On March 8, 2013, USCIS published a Federal Register notice addressing revisions to Employment Eligibility Verification Form I-9, and the form's instructions. The revisions include:

- Expanding the form to two pages.
- A redesign that ensures the form is in line with current design standards.
- Changes in font and font size, and placing the instructions in a one-column format.
- Expanded instructions that now more clearly describe:
  - Information employees must enter in Section 1;
  - Employers' responsibilities for Section 2;
  - Employer responsibilities, including when reverification is necessary, for Section 3.

Subject matter experts will discuss and answer questions about these revisions during the stakeholder teleconference.
