Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The application for temporary resident status pursuant to the terms of the settlement agreements reached in Catholic Social Services, Inc., et al. v. Ridge, et al., CIV. NO. S-86-1343-LKK (E.D. Cal) on January 23, 2004, and Felicity Mary Newman, et al. v. United States Immigration and Citizenship Services, et al., CIV. NO. 87-4757-WDK (C.D. Cal) on February 17, 2004 (CSS/Newman Settlement Agreements), was denied by the director in Los Angeles, California. It is now on appeal before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO). The appeal will be dismissed.

The director denied the application on the ground that the applicant failed to establish that he resided continuously in the United States in an unlawful status from before January 1, 1982, and was continuously physically present in the United States from November 6, 1986, through the date of attempted filing during the original one-year application period for legalization that ended on May 4, 1988.

On appeal counsel asserts that the director did not give due weight to the evidence in the record, and requests that the decision be overturned.

An applicant for temporary resident status under section 245A of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act) must establish his or her entry into the United States before January 1, 1982, and continuous residence in the United States in an unlawful status from before January 1, 1982 through the date the application is filed. See section 245A(a)(2) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1255a(a)(2). The applicant must also establish his or her continuous physical presence in the United States since November 6, 1986. See section 245A(a)(3) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1255a(a)(3). The regulations clarify that the applicant must have been physically present in the United States from November 6, 1986 until the date of filing the application. See 8 C.F.R. § 245a.2(b)(1)

For purposes of establishing residence and physical presence under the CSS/Newman Settlement Agreements, the term “until the date of filing” in the regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 245a.2(b)(1) means until the date the applicant attempted to file a completed Form I-687 application and fee or was caused not to timely file during the original legalization application period from May 5, 1987 to May 4, 1988. See CSS Settlement Agreement, paragraph 11 at page 6; Newman Settlement Agreement, paragraph 11 at page 10.

An applicant for temporary resident status has the burden to establish by a preponderance of the evidence that he or she has resided in the United States for the requisite periods, is admissible to the United States under the provisions of section 245A of the Act, and is otherwise eligible for adjustment of status. The inference to be drawn from the documentation provided shall depend on the extent of the documentation, its credibility and amenability to verification. See 8 C.F.R. § 245a.2(d)(5).

The “preponderance of the evidence” standard requires that the evidence demonstrate that the applicant's claim is “probably true,” where the determination of “truth” is made based on the factual circumstances of each individual case. Matter of E-M-, 20 I&N Dec. 77, 79-80 (Comm.

1989). In evaluating the evidence, Matter of E-M- also stated that “[t]ruth is to be determined not by the quantity of evidence alone but by its quality.” Id. Thus, in adjudicating the application pursuant to the preponderance of the evidence standard, the director must examine each piece of evidence for relevance, probative value, and credibility, both individually and within the context of the totality of the evidence, to determine whether the fact to be proven is probably true.

Even if the director has some doubt as to the truth, if the applicant submits relevant, probative, and credible evidence that leads the director to believe that the claim is “probably true” or “more likely than not,” the applicant has satisfied the standard of proof. See U.S. v. Cardozo-Fonseca, 480 U.S. 421 (1987) (defining “more likely than not” as a greater than 50 percent probability of something occurring). If the director can articulate a material doubt, it is appropriate for the director to either request additional evidence or, if that doubt leads the director to believe that the claim is probably not true, deny the application.

The regulations provide an illustrative list of documents – which includes affidavits and “any other relevant document” – that an applicant may submit as evidence of continuous residence in the United States during the requisite period under section 245A of the Act. See 8 C.F.R. § 245a.2(d)(3)(vi)(L).

The applicant, a native of Mexico who claims to have lived in the United States since 1981, filed his application for temporary resident status under section 245A of the Act (Form I-687), together with a Form I-687 Supplement, CSS/Newman (LULAC) Class Membership Worksheet, on December 31, 2005. The applicant was subsequently interviewed on February 27, 2007.

On April 2, 2007, the director issued a Notice of Intent to Deny (NOID) indicating that the evidence of record did not establish the applicant’s continuous residence and continuous physical presence in the United States during the requisite periods under the Act. The director cited three affidavits from acquaintances that the applicant had submitted at his interview, but noted that they provided very little information about the applicant in the United States during the 1980s. The applicant was granted 30 days to respond to the NOID

On June 22, 2007, the director issued a Notice of Decision denying the application. The director reiterated that the evidence submitted at the interview was insufficient to establish the applicant’s continuous residence and physical presence in the United States during the requisite years of the 1980s, stated that the applicant had not responded to the NOID, and concluded that the applicant had failed to establish his eligibility for temporary resident status under the Act.

Counsel filed a timely appeal (Form I-694), asserting that a timely response to the NOID had also been submitted and that the director did not give due weight to the affidavits submitted by the applicant. Counsel submitted a brief in support of the appeal on September 7, 2007, as well as a copy of his response to the NOID, dated April 30, 2007. No further evidence was submitted with either document.

The AAO maintains plenary power to review each appeal on a de novo basis. 5 U.S.C. 557(b) ("On appeal from or review of the initial decision, the agency has all the powers which it would have in making the initial decision except as it may limit the issues on notice or by rule."); see also, Janka v. U.S. Dept. of Transp., NTSB, 925 F.2d 1147, 1149 (9th Cir. 1991). The AAO's de novo authority has been long recognized by the federal courts. See, e.g. Dor v. INS, 891 F.2d 997, 1002 n. 9 (2d Cir. 1989).

The central issue in this proceeding is whether the applicant has furnished sufficient credible evidence to demonstrate that he resided continuously in the United States in an unlawful status from before January 1, 1982 through the date he attempted to file a Form I-687 during the original one-year application period for legalization that ended on May 4, 1988. The AAO determines that he has not.

The only evidence of the applicant's residence in the United States during the 1980s are the three affidavits cited by the director in the NOID, which were submitted at the applicant's interview on February 27, 2007. As described by the director, the affidavits are minimalist documents with little personal input by the affiants. Considering how long they claim to have known the applicant, it is remarkable how little information the affiants provide about him. They offer no details about how they met the applicant, where he lived and worked during the 1980s, and the nature and extent of their interaction with the applicant during the 1980s. Nor have the affiants provided any documentary evidence – such as photographs, letters, and the like – of their personal relationship with the applicant in the United States during the 1980s. In view of these substantive shortcomings, the three affidavits offered by the applicant have little probative value. They are not persuasive evidence of the applicant's continuous unlawful residence in the United States during the years 1981-1988.

Based on the foregoing analysis, the AAO determines that the applicant has failed to establish that he resided continuously in the United States in an unlawful status from before January 1, 1982 through the date he attempted to file a Form I-687 during the original one-year application period for legalization that ended on May 4, 1988. Accordingly, the applicant is ineligible for temporary resident status under section 245A of the Act.

The appeal will be dismissed, and the application denied.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed. This decision constitutes a final notice of ineligibility.
