IN RE: Applicant: [REDACTED]

APPLICATION: Application for Status as a Temporary Resident pursuant to Section 245A of the Immigration and Nationality Act, as amended, 8 U.S.C. § 1255a

ON BEHALF OF APPLICANT:

INSTRUCTIONS:

This is the decision of the Administrative Appeals Office in your case. If your appeal was dismissed or rejected, all documents have been returned to the National Benefits Center. You no longer have a case pending before this office, and you are not entitled to file a motion to reopen or reconsider your case. If your appeal was sustained or remanded for further action, you will be contacted.

John F. Grissom, Acting Chief
Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The application for temporary resident status pursuant to the terms of the settlement agreements reached in Catholic Social Services, Inc., et al., v. Ridge, et al., CIV. NO. S-86-1343-LKK (E.D. Cal) January 23, 2004, and Felicity Mary Newman, et al., v. United States Immigration and Citizenship Services, et al., CIV. NO. 87-4757-WDK (C.D. Cal) February 17, 2004 (CSS/Newman Settlement Agreements), was denied by the Director, Los Angeles. The decision is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The applicant submitted a Form I-687, Application for Status as a Temporary Resident under Section 245A of the Immigration and Nationality Act (Act), and a Form I-687 Supplement, CSS/Newman Class Membership Worksheet. The director determined that the applicant had not established by a preponderance of the evidence that she had continuously resided in the United States in an unlawful status for the duration of the requisite period. Specifically, the director noted that the applicant had not submitted records from the Social Security Administration and the Internal Revenue Service for years in the requisite period. The director also noted that the applicant had admitted that she was outside the United States from August of 1984 until November of 1984 to give birth to a child, and again from August of 1987 until September of 1987. The director denied the application, finding that the applicant had not met her burden of proof and was, therefore, not eligible to adjust to temporary resident status pursuant to the terms of the CSS/Newman Settlement Agreements.

On appeal, the applicant states that the Social Security Administration and the Internal Revenue Service did not have earnings records for the applicant during the requisite period because she was undocumented during that time frame and worked on a cash basis. The applicant states that her credible testimony and corroborating evidence of record is sufficient to sustain her application.

An applicant for temporary resident status must establish entry into the United States before January 1, 1982, and continuous residence in the United States in an unlawful status since such date and through the date the application is filed. Section 245A(a)(2) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1255a(a)(2). The applicant must also establish that he or she has been continuously physically present in the United States since November 6, 1986. Section 245(a)(3) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1255a(a)(3). The regulations clarify that the applicant must have been physically present in the United States from November 6, 1986 until the date of filing the application. 8 C.F.R. § 245a.2(b)(1).

For purposes of establishing residence and physical presence under the CSS/Newman Settlement Agreements, the term “until the date of filing” in 8 C.F.R. § 245a.2(b)(1) means until the date the applicant attempted to file a completed Form I-687 application and fee or was caused not to timely file during the original legalization application period of May 5, 1987 to May 4, 1988. CSS Settlement Agreement paragraph 11 at page 6; Newman Settlement Agreement paragraph 11 at page 10.

The applicant has the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that he or she has resided in the United States for the requisite period, is admissible to the United States under the provisions of section 245A of the Act, and is otherwise eligible for adjustment of status. The inference to be drawn from the documentation provided shall depend on the extent of the documentation, its credibility and amenability to verification. 8 C.F.R. § 245a.2(d)(5). To meet his or her burden of proof, an applicant must provide evidence of eligibility apart from his or her own testimony, and the sufficiency of all evidence produced by the applicant will be judged according to its probative value and credibility. 8 C.F.R. § 245a.2(d)(6).

Although the regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 245a.2(d)(3) provides an illustrative list of contemporaneous documents that an applicant may submit in support of his or her claim of continuous residence in the United States in an unlawful status since prior to January 1, 1982, the submission of any other relevant document is permitted pursuant to 8 C.F.R. § 245a.2(d)(3)(vi)(L).

The “preponderance of the evidence” standard requires that the evidence demonstrate that the applicant's claim is “probably true,” where the determination of “truth” is made based on the factual circumstances of each individual case. Matter of E-M-, 20 I&N Dec. 77, 79-80 (Comm. 1989). In evaluating the evidence, Matter of E-M- also stated that “[t]ruth is to be determined not by the quantity of evidence alone but by its quality.” Id. at 80. Thus, in adjudicating the application pursuant to the preponderance of the evidence standard, the director must examine each piece of evidence for relevance, probative value, and credibility, both individually and within the context of the totality of the evidence, to determine whether the fact to be proven is probably true.

Even if the director has some doubt as to the truth, if the petitioner submits relevant, probative, and credible evidence that leads the director to believe that the claim is “probably true” or “more likely than not,” the applicant or petitioner has satisfied the standard of proof. See U.S. v. Cardozo-Fonseca, 480 U.S. 421, 431 (1987) (defining “more likely than not” as a greater than 50 percent probability of something occurring). If the director can articulate a material doubt, it is appropriate for the director to either request additional evidence or, if that doubt leads the director to believe that the claim is probably not true, deny the application or petition.

The issue in this proceeding is whether the applicant (1) entered the United States before January 1, 1982 and (2) has continuously resided in the United States in an unlawful status for the requisite period of time. The applicant submitted several witness statements, all of which state that the witnesses have known the applicant for all, or some portion of, the requisite period. The record also contains some documentation (a 1987 merchandise receipt; a 1986 health club membership card) which indicates that the applicant may have been in the United States for some portion of the requisite period. The record, however, does not establish that the applicant has continuously resided in the United States for the duration of the requisite period.

The applicant stated on the Form I-687 that she was outside the United States from August of 1984 until November of 1984 to visit her mother and to give birth to a child. This statement was confirmed by the applicant during her legalization interview on October 19, 2006, at which time the applicant signed a sworn statement to that effect. The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 245a.2(6)(h)(i) states as follows:

- (h) Continuous residence. (1) For the purpose of this Act, an applicant for temporary resident status shall be regarded as having resided continuously in the United States if, at the time of filing of the application:
- (i) No single absence from the United States has exceeded forty-five (45) days, and the aggregate of all absences has not exceeded one hundred and eighty (180) days between January 1, 1982 through the date the application for temporary resident status is filed, unless the alien can establish that due to emergent reasons, his or her return to the United States could not be accomplished within the time period allowed;

In view of the above regulation, the applicant has failed to establish continuous residence during the requisite period because her 1984 absence from the United States exceeded, by her own admission, 45 days. The record does not establish that the applicant's return to the United States within the time permitted for "continuous residence" absences could not be accomplished due to emergent reasons. Although the term "emergent reasons" is not defined by regulation, Matter of C-, 19 I. & N. Dec. 808 (Comm. 1988), holds that emergent means "coming unexpectedly into being." The "emergent reasons" must be unexpected at the time of departure from the United States and of sufficient magnitude that the applicant's return within the time permitted for continuous residence made returning more than an inconvenience, but practically impossible. The applicant chose voluntarily to leave the United States to visit her mother and give birth to her child. The extended absence was not unplanned by the applicant, but a voluntary decision on her part. Thus, by the applicant's own testimony, she did not continuously reside in the United States for the duration of the requisite period.

The record contains additional evidence that precludes approval of the applicant's application. In connection with the Form I-687, the applicant states that she first arrived in the United States in 1981, and that she continuously resided here throughout the requisite period. The applicant submitted witness statements to that effect. The applicant has, however, provided information to United States Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) which contradicts those assertions. On August 31, 1994, the applicant submitted a Form I-589, Request for Asylum in the United States. In that document, the applicant states that she arrived in the United States in December of 1990. In connection with the filing of the Form I-589, the applicant submitted a Form G-325 providing biographic information. The applicant signed the Form G-325 on August 1, 1994 and stated thereon that she had resided at [REDACTED] Caldas, Colombia from February of 1980 until December of 1991. These inconsistencies are material to the applicant's claim in that they have a direct bearing on the applicant's residence during the requisite period. Further, they have not been explained in the record. For these additional reasons, the application must be denied. It is incumbent upon the applicant to resolve any inconsistencies in the record by independent objective evidence. Any attempt to explain or reconcile such inconsistencies will not suffice unless the petitioner submits competent objective evidence pointing to where the truth lies. Doubt cast on any aspect of the petitioner's proof may lead to a reevaluation of the reliability and sufficiency of the remaining evidence offered in support of the visa petition. Matter of Ho, 19 I&N Dec. 582, 591-92 (BIA 1988). The evidence submitted in support of the applicant's claim lacks credibility, and it cannot be determined from the record where the truth actually lies.

Therefore, based upon the foregoing, the applicant has failed to establish by a preponderance of the evidence that she has continuously resided in an unlawful status in the United States for the requisite period as required under both 8 C.F.R. § 245a.2(d)(5) and Matter of E- M--, supra. The applicant is, therefore, ineligible for temporary resident status under section 245A of the Act on this basis.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed. This decision constitutes a final notice of ineligibility.
