Beneficiary:

PETITION: Immigrant Petition for Alien Worker as a Multinational Executive or Manager Pursuant to Section 203(b)(1)(C) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1153(b)(1)(C)

ON BEHALF OF PETITIONER:

INSTRUCTIONS:

This is the decision of the Administrative Appeals Office in your case. All documents have been returned to the office that originally decided your case. Any further inquiry must be made to that office.

Robert P. Wiemann, Chief
Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The preference visa petition was denied by the Director, Nebraska Service Center. The matter is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The petitioner is a Delaware corporation claiming to be a provider of insurance and bonding services. It seeks to employ the beneficiary as its president. Accordingly, the petitioner endeavors to classify the beneficiary as an employment-based immigrant pursuant to section 203(b)(1)(C) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1153(b)(1)(C), as a multinational executive or manager. The director denied the petition based on two independent grounds of ineligibility: 1) the petitioner failed to establish that it has a qualifying relationship with a foreign entity; and 2) the petitioner failed to establish that it would employ the beneficiary in a managerial or executive capacity. Pursuant to a review of the record, the AAO concludes that the petitioner has submitted sufficient evidence and information to establish that the petitioner and the beneficiary's foreign employer have a qualifying relationship. As such, the AAO's discussion below will focus on the remaining basis for the director's denial.

On appeal, counsel disputes the director's conclusions and submits a brief in support of her arguments.

Section 203(b) of the Act states in pertinent part:

(1) Priority Workers. -- Visas shall first be made available . . . to qualified immigrants who are aliens described in any of the following subparagraphs (A) through (C):

(C) Certain Multinational Executives and Managers. -- An alien is described in this subparagraph if the alien, in the 3 years preceding the time of the alien's application for classification and admission into the United States under this subparagraph, has been employed for at least 1 year by a firm or corporation or other legal entity or an affiliate or subsidiary thereof and who seeks to enter the United States in order to continue to render services to the same employer or to a subsidiary or affiliate thereof in a capacity that is managerial or executive.

The language of the statute is specific in limiting this provision to only those executives and managers who have previously worked for a firm, corporation or other legal entity, or an affiliate or subsidiary of that entity, and who are coming to the United States to work for the same entity, or its affiliate or subsidiary.

A United States employer may file a petition on Form I-140 for classification of an alien under section 203(b)(1)(C) of the Act as a multinational executive or manager. No labor certification is required for this classification. The prospective employer in the United States must furnish a job offer in the form of a statement which indicates that the alien is to be employed in the United States in a managerial or executive capacity. Such a statement must clearly describe the duties to be performed by the alien.

The primary issue in this proceeding is whether the beneficiary would be employed in a capacity that is managerial or executive.

Section 101(a)(44)(A) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(44)(A), provides:

The term "managerial capacity" means an assignment within an organization in which the employee primarily--

- (i) manages the organization, or a department, subdivision, function, or component of the organization;
- (ii) supervises and controls the work of other supervisory, professional, or managerial employees, or manages an essential function within the organization, or a department or subdivision of the organization;
- (iii) if another employee or other employees are directly supervised, has the authority to hire and fire or recommend those as well as other personnel actions (such as promotion and leave authorization), or if no other employee is directly supervised, functions at a senior level within the organizational hierarchy or with respect to the function managed; and
- (iv) exercises discretion over the day-to-day operations of the activity or function for which the employee has authority. A first-line supervisor is not considered to be acting in a managerial capacity merely by virtue of the supervisor's supervisory duties unless the employees supervised are professional.

Section 101(a)(44)(B) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(44)(B), provides:

The term "executive capacity" means an assignment within an organization in which the employee primarily--

- (i) directs the management of the organization or a major component or function of the organization;
- (ii) establishes the goals and policies of the organization, component, or function;
- (iii) exercises wide latitude in discretionary decision-making; and
- (iv) receives only general supervision or direction from higher level executives, the board of directors, or stockholders of the organization.

In support of the Form I-140, the petitioner submitted a letter dated May 24, 2006, which included a general description of the beneficiary's proposed job responsibilities. The key portions of that description have been incorporated into the director's decision and, therefore, need not be repeated by the AAO. On July 21, 2006, the director issued a request for additional evidence. While the issue of the beneficiary's proposed job duties was not specifically addressed, the petitioner stated that through its presence in the United States it would be able to "provide its U.S. clients with the necessary expertise to serve its clients [sic] needs." In light of the fact that the beneficiary was indicated to be the petitioner's sole employee and in light of the responsibilities assigned to him in the initial support letter, the director determined that the beneficiary would directly provide the services offered by the petitioner to its clientele. Based on this determination, the director issued a decision dated October 25, 2006, concluding that the petitioner failed to establish that the beneficiary's proposed employment in the United States would be comprised primarily of duties within a qualifying managerial or executive capacity.

On appeal, counsel asserts that the director's interpretation of the beneficiary's proposed role within the petitioning organization was oversimplified and led to an erroneous finding. In the appellate brief dated November 27, 2006, counsel provides a thorough explanation of the industry in which the petitioner operates and, more specifically, the petitioner's role within that industry. Counsel explains that the petitioner operates in the petroleum industry with its key role being to facilitate foreign companies in meeting all the necessary regulatory requirements imposed by the Mexican government with regard to petroleum projects. Counsel goes on to explain that the beneficiary's primary role within the petitioning entity is to interpret a wide variety of relevant Mexican statutes and effectively advise the petitioner's clients on how to obtain contracts within the petroleum industry, which is controlled by the Mexican government. Counsel provides the following summary of the beneficiary's duties and responsibilities:

[The b]eneficiary performs advisory and consultation services regarding the interpretation of the Laws of Acquisitions and of Public Works of Mexico. These consultation services assist in the participation of [the] [b]eneficiary's clients in the process of public bidding that the [g]overnment of Mexico has established for the contracting of its suppliers building PEMEX's oil infrastructure.¹

He advises his clients on the adequate compliance of the norms and rules that PEMEX has established for its acquisitions and service suppliers through PEMEX's purchasing committees.

[The b]eneficiary coordinates the rendering of these services with the personnel at the Mexican [p]arent's office

In the performance of his work[,] [the] [b]eneficiary has been given the responsibility to carry out inspections in the oil fields to determine the protection measures against accidents and damages caused by natural disasters.

[The] [b]eneficiary also conducts meetings with clients during the bidding process to clarify with precision any necessary questions or doubts the contractors may bring up to determine clearly the extent of their work, as well as the guarantees they have to offer PEMEX to fulfill the contract and the quality of the products and services provided.

In examining the executive or managerial capacity of the beneficiary, Citizenship and Immigration Services (CIS) will look first to the petitioner's description of the job duties. See 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(j)(5). In the present matter, counsel has provided a detailed explanation of the petitioner's role within the oil industry and, more specifically, the beneficiary's role with respect to the petitioner's clients within that industry. While no time increments were allotted to the specific job duties performed by the beneficiary, sufficient information was provided to allow the AAO to conclude that the beneficiary provides the services marketed to the petitioner's clients. As properly stated in the director's decision, an employee who "primarily" performs the tasks necessary to produce a product or to provide services is not considered to be "primarily" employed in a managerial or executive capacity. See sections 101(a)(44)(A) and (B) of the Act (requiring that one "primarily" perform the enumerated managerial or executive duties); see also Matter of Church Scientology International, 19 I&N Dec. 593, 604 (Comm. 1988). While the AAO acknowledges the complex nature of the beneficiary's duties as well as his integral role to the petitioner's continued existence, neither component by itself determines the beneficiary's employment capacity. Rather, the actual duties themselves reveal the true nature of the employment. Fedin Bros. Co., Ltd. v. Sava, 724 F. Supp. 1103, 1108 (E.D.N.Y. 1989), aff'd, 905 F.2d 41 (2d. Cir. 1990). In the instant case, the description of the beneficiary's job duties as provided in counsel's appellate brief strongly suggest that the beneficiary would actually perform all of the duties underlying the essential functions of the petitioning entity. Furthermore, the organizational structure that has been illustrated is entirely lacking in support personnel, leaving the petitioner with no available means to relieve the beneficiary from having to primarily perform the daily operational tasks. Accordingly, as the record indicates that a preponderance of the beneficiary's duties will be directly providing the services of the business, it cannot be found that the beneficiary will be employed primarily in a qualifying managerial or executive capacity. For this reason, the petition may not be approved.

Furthermore, the record does not support a finding of eligibility based on additional grounds that were not previously addressed in the director's decision.

First, 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(j)(3)(i)(D) states that the petitioner must establish that it has been doing business for at least one year prior to filing the Form I-140. The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(j)(2) states that doing business means "the regular, systematic, and continuous provision of goods and/or services by a firm, corporation, or other entity and does not include the mere presence of an agent or office." The Form I-140 that is at issue in this proceeding was filed on June 13, 2006. Based on this date of filing, the petitioner must establish that it was doing business as of June 2005 and that it continued to do business up through the date the Form I-140 was filed. While the petitioner provided a number of invoices showing business transactions that took place from June to August 2005 and in October 2005, there are no invoices to show that the business transactions continued to take place during the remaining portions of the 12-month period prior to the date the petition was filed. The AAO may not assume that the petitioner was conducting business on a regular, systematic, and continuous basis for the entire 12-month period simply because it provided documentation that business was ongoing during a portion of that time. Going on record without supporting documentary evidence is not sufficient for purposes of meeting the burden of proof in these proceedings. Matter of Soffici, 22 I&N Dec. 158, 165 (Comm. 1998) (citing Matter of Treasure Craft of California, 14 I&N Dec. 190 (Reg. Comm. 1972)).

Second, all documentation on record suggests that the beneficiary either directly or indirectly owns the U.S. petitioner, which leads to the final issue discussed below.

Specifically, given the petitioner's description of its business organization and the beneficiary's proposed relationship to this business, it appears more likely than not that the beneficiary will not be an "employee" of the United States operation. As explained in 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(j)(5), the petitioner must establish that the beneficiary will be "employed" in an executive or managerial capacity. It is noted that "employer," "employee," and "employed" are not specifically defined for purposes of the Act even though these terms are used repeatedly in the context of addressing the multinational executive and managerial immigrant classification. Section 203(b)(1)(C), 8 U.S.C. § 1153(b)(1)(C), requires beneficiaries to have been "employed" abroad and to render services to the same "employer" in the United States. Further, section 101(a)(44), 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(44), defines both managerial and executive capacity as an assignment within an organization in which an "employee" performs certain enumerated qualifying duties. Finally, the specific definition of "managerial capacity" in section 101(a)(44)(A), 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(44)(A), refers repeatedly to the supervision and control of other "employees." Neither the legacy Immigration and Naturalization Service nor CIS has defined the terms "employee," "employer," or "employed" by regulation for purposes of the multinational executive and managerial immigrant classification. See, e.g., 8 C.F.R. § 204.5 and 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(l). Therefore, for purposes of this immigrant classification, these terms are undefined.

The Supreme Court of the United States has determined that where a federal statute fails to clearly define the term "employee," courts should conclude "that Congress intended to describe the conventional master-servant relationship as understood by common-law agency doctrine." Nationwide Mutual Ins. Co. v. Darden, 503 U.S. 318, 322-323 (1992) (hereinafter "Darden") (quoting Community for Creative Non-Violence v. Reid, 490 U.S. 730 (1989)). That definition is as follows:

In determining whether a hired party is an employee under the general common law of agency, we consider the hiring party's right to control the manner and means by which the product is accomplished. Among the other factors relevant to this inquiry are the skill required; the source of the instrumentalities and tools; the location of the work; the duration of the relationship between the parties; whether the hiring party has the right to assign additional projects to the hired party; the extent of the hired party's discretion over when and how long to work; the method of payment; the hired party's role in hiring and paying assistants; whether the work is part of the regular business of the hiring party; whether the hiring party is in business; the provision of employee benefits; and the tax treatment of the hired party.

Darden, 503 U.S. at 323-324; see also Restatement (Second) of Agency § 220(2) (1958); Clackamas Gastroenterology Associates, P.C. v. Wells, 538 U.S. 440 (2003) (hereinafter "Clackamas"). As the common-law test contains "no shorthand formula or magic phrase that can be applied to find the answer, . . . all of the incidents of the relationship must be assessed and weighed with no one factor being decisive." Darden, 503 U.S. at 324 (quoting NLRB v. United Ins. Co. of America, 390 U.S. 254, 258 (1968)).

Within the context of immigrant petitions seeking to classify the beneficiary as a multinational manager or executive, when a worker is also a partner, officer, member of a board of directors, or a major shareholder, the worker may only be defined as an "employee" if he or she is subject to the organization's "control." See Clackamas, 538 U.S. at 449-450; see also New Compliance Manual at § 2-III(A)(1)(d). Factors to be addressed in determining whether a worker, who is also an owner of the organization, is an employee include:

- Whether the organization can hire or fire the individual or set the rules and regulations of the individual's work.
- Whether and, if so, to what extent the organization supervises the individual's work.
- Whether the individual reports to someone higher in the organization.
- Whether and, if so, to what extent the individual is able to influence the organization.

- Whether the parties intended that the individual be an employee, as expressed in written agreements or contracts.
- Whether the individual shares in the profits, losses, and liabilities of the organization.

Clackamas, 538 U.S. at 449-450 (citing New Compliance Manual).

Applying the Darden and Clackamas tests to this matter, the petitioner has not established that the beneficiary will be an "employee" employed in a managerial or executive capacity. As explained above, the petitioner is a corporation, which the petitioner claims is ultimately owned and controlled by the beneficiary, who purports to assume a role as the petitioner's principal. While the petitioner's organizational chart names another officer within its hierarchy, there is no evidence that this individual has an ownership interest or is in a position to exercise any control over the work to be performed by the beneficiary.

In view of the above, it appears that the beneficiary will be a proprietor of this business and will not be an "employee" as defined above. It has not been established that the beneficiary will be "controlled" by the petitioner or that the beneficiary's employment could be terminated. To the contrary, the beneficiary is the petitioner for all practical purposes. He will control the organization; he cannot be fired; he will report to no one; he will set the rules governing his work; and he will share in all profits and losses. Therefore, based on the tests outlined above, the petitioner has not established that the beneficiary will be "employed" as an "employee," and the petition may not be approved for this and the other additional reasons discussed above.

An application or petition that fails to comply with the technical requirements of the law may be denied by the AAO even if the Service Center does not identify all of the grounds for denial in the initial decision. See Spencer Enterprises, Inc. v. United States, 229 F. Supp. 2d 1025, 1043 (E.D. Cal. 2001), aff'd, 345 F.3d 683 (9th Cir. 2003); see also Dor v. INS, 891 F.2d 997, 1002 n. 9 (2d Cir. 1989)(noting that the AAO reviews appeals on a de novo basis). Therefore, based on the additional grounds of ineligibility discussed above, this petition cannot be approved.

As a final note, counsel makes a brief reference to the petitioner's current approved L-1 employment of the beneficiary. With regard to the beneficiary's L-1 nonimmigrant classification, it should be noted that, in general, given the permanent nature of the benefit sought, immigrant petitions are given far greater scrutiny by CIS than nonimmigrant petitions. The AAO acknowledges that both the immigrant and nonimmigrant visa classifications rely on the same definitions of managerial and executive capacity. See §§ 101(a)(44)(A) and (B) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(44). Although the statutory definitions for managerial and executive capacity are the same, the question of overall eligibility requires a comprehensive review of all of the provisions, not just the definitions of managerial and executive capacity. There are significant differences between the nonimmigrant visa classification, which allows an alien to enter the United States temporarily for no more than seven years, and an immigrant visa petition, which permits an alien to apply for permanent residence in the United States and, if granted, ultimately apply for naturalization as a United States citizen. Cf. §§ 204 and 214 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. §§ 1154 and 1184; see also § 316 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1427.

Moreover, each nonimmigrant and immigrant petition is a separate record of proceeding with a separate burden of proof; each petition must stand on its own individual merits. CIS is not required to assume the burden of searching through previously provided evidence submitted in support of other petitions to determine the approvability of the petition at hand in the present matter. The approval of a nonimmigrant petition in no way guarantees that CIS will approve an immigrant petition filed on behalf of the same beneficiary. CIS denies many I-140 immigrant petitions after approving prior nonimmigrant I-129 L-1 petitions. See, e.g., Q Data Consulting, Inc. v. INS, 293 F. Supp. 2d at 25; IKEA US v. US Dept. of Justice, 48 F. Supp. 2d 22 (D.D.C. 1999); Fedin Brothers Co. Ltd. v. Sava, 724 F. Supp. 1103 (E.D.N.Y. 1989).

Furthermore, if the previous nonimmigrant petition was approved based on the same unsupported assertions that are contained in the current record, the approval would constitute material and gross error on the part of the director. The AAO is not required to approve applications or petitions where eligibility has not been demonstrated, merely because of prior approvals that may have been erroneous. See, e.g. Matter of Church Scientology International, 19 I&N Dec. 593, 597 (Comm. 1988). It would be absurd to suggest that CIS or any agency must treat acknowledged errors as binding precedent. Sussex Engg. Ltd. v. Montgomery, 825 F.2d 1084, 1090 (6th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 1008 (1988).

Finally, the AAO's authority over the service centers is comparable to the relationship between a court of appeals and a district court. Even if a service center director had approved the nonimmigrant petitions on behalf of the beneficiary, the AAO would not be bound to follow the contradictory decision of a service center. Louisiana Philharmonic Orchestra v. INS, 2000 WL 282785 (E.D. La.), aff'd, 248 F.3d 1139 (5th Cir. 2001), cert. denied, 122 S.Ct. 51 (2001).

In conclusion, when the AAO denies a petition on multiple alternative grounds, a plaintiff can succeed on a challenge only if it is shown that the AAO abused its discretion with respect to all of the AAO's enumerated grounds. See Spencer Enterprises, Inc. v. United States, 229 F. Supp. 2d at 1043, aff'd, 345 F.3d 683.

The petition will be denied for the above stated reasons, with each considered as an independent and alternative basis for denial. In visa petition proceedings, the burden of proving eligibility for the benefit sought remains entirely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. The petitioner has not sustained that burden.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
