DISCUSSION: The waiver application was denied by the Field Office Director, Miami, Florida and is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be sustained.

The applicant is a native of Jamaica and a citizen of Jamaica and Canada who was found to be inadmissible to the United States pursuant to section 212(a)(2)(A)(i)(II) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(2)(A)(i)(I), for having been convicted of a controlled substance violation. The applicant is married to a U.S. citizen and seeks a waiver of inadmissibility pursuant to section 212(h) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(h), in order to remain in the United States.

In a decision dated February 1, 2012, the field office director found that the applicant failed to show that his qualifying relative would suffer extreme hardship as a result of his inadmissibility. The application was denied accordingly.

On appeal, counsel asserts that the field office director abused his discretion when he failed to properly consider or evaluate the hardship evidence submitted by the applicant. She also states that the positive factors in the applicant's case outweigh negative.

Section 212(a)(2)(A) of the Act states, in pertinent part:

(i) [A]ny alien convicted of, or who admits having committed, or who admits committing acts which constitute the essential elements of –

(II) A violation (or a conspiracy or attempt to violate) any law or regulation of a State, the United States, or a foreign country relating to a controlled substance (as defined in section 102 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802)), is inadmissible.

Section 212(h) of the Act provides, in pertinent part, that:

(h) The Attorney General [now, Secretary, Homeland Security, "Secretary"] may, in his discretion, waive the application of subparagraphs (A)(i)(I) . . . of subsection (a)(2) and of such subsection insofar as it relates to a single offense of simple possession of 30 grams or less of marijuana

The record indicates that on or about July 13, 1991 the applicant was arrested. On March 5, 1992, in connection with this arrest, the applicant pled guilty to purchasing cannabis in violation of Florida Statutes §893.13. On September 11, 2007, the applicant's guilty plea was vacated pursuant to Florida Rules of Criminal Procedure §3.170(k) and §3172(c)(8).

Florida Rules of Criminal Procedure §3.170(k) states:

No plea of guilty or nolo contendere shall be accepted by a court without the court first determining, in open court, with means of recording the proceedings stenographically or mechanically, that the circumstances surrounding the plea reflect a full understanding of the significance of the plea and its voluntariness and that there is a factual basis for the plea of guilty. A complete record of the proceedings at which a defendant pleads shall be kept by the court.

Florida Rules of Criminal Procedure §3172(c)(8) states:

(c) Determination of Voluntariness. Except when a defendant is not present for a plea, pursuant to the provisions of rule 3.180(d), the trial judge should, when determining voluntariness, place the defendant under oath and shall address the defendant personally and shall determine that he or she understands:

(8) that if he or she pleads guilty or nolo contendere, if he or she is not a United States citizen, the plea may subject him or her to deportation pursuant to the laws and regulations governing the United States Immigration and Naturalization Service. It shall not be necessary for the trial judge to inquire as to whether the defendant is a United States citizen, as this admonition shall be given to all defendants in all cases...

On September 11, 2007, as a result of his vacated plea, the applicant entered a plea of no contest to possession of cannabis, less than 20 grams, under Florida Statutes §893.13(6)(b). Accordingly, he is inadmissible under section 212(a)(2)(A)(i)(II) of the Act for having been convicted of a controlled substance violation. However, because the applicant has only been convicted of a single offense of simple possession of less than 30 grams of marijuana, he is eligible to apply for a section 212(h) waiver of his inadmissibility.

Section 212(h) of the Act provides, in pertinent part:

The Attorney General [Secretary of Homeland Security] may, in his discretion, waive the application of subparagraph (A)(i)(I) . . . of subsection (a)(2) and of such subsection insofar as it relates to a single offense of simple possession of 30 grams or less of marijuana

(1) (A) in the case of any immigrant it is established to the satisfaction of the Attorney General [Secretary] that --

(i) . . . the activities for which the alien is inadmissible occurred more than 15 years before the date of the alien's application for a visa, admission, or adjustment of status,

(ii) the admission to the United States of such alien would not be contrary to the national welfare, safety, or security of the United States, and

(iii) the alien has been rehabilitated; or

(B) in the case of an immigrant who is the spouse, parent, son, or daughter of a citizen of the United States or an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence if it is established to the satisfaction of the Attorney General [Secretary] that the alien's denial of admission would result in extreme hardship to the United States citizen or lawfully resident spouse, parent, son, or daughter of such alien . . . ; and

(2) the Attorney General [Secretary], in his discretion, and pursuant to such terms, conditions and procedures as he may by regulations prescribe, has consented to the alien's applying or reapplying for a visa, for admission to the United States, or adjustment of status.

Section 212(h)(1)(A) of the Act provides that the Secretary may, in her discretion, waive the application of subparagraph (A)(i)(I) of subsection (a)(2) if the activities for which the applicant is inadmissible occurred more than 15 years before the date of the applicant's application for a visa, admission, or adjustment of status. The AAO notes that an application for admission or adjustment of status is considered a "continuing" application and "admissibility is determined on the basis of the facts and the law at the time the application is finally considered." Matter of Alarcon, 20 I.&N. Dec. 557, 562 (BIA 1992) (citations omitted).

The activities for which the applicant was found inadmissible occurred in 1991. Since the activities for which the applicant was found inadmissible occurred or more than 15 years ago, the inadmissibility can be waived under section 212(h)(1)(A) of the Act. Section 212(h)(1)(A) of the Act requires that the applicant's admission to the United States not be contrary to the national welfare, safety, or security of the United States, and that he has been rehabilitated. The applicant has submitted documentation to demonstrate that he satisfies these requirements.

The record indicates that the applicant has had no criminal record since the events occurring in 1991, is an active member of his community church, and has owned an auto body and industrial products business since 2003.

The AAO additionally finds that the applicant merits a waiver of inadmissibility as a matter of discretion. In discretionary matters, the alien bears the burden of proving eligibility in terms of equities in the United States which are not outweighed by adverse factors. See Matter of T-S-Y-, 7 I&N Dec. 582 (BIA 1957).

In evaluating whether section 212(h)(1)(B) relief is warranted in the exercise of discretion, the factors adverse to the alien include the nature and underlying circumstances of the exclusion ground at issue, the presence of additional significant violations of this country's immigration laws, the existence of a criminal record, and if so, its nature and seriousness, and the presence of other evidence indicative of the alien's bad character or undesirability as a permanent resident of this country. The favorable considerations include family ties in the United States, residence of long duration in this country (particularly where alien began residency at a young age), evidence of hardship to the alien and his family if he is excluded and deported, service in this country's Armed Forces, a history of stable employment, the existence of property or business ties, evidence of value or service in the community, evidence of genuine rehabilitation if a criminal record exists, and other evidence attesting to the alien's good character (e.g., affidavits from family, friends and responsible community representatives).

See Matter of Mendez-Moralez, 21 I&N Dec. 296, 301 (BIA 1996). The AAO must then, "[B]alance the adverse factors evidencing an alien's undesirability as a permanent resident with the social and humane considerations presented on the alien's behalf to determine whether the grant of relief in the exercise of discretion appears to be in the best interests of the country. “ Id. at 300. (Citations omitted).

The adverse factor in the present case is the applicant’s conviction for possession of marijuana.

The favorable factors in the present case are the applicant’s family ties to the United States, including a spouse and sibling; the lack of a criminal record or offense since 1991; the applicant’s community ties to the United States; the applicant’s economic ties to the United States; and, as evidenced through statements from the applicant’s spouse, his attributes as a supportive and loving husband.

The AAO finds that the crime committed by the applicant is serious in nature and cannot be condoned. Nevertheless, the AAO finds that taken together, the favorable factors in the present case outweigh the adverse factors, such that a favorable exercise of discretion is warranted. Accordingly, the appeal will be sustained.

In proceedings for an application for waiver of grounds of inadmissibility under section 212(h) of the Act, the burden of establishing that the application merits approval remains entirely with the applicant. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. In this case, the applicant has met his burden that he merits approval of his application.

ORDER: The appeal is sustained.
