The specific requirements for filing such a motion can be found at 8 C.F.R. § 103.5. Do not file any motion directly with the AAO. Please be aware that 8 C.F.R. § 103.5(a)(1)(i) requires any motion to be filed within 30 days of the decision that the motion seeks to reconsider or reopen.

Thank you,

Ron Rosenberg
Acting Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The preference visa petition was denied by the Director, Texas Service Center. The matter is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The petitioner is a Florida limited liability company that is engaged in real estate investment, and it seeks to employ the beneficiary as its President. Accordingly, the petitioner endeavors to classify the beneficiary as an employment-based immigrant pursuant to section 203(b)(1)(C) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1153(b)(1)(C), as a multinational executive or manager.

The director denied the petition on August 15, 2011, concluding that: (1) the petitioner failed to establish that the beneficiary's proposed employment with the U.S. entity would be within a qualifying managerial or executive capacity<sup>1</sup>; and, (2) the petitioner failed to establish that it has the ability to pay the beneficiary's proffered wage.

On appeal, counsel disputes the director's findings and provides an appellate brief laying out the grounds for challenging the denial.

Section 203(b) of the Act states in pertinent part:

(1) Priority Workers. -- Visas shall first be made available . . . to qualified immigrants who are aliens described in any of the following subparagraphs (A) through (C):

* * *

(C) Certain Multinational Executives and Managers. -- An alien is described in this subparagraph if the alien, in the 3 years preceding the time of the alien's application for classification and admission into the United States under this subparagraph, has been employed for at least 1 year by a firm or corporation or other legal entity or an affiliate or subsidiary thereof and who seeks to enter the United States in order to continue to render services to the same employer or to a subsidiary or affiliate thereof in a capacity that is managerial or executive.

The language of the statute is specific in limiting this provision to only those executives and managers who have previously worked for a firm, corporation or other legal entity, or an affiliate or subsidiary of that entity, and who are coming to the United States to work for the same entity, or its affiliate or subsidiary.

<sup>1</sup> It appears that the director's denial decision, dated August 15, 2011, has a typographical error on the second page where the director states that the "petitioner has shown that the beneficiary has been employed for at least one year in a manager or executive position in the United States." In reviewing the entire decision, the director discusses how the petitioner failed to establish that the petitioner would be employed in the United States in a managerial or executive capacity and therefore, the AAO will review this issue.

A United States employer may file a petition on Form I-140 for classification of an alien under section 203(b)(1)(C) of the Act as a multinational executive or manager. No labor certification is required for this classification. The prospective employer in the United States must furnish a job offer in the form of a statement which indicates that the alien is to be employed in the United States in a managerial or executive capacity. Such a statement must clearly describe the duties to be performed by the alien.

The first issue that will be addressed in this proceeding calls for an analysis of the beneficiary's job duties. Specifically, the AAO will examine the record to determine whether the petitioner submitted sufficient evidence to establish that the beneficiary would be employed in the United States in a qualifying managerial or executive capacity.

Section 101(a)(44)(A) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(44)(A), provides:

The term "managerial capacity" means an assignment within an organization in which the employee primarily--

- (i) manages the organization, or a department, subdivision, function, or component of the organization;
- (ii) supervises and controls the work of other supervisory, professional, or managerial employees, or manages an essential function within the organization, or a department or subdivision of the organization;
- (iii) if another employee or other employees are directly supervised, has the authority to hire and fire or recommend those as well as other personnel actions (such as promotion and leave authorization), or if no other employee is directly supervised, functions at a senior level within the organizational hierarchy or with respect to the function managed; and
- (iv) exercises discretion over the day-to-day operations of the activity or function for which the employee has authority. A first-line supervisor is not considered to be acting in a managerial capacity merely by virtue of the supervisor's supervisory duties unless the employees supervised are professional.

Section 101(a)(44)(B) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(44)(B), provides:

The term "executive capacity" means an assignment within an organization in which the employee primarily--

- (i) directs the management of the organization or a major component or function of the organization;

- (ii) establishes the goals and policies of the organization, component, or function;
- (iii) exercises wide latitude in discretionary decision-making; and
- (iv) receives only general supervision or direction from higher level executives, the board of directors, or stockholders of the organization.

In examining the executive or managerial capacity of the beneficiary, USCIS will look first to the petitioner's description of the job duties. See 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(j)(5). Published case law clearly supports the pivotal role of a clearly defined job description, as the actual duties themselves reveal the true nature of the employment. Fedin Bros. Co., Ltd. v. Sava, 724 F. Supp. 1103, 1108 (E.D.N.Y. 1989), aff'd, 905 F.2d 41 (2d. Cir. 1990); see also 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(j)(5). USCIS reviews the totality of the record, which includes not only the beneficiary's job description, but also takes into account the nature of the petitioner's business, the employment and remuneration of employees, as well as the job descriptions of the beneficiary's subordinates, if any, and any other facts contributing to a complete understanding of a beneficiary's actual role within a given entity.

The definitions of executive and managerial capacity have two parts. First, the petitioner must show that the beneficiary performs the high-level responsibilities that are specified in the definitions. Second, the petitioner must prove that the beneficiary primarily performs these specified responsibilities and does not spend a majority of his or her time on day-to-day functions. Champion World, Inc. v. INS, 940 F.2d 1533 (Table), 1991 WL 144470 (9th Cir. July 30, 1991).

An analysis of the record does not lead to an affirmative conclusion that the beneficiary was employed abroad or would be employed in the United States in a qualifying managerial or executive capacity.

With regard to the proffered position offered to the beneficiary, the petitioner provided a vague and general job description such as the beneficiary "directs, plans, and implement objectives and activities of organization to ensure continuing operations, to maximize returns on investments, and to increase productivity"; "manage and oversee operations, maintenance, administration, and improvement or properties"; and "coordinates activities of corporation, and resolve problems." It is unclear which specific tasks actually fall within these broad categories and whether the supervisory tasks the beneficiary will perform are of a qualifying nature. The petitioner failed to establish what specific tasks the beneficiary would perform in supervising business affairs or what policy decisions the beneficiary would make. The record is similarly lacking in specific information about the job duties involved in securing the growth of the petitioning entity. Reciting the beneficiary's vague job responsibilities or broadly-cast business objectives is not sufficient; the regulations require a detailed description of the beneficiary's daily job duties. The petitioner has failed to provide any detail or explanation of the beneficiary's activities in the course of his daily routine. The actual duties themselves will reveal the true nature of the employment. Fedin Bros. Co., Ltd. v. Sava, 724 F. Supp. 1103, 1108 (E.D.N.Y. 1989), aff'd, 905 F.2d 41 (2d. Cir. 1990). The petitioner's vague and general description of the beneficiary's position does not identify the actual duties performed, such that they could be classified as managerial or executive in nature.

The director's request for evidence specifically requested that the petitioner establish that the beneficiary's employment qualifies under all four criteria to establish a position in a managerial or executive capacity. The job duties submitted with the initial filing and the job duties submitted in response to the request for evidence are almost identical. In response to the director's request for evidence, the only change is that the petitioner included a general percentage breakdown dedicated to a list of duties. Thus, the petitioner failed to provide the evidence requested by the director by failing to provide greater detail of the duties to be performed by the beneficiary. Failure to submit requested evidence that precludes a material line of inquiry shall be grounds for denying the petition. 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(b)(14).

The job description submitted by the petitioner provides little insight into the true nature of the tasks the beneficiary will perform. While the petitioner has provided a breakdown of the percentage of time the beneficiary will spend on various duties, the petitioner has not articulated whether each duty is managerial or executive.

In addition, the job description includes several non-qualifying duties such as the beneficiary "directs and coordinates corporation's financial and budget activities to fund operations, maximize investments, and increase efficiency"; "negotiates or approve contracts and agreements with suppliers, distributors, federal and state agencies, and other organizational entities"; "direct and coordinate activities of the business concerned with pricing, rentals, and sales of properties"; and "reviews reports of investigations of complaints, disturbances and violations and reviews the resolutions to see if they follow management rules and regulations." As the only employee of the petitioner, it appears that the beneficiary will be in charge of preparing the budget, negotiations, and developing procedures rather than managing other individuals to perform the non-qualifying tasks. Developing marketing strategy and negotiating deals are both operational duties that cannot be classified as managerial or executive tasks.

In addition, the job description provided by the petitioner indicated that the beneficiary will "manage and supervise the work of the corporation's general manager," "review reports submitted by staff member to recommend approval or to suggest changes," and "reviews inspection reports of grounds, facilities, and equipment routinely to make budgetary determinations with regards to expenses for repairs or maintenance." As the only employee of the petitioner, it is unclear how the beneficiary will supervise a general manager or review reports made by a staff that does not exist. It is incumbent upon the petitioner to resolve any inconsistencies in the record by independent objective evidence. Any attempt to explain or reconcile such inconsistencies will not suffice unless the petitioner submits competent objective evidence pointing to where the truth lies. Matter of Ho, 19 I&N Dec. 582, 591-92 (BIA 1988).

Neither the job descriptions counsel has provided nor the organizational structure of the petitioner establish that the beneficiary would be employed in the United States in a qualifying managerial or executive capacity. As indicated in the organizational chart, the beneficiary will be the only employee. The petitioner does not provide evidence that the petitioner employed individuals to assist with the finances, budgeting, bookkeeping, negotiations, inventory, purchases, and distribution; thus, it appears that the beneficiary is performing the duties inherent in operating a business such as finances, customer service, negotiations, contracts, marketing and sales development. An employee who "primarily" performs the tasks necessary to produce a product or provide a service is not considered to be "primarily" employed in a managerial or executive capacity. See sections 101(a)(44)(A) and (B) of the Act (requiring that one "primarily" perform the enumerated managerial or executive duties); see also Matter of Church Scientology International, 19 I & N Dec. 593, 604 (Comm. 1988).

While the AAO acknowledges that no beneficiary is required to allocate 100% of his time to managerial- or executive-level tasks, the petitioner must establish that the non-qualifying tasks the beneficiary would perform are only incidental to his proposed position. An employee who "primarily" performs the tasks necessary to produce a product or to provide services is not considered to be "primarily" employed in a managerial or executive capacity. See sections 101(a)(44)(A) and (B) of the Act (requiring that one "primarily" perform the enumerated managerial or executive duties); see also Matter of Church Scientology International, 19 I&N Dec. 593, 604 (Comm. 1988). The petitioner has failed to establish that the beneficiary would be employed in a qualifying capacity.

The AAO acknowledges counsel's contention that the beneficiary's position is an essential function within the petitioner's organization. The term "function manager" applies generally when a beneficiary does not supervise or control the work of a subordinate staff but instead is primarily responsible for managing an "essential function" within the organization. See section 101(a)(44)(A)(ii) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(44)(A)(ii). The term "essential function" is not defined by statute or regulation. If a petitioner claims that the beneficiary is managing an essential function, the petitioner must furnish a written job offer that clearly describes the duties to be performed in managing the essential function, i.e. identify the function with specificity, articulate the essential nature of the function, and establish the proportion of the beneficiary's daily duties attributed to managing the essential function. See 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(l)(3)(ii). In addition, the petitioner's description of the beneficiary's daily duties must demonstrate that the beneficiary manages the function rather than performs the duties related to the function. An employee who primarily performs the tasks necessary to produce a product or to provide services is not considered to be employed in a managerial or executive capacity. Boyang, Ltd. v. I.N.S., 67 F.3d 305 (Table), 1995 WL 576839 (9th Cir, 1995)(citing Matter of Church Scientology International, 19 I&N Dec. at 604. In this matter, the petitioner has not provided evidence that the beneficiary manages an essential function. The petitioner provided a brief and vague job description that did not discuss how the beneficiary is managing an essential function. As noted above, the beneficiary's job description does not establish that the beneficiary is primarily performing in a managerial capacity.

Beyond the required description of the job duties, USCIS reviews the totality of the record when examining the claimed managerial or executive capacity of a beneficiary, including the petitioner's organizational structure, the duties of any subordinate employees, the presence of other employees to relieve the beneficiary from performing operational duties, the nature of the petitioner's business, and any other factors that will contribute to a complete understanding of a beneficiary's actual duties and role in a business. In the case of a function manager, where no subordinates are directly supervised, these other factors may include the beneficiary's position within the organizational hierarchy, the depth of the petitioner's organization, the indirect supervision of employees within the scope of the function managed, and the value of the budgets, products, or services that the beneficiary manages.

As discussed above, the petitioner has not identified employees within the petitioner's organization, subordinate to the beneficiary, who would relieve the beneficiary from performing routine duties inherent to operating the business. The fact that the beneficiary has been given a managerial job title and general oversight authority over the business is insufficient to elevate his position to that of a "function manager" as contemplated by the governing statute and regulations. As discussed above, the petitioner has not established that the beneficiary's duties are primarily managerial in nature, and thus he cannot be considered a "function manager."

Other than stating that the proposed position will be responsible for managing an essential function, counsel provides no explanation or evidence in support of his claim that the beneficiary would qualify as a function manager pursuant to section 101(a)(44)(A)(ii) of the Act. The unsupported statements of counsel on appeal or in a motion are not evidence and thus are not entitled to any evidentiary weight. See INS v. Phinpathya, 464 U.S. 183, 188-89 n.6 (1984); Matter of Ramirez-Sanchez, 17 I&N Dec. 503 (BIA 1980).

In summary, the petitioner has failed to provide sufficient evidence to establish that the beneficiary would be employed in the United States in a qualifying managerial or executive capacity. Therefore, the instant petition cannot be approved.

The second issue in this proceeding is whether the petitioner has the ability to pay the beneficiary's proffered wage.

The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2) states, in pertinent part:

Any petition filed by or for an employment-based immigrant which requires an offer of employment must be accompanied by evidence that the prospective United States employer has the ability to pay the proffered wage. The petitioner must demonstrate this ability at the time the priority date is established and continuing until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence. Evidence of this ability shall be in the form of copies of annual reports, federal tax returns, or audited financial statements.

(Emphasis added.)

The director noted in the denial decision that the beneficiary's Form 1040 shows a loss associated with the petitioner. On appeal, counsel for the petitioner indicated that the petitioner's net current assets are $87,260.52. Thus, the petitioner has the ability to pay the beneficiary's proffered wage. The AAO will withdraw this part of the director's decision.

Beyond the decision of the director, the record lacks substantive job descriptions establishing what job duties the beneficiary performed during his employment abroad. Conclusory assertions regarding the beneficiary's employment capacity are not sufficient. Merely repeating the language of the statute or regulations does not satisfy the petitioner's burden of proof. Fedin Bros. Co., Ltd. v. Sava, 724 F. Supp. 1103, 1108 (E.D.N.Y. 1989), aff'd, 905 F. 2d 41 (2d. Cir. 1990); Avyr Associates, Inc. v. Meissner, 1997 WL 188942 at *5 (S.D.N.Y.). The actual duties themselves will reveal the true nature of the employment. Fedin Bros. Co., Ltd. v. Sava, 724 F. Supp. at 1108.

Beyond the findings in the previous discussion, the remaining issue in this proceeding is whether the petitioner has established that a qualifying relationship exists between the petitioning entity and a foreign entity pursuant to 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(l)(1)(ii)(G). The petitioner stated that the beneficiary owns 50% of the foreign company and 100% of the petitioner. However, the documents showing ownership of the foreign company are not sufficient evidence. The petitioner provided a chart of ownership of the foreign company and a statement from [REDACTED] a Venezuelan attorney, to describe ownership of the foreign company.

The regulation and case law confirm that ownership and control are the factors that must be examined in determining whether a qualifying relationship exists between United States and foreign entities for purposes of this visa classification. Matter of Church Scientology International, 19 I&N Dec. 593 (Comm'r 1988); see also Matter of Siemens Medical Systems, Inc., 19 I&N Dec. 362 (Comm'r 1986); Matter of Hughes, 18 I&N Dec. 289 (Comm'r 1982). In the context of this visa petition, ownership refers to the direct or indirect legal right of possession of the assets of an entity with full power and authority to control; control means the direct or indirect legal right and authority to direct the establishment, management, and operations of an entity. Matter of Church Scientology International, 19 I&N Dec. at 595.

As general evidence of a petitioner's claimed qualifying relationship, stock certificates alone are not sufficient evidence to determine whether a stockholder maintains ownership and control of a corporate entity. The corporate stock certificate ledger, stock certificate registry, corporate bylaws, and the minutes of relevant annual shareholder meetings must also be examined to determine the total number of shares issued, the exact number issued to the shareholder, and the subsequent percentage ownership and its effect on corporate control. Additionally, a petitioning company must disclose all agreements relating to the voting of shares, the distribution of profit, the management and direction of the subsidiary, and any other factor affecting actual control of the entity. See Matter of Siemens Medical Systems, Inc., supra. Without full disclosure of all relevant documents, USCIS is unable to determine the elements of ownership and control. The petitioner did not provide any of these documents and thus, has not establish a qualifying relationship between the beneficiary's foreign employer and the petitioner.

An application or petition that fails to comply with the technical requirements of the law may be denied by the AAO even if the Service Center does not identify all of the grounds for denial in the initial decision. See Spencer Enterprises, Inc. v. United States, 229 F. Supp. 2d 1025, 1043 (E.D. Cal. 2001), aff'd, 345 F.3d 683 (9th Cir. 2003); see also Soltane v. DOJ, 381 F.3d 143, 145 (3d Cir. 2004)(noting that the AAO reviews appeals on a de novo basis). Based on the additional grounds of ineligibility discussed above, this petition cannot be approved.

The petition will be denied for the above stated reasons, with each considered as an independent and alternative basis for denial. In visa petition proceedings, the burden of proving eligibility for the benefit sought remains entirely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. The petitioner has not sustained that burden.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
