing Wage Determination Policy Guidance issued by the U.S. Department of Labor (DOL) states the following with regard to Level I wage rates:

Level 1 (entry) wage rates are assigned to job offers for beginning level employees who have only a basic understanding of the occupation. These employees perform routine tasks that require limited, if any, exercise of judgment. The tasks provide experience and familiarization with the employer's methods, practices, and programs. The employees may perform higher level work for training and developmental purposes. These employees work under close supervision and receive specific instructions on required tasks and results expected. Their work is closely monitored and reviewed for accuracy. Statements that the job offer is for a research fellow, a worker in training, or an internship are indicators that a Level I wage should be considered [emphasis in original].

See U.S. Dept. of Labor, Employment & Training Administration, Office of Foreign Labor Certification, http://www.foreignlaborcert.doleta.gov/pdf/Policy_Nonag_Progs.pdf (accessed Feb. 11, 2013)

The proposed duties' level of complexity, uniqueness, and specialization, as well as the level of independent judgment and occupational understanding required to perform them, are questionable, as the petitioner submitted an LCA certified for a Level I, entry-level position. The LCA's wage-level indicates that the proffered position is actually a low-level, entry position relative to others within the occupation. In accordance with the relevant DOL explanatory information on wage levels, this wage rate indicates that the beneficiary is only required to possess a basic understanding of the occupation; that he will be expected to perform routine tasks requiring limited, if any, exercise of judgment; that he will be closely supervised and his work closely monitored and reviewed for accuracy; and that he will receive specific instructions on required tasks and expected results. These factors undermine further any claim that the proffered position qualifies for classification as a specialty occupation.

occupation. Accordingly, the petition must be denied on this basis also. Thus, even if it were determined that the petitioner had overcome the director's grounds for denying this petition (which it has not), the petition could still not be approved.

Finally, the AAO will discuss its supplemental finding regarding the petitioner's failure to establish that at the time of this petition's filing, it had secured work for the entire period of requested employment, that is, October 1, 2012 to September 30, 2015. As noted previously, both the SOW and Task Order discussed above cover only 12 months of employment, and both documents contain a start date of March 26, 2012. Although both the SOW and Task Order referenced "possible" extensions, neither document constitutes evidence that, by the time of the petition's filing, the petitioner had secured definite, non-speculative employment with the beneficiary covering the entire three-year period of employment requested in the petition. USCIS regulations affirmatively require a petitioner to establish eligibility for the benefit it is seeking at the time the petition is filed. See 8 C.F.R. 103.2(b)(12). A visa petition may not be approved at a future date after the petitioner or beneficiary becomes eligible under a new set of facts. Matter of Michelin Tire Corp., 17 I&N Dec. 248 (Reg. Comm. 1978). Accordingly, the petition must be denied also for any period for which asserted employment had not been established as of the time of the petition's filing. Thus, even if it were found that the petitioner would be the beneficiary's United States employer as that term is defined at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii), the petitioner has not demonstrated that it would maintain such an employer-employee relationship for the duration of the period requested.¹³

An application or petition that fails to comply with the technical requirements of the law may be denied by the AAO even if the service center does not identify all of the grounds for denial in the initial decision. See Spencer Enterprises, Inc. v. United States, 229 F. Supp. 2d 1025, 1043

¹³ The agency made clear long ago that speculative employment is not permitted in the H-1B program. A 1998 proposed rule documented this position as follows:

Historically, the Service has not granted H-1B classification on the basis of speculative, or undetermined, prospective employment. The H-1B classification is not intended as a vehicle for an alien to engage in a job search within the United States, or for employers to bring in temporary foreign workers to meet possible workforce needs arising from potential business expansions or the expectation of potential new customers or contracts. To determine whether an alien is properly classifiable as an H-1B nonimmigrant under the statute, the Service must first examine the duties of the position to be occupied to ascertain whether the duties of the position require the attainment of a specific bachelor's degree. See section 214(i) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the "Act"). The Service must then determine whether the alien has the appropriate degree for the occupation. In the case of speculative employment, the Service is unable to perform either part of this two-prong analysis and, therefore, is unable to adjudicate properly a request for H-1B classification. Moreover, there is no assurance that the alien will engage in a specialty occupation upon arrival in this country.

63 Fed. Reg. 30419, 30419 - 30420 (June 4, 1998). While a petitioner is certainly permitted to change its intent with regard to non-speculative employment, e.g., a change in duties or job location, it must nonetheless document such a material change in intent through an amended or new petition in accordance with 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(2)(i)(E).

(E.D. Cal. 2001), aff'd, 345 F.3d 683 (9th Cir. 2003); see also Soltane v. DOJ, 381 F.3d 143, 145 (3d Cir. 2004) (noting that the AAO conducts appellate review on a de novo basis).

Moreover, when the AAO denies a petition on multiple alternative grounds, a plaintiff can succeed on a challenge only if it shows that the AAO abused its discretion with respect to all of the AAO's enumerated grounds. See Spencer Enterprises, Inc. v. United States, 229 F. Supp. 2d at 1043, aff'd, 345 F.3d 683.

The petition will be denied and the appeal dismissed for the above stated reasons, with each considered as an independent and alternative basis for the decision. In visa petition proceedings, the burden of proving eligibility for the benefit sought remains entirely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. Here, that burden has not been met.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed. The petition is denied.