

(b)(6)

U.S. Department of Homeland Security
U. S. Citizenship and Immigration Services
Administrative Appeals Office (AAO)
20 Massachusetts Ave., N.W., MS 2090
Washington, DC 20529-2090
U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services

DATE: DEC 16 2013

Office: NEWARK

File:

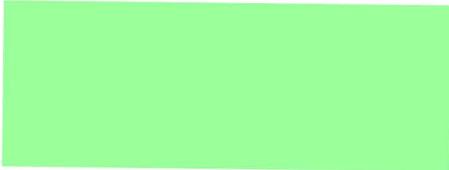

IN RE:

Applicant:

APPLICATIONS:

Application for Waiver of Grounds of Inadmissibility under sections 212(i) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1182(i)

ON BEHALF OF APPLICANT:

INSTRUCTIONS:

Enclosed please find the decision of the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) in your case.

This is a non-precedent decision. The AAO does not announce new constructions of law nor establish agency policy through non-precedent decisions. If you believe the AAO incorrectly applied current law or policy to your case or if you seek to present new facts for consideration, you may file a motion to reconsider or a motion to reopen, respectively. Any motion must be filed on a Notice of Appeal or Motion (Form I-290B) within 33 days of the date of this decision. Please review the Form I-290B instructions at <http://www.uscis.gov/forms> for the latest information on fee, filing location, and other requirements. See also 8 C.F.R. § 103.5. Do not file a motion directly with the AAO.

Thank you,

Ron Rosenberg
Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

(b)(6)

DISCUSSION: The Field Office Director, Newark, New Jersey, denied the waiver application, and it is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The applicant is a native and a citizen of [REDACTED] who was found to be inadmissible to the United States pursuant to section 212(a)(6)(C)(i) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(6)(C)(i), for procuring or attempting to procure admission to the United States by fraud or misrepresentation. He seeks a waiver of inadmissibility in order to remain in the United States as the beneficiary of the approved Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130) filed by his wife.

The field office director concluded the applicant had failed to establish that extreme hardship would be imposed on a qualifying relative and, accordingly, denied the Application for Waiver of Grounds of Inadmissibility (Form I-601). Decision of Field Office Director, May 30, 2013.

On appeal, counsel for the applicant contends that USCIS erred in finding the applicant failed to provide sufficient evidence his wife would experience extreme hardship if he is unable to reside in the United States. The record contains documentation including, but not limited to: hardship and supportive statements; financial information, such as tax returns, bank statements, and a phone bill; marriage and divorce certificates; and prior immigrant petitions and benefits applications. The entire record was reviewed and considered in rendering this decision.

Section 212(a)(6)(C)(i) of the Act provides, in pertinent part:

Any alien who, by fraud or willfully misrepresenting a material fact, seeks to procure (or has sought to procure or has procured) a visa, other documentation, or admission into the United States or other benefit provided under this Act is inadmissible.

Section 212(i)(1) of the Act provides:

The [Secretary] may, in the discretion of the [Secretary], waive the application of clause (i) of subsection (a)(6)(C) in the case of an alien who is the spouse, son, or daughter of a United States citizen or of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence, if it is established to the satisfaction of the [Secretary] that the refusal of admission to the United States of such immigrant alien would result in extreme hardship to the citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of such an alien [...].

The record reflects that the applicant tried to enter the United States on August 29, 1995 using a passport and green card belonging to another person, withdrew his application for admission, and departed back to [REDACTED] the following day. He claims to have subsequently entered the country in April 1996, and immigration records confirm he was admitted in B2 status during 1996 and has not departed since that time.

A waiver of inadmissibility under section 212(i) of the Act is dependent on a showing that the bar to admission imposes extreme hardship on a qualifying relative, which includes the U.S. citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of the applicant. Hardship to the applicant can be considered only insofar as it results in hardship to a qualifying relative. The applicant's U.S. citizen spouse is the only qualifying relative in this case. If extreme hardship to a qualifying relative is established, the applicant is statutorily eligible for a waiver, and USCIS then assesses whether a favorable exercise of discretion is warranted. See Matter of Mendez-Morales, 21 I&N Dec. 296, 301 (BIA 1996).

(b)(6)

Extreme hardship is “not a definable term of fixed and inflexible content or meaning,” but “necessarily depends upon the facts and circumstances peculiar to each case.” Matter of Hwang, 10 I&N Dec. 448, 451 (BIA 1964). In Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, the Board provided a list of factors it deemed relevant in determining whether an applicant has established extreme hardship to a qualifying relative. 22 I&N Dec. 560, 565 (BIA 1999). Factors include the presence of a lawful permanent resident or United States citizen spouse or parent in this country; the qualifying relative’s family ties outside the United States; the conditions in the country or countries to which the qualifying relative would relocate and the extent of the qualifying relative’s ties in such countries; the financial impact of departure from this country; and significant conditions of health, particularly when tied to an unavailability of suitable medical care in the country to which the qualifying relative would relocate; the Board added that not all of these factors need be analyzed in any given case and emphasized that the list is not exclusive. Id. at 566.

The Board has also held that the common or typical results of removal and inadmissibility do not constitute extreme hardship, and has listed certain individual hardship factors considered common rather than extreme. These factors include economic disadvantage, loss of current employment, inability to maintain one’s present standard of living, inability to pursue a chosen profession, separation from family members, severing community ties, cultural readjustment after living in the United States for many years, cultural adjustment of qualifying relatives who have never lived outside the United States, inferior economic and educational opportunities in the foreign country, or inferior medical facilities in the foreign country. See generally Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, 22 I&N Dec. at 568; Matter of Pilch, 21 I&N Dec. 627, 632-33 (BIA 1996); Matter of Ige, 20 I&N Dec. 880, 883 (BIA 1994); Matter of Ngai, 19 I&N Dec. 245, 246-47 (Comm’r 1984); Matter of Kim, 15 I&N Dec. 88, 89-90 (BIA 1974); Matter of Shaughnessy, 12 I&N Dec. 810, 813 (BIA 1968).

However, while hardships may not be extreme when considered abstractly or individually, the Board has made it clear that “[r]elevant factors, though not extreme in themselves, must be considered in the aggregate in determining whether extreme hardship exists.” Matter of O-J-O-, 21 I&N Dec. 381, 383 (BIA 1996) (quoting Matter of Ige, 20 I&N Dec. at 882). The adjudicator “must consider the entire range of factors concerning hardship in their totality and determine whether the combination of hardships takes the case beyond those hardships ordinarily associated with deportation.” Id.

The actual hardship associated with an abstract hardship factor such as family separation, economic disadvantage, or cultural readjustment differs in nature and severity depending on the unique circumstances of each case, as does the cumulative hardship a qualifying relative experiences as a result of aggregated individual hardships. See, e.g., Matter of Bing Chih Kao and Mei Tsui Lin, 23 I&N Dec. 45, 51 (BIA 2001) (distinguishing Matter of Pilch regarding hardship faced by qualifying relatives on the basis of variations in the length of residence in the United States and the ability to speak the language of the country to which they would relocate). For example, although family separation has been found to be a common result of inadmissibility or removal, separation from family living in the United States can also be the most important single hardship factor in considering hardship in the aggregate. See Salcido-Salcido v. INS, 138 F.3d 1292, 1293 (9th Cir. 1998) (quoting Contreras-Buenfil v. INS, 712 F.2d 401, 403 (9th Cir. 1983)); conversely, see Matter of Ngai, 19 I&N Dec. at 247 (separation of spouse and children from applicant not extreme hardship due to conflicting evidence in the record and because applicant and spouse had been voluntarily separated from one another for 28 years). Therefore, we consider the totality of the circumstances in determining case-by-case whether denial of admission would result in extreme hardship to a qualifying relative.

Regarding the claim of hardship due to separation from the applicant, there is little evidence that separation will cause distress beyond what usually results from inadmissibility of a family member. The qualifying relative claims that she and the applicant love each other and he helps her pay household expenses, but the statement claiming hardship due to her husband's departure is unsupported by any documentation. The record reflects that the couple have been married less than two years and have no children together. Going on record without supporting documentary evidence is not sufficient for purposes of meeting the burden of proof in these proceedings. Matter of Soffici, 22 I&N Dec. 158, 165 (Comm. 1998) (citing Matter of Treasure Craft of California, 14 I&N Dec. 190 (Reg. Comm. 1972)).

Based on the record, the AAO is also unable to conclude that the applicant's inability to remain here would make his wife unable to meet her financial obligations. There is no documentary evidence the applicant has any work history, no indication he has earned income, and no showing he contributes economically to the household. Tax returns and related documentation establish that the couple's source of reported income has been unemployment compensation received by the qualifying relative. There is thus no indication that the absence of the applicant will make his wife unable to meet her financial obligations.

For these reasons, the cumulative effect of the emotional and financial hardships the applicant's wife will experience due to the applicant's inadmissibility does not rise to the level of extreme. We are sensitive that the applicant's inability to remain in the United States will impose some hardship on his wife. The AAO concludes based on the evidence provided that, were his wife to remain in the United States without the applicant due to his inadmissibility, she would not suffer hardship beyond those problems normally associated with family separation.

The record contains no claim that the applicant's spouse would suffer extreme hardship by relocating to [REDACTED] to remain with the applicant in the event he is unable to remain in the United States.

The documentation on record, when considered in its totality, reflects the applicant has not established that his spouse will suffer extreme hardship if he is unable to live in the United States. The AAO recognizes that the applicant's wife will endure hardship as a result of the applicant's inability to immigrate. However, his situation is typical of individuals affected by removal or inadmissibility, and the AAO thus finds that the applicant has failed to establish extreme hardship to his wife as required under the Act.

(b)(6)

NON-PRECEDENT DECISION

Page 5

In application proceedings, it is the applicant's burden to establish eligibility for the immigration benefit sought. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. Here, that burden has not been met.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.