Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The Director, [REDACTED] Service Center, denied the immigrant visa petition. The matter was before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The petitioner is [REDACTED]. It seeks to employ the beneficiary permanently in the United States as a specialty cook pursuant to section 203(b)(3) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1153(b)(3) as an other, unskilled worker. As required by statute, the petition is accompanied by a Form ETA 750, Application for Alien Employment Certification (Form ETA 750), approved by the Department of Labor (DOL). The director determined that the petitioner failed to establish its ability to pay the proffered wage from the priority date through the present, and that the petitioner failed to establish that the beneficiary possessed one year of experience in the job offered. Therefore, the director denied the petition.

The record shows that the appeal is properly filed and timely and makes a specific allegation of error in law or fact. The procedural history in this case is documented by the record and incorporated into the decision. Further elaboration of the procedural history will be made only as necessary.

The AAO conducts appellate review on a de novo basis. See Soltane v. DOJ, 381 F.3d 143, 145 (3d Cir. 2004). The AAO considers all pertinent evidence in the record, including new evidence properly submitted upon appeal.¹ On appeal, counsel submitted a letter from [REDACTED] verifying that the beneficiary worked as a cook from January 1994 to March 1997. Therefore, the AAO finds that the petitioner has established that the beneficiary possessed the requisite one year of experience in the job offered prior to the priority date and thus the beneficiary qualifies for the proffered position.

As set forth in the director's October 8, 2008 denial, the primary issue in this case is whether or not the petitioner has established its ability to pay the proffered wage as of the priority date and continuing until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence.

Section 203(b)(3)(A)(iii) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1153(b)(3)(A)(iii), provides for the granting of preference classification to qualified immigrants who are capable, at the time of petitioning for classification under this paragraph, of performing unskilled labor, not of a temporary or seasonal nature, for which qualified workers are not available in the United States.

The regulation 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2) states in pertinent part:

Ability of prospective employer to pay wage. Any petition filed by or for an employment-based immigrant which requires an offer of employment must be accompanied by evidence that the prospective United States employer has the ability to pay the proffered wage. The petitioner must demonstrate this ability at the time the priority date is established and continuing until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence. Evidence of this ability shall be either in the form of copies of annual reports, federal tax returns, or audited financial statements.

The petitioner must demonstrate the continuing ability to pay the proffered wage beginning on the priority date, which is the date the Form ETA 750 was accepted for processing by any office within the employment system of the DOL. See 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(d). The petitioner must also demonstrate that, on the priority date, the beneficiary had the qualifications stated on its Form ETA 750 as certified by the DOL and submitted with the instant petition. Matter of Wing's Tea House, 16 I&N Dec. 158 (Act. Reg. Comm. 1977).

Here, the Form ETA 750 was initially accepted on April 30, 2001. The proffered wage as stated on the Form ETA 750 is $13.00 per hour ($27,040 per year). On the petition, the petitioner claims that it has been in the business since 1997, and has an annual gross income of $430,000 and two employees. The beneficiary did not claim to have worked for the petitioner on the Form ETA 750.

The petitioner must establish that its job offer to the beneficiary is a realistic one. Because the filing of a Form ETA 750 labor certification application establishes a priority date for any immigrant petition later based on the Form ETA 750, the petitioner must establish that the job offer was realistic as of the priority date and that the offer remained realistic for each year thereafter, until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence. The petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage is an essential element in evaluating whether a job offer is realistic. See Matter of Great Wall, 16 I&N Dec. 142 (Acting Reg. Comm. 1977); see also 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2). In evaluating whether a job offer is realistic, United States Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) requires the petitioner to demonstrate financial resources sufficient to pay the beneficiary's proffered wages, although the totality of the circumstances affecting the petitioning business will be considered if the evidence warrants such consideration. See Matter of Sonogawa, 12 I&N Dec. 612 (Reg. Comm. 1967).

On appeal, counsel asserts that the petitioner is only responsible to establish its ability to pay the proffered wage since February 2007 when it took over [REDACTED] and became the new petitioner. The underlying labor certification in this matter shows that [REDACTED] at [REDACTED] filed the Form ETA 750 for a specialty cook position on behalf of the beneficiary on April 30, 2001 and that the petitioner replaced [REDACTED] as the new employer on May 24, 2007. With the filing of the instant petition, counsel did not submit the evidence showing that the petitioner qualified as a successor-in-interest to [REDACTED]. However, it is reasonably concluded that DOL certified the underlying labor certification to the petitioner as the successor-in-interest to [REDACTED]. The successor-in-interest must not only establish its ability to pay the proffered wage from the time the successorship established to the present, but also establish the financial ability of the predecessor enterprise to have paid the certified wage at the priority date. See Matter of Dial Auto Repair Shop, Inc., 19 I&N Dec. 481 (Comm. 1986). Matter of Dial Auto is an AAO decision designated as precedent by the Commissioner. The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 103.3(c) provides that precedent decisions are binding on all USCIS employees in the administration of the Act.

Precedent decisions must be designated and published in bound volumes or as interim decisions. 8 C.F.R. § 103.9(a). Therefore, counsel's assertion that the petitioner needs to establish its ability to pay the proffered wage only from 2007 is misplaced.

In determining the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage during a given period, USCIS will first examine whether the petitioner employed and paid the beneficiary during that period. If the petitioner establishes by documentary evidence that it employed the beneficiary at a salary equal to or greater than the proffered wage, the evidence will be considered prima facie proof of the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage. The petitioner did not submit any evidence showing that it or its predecessor company paid the beneficiary any compensation for the years 2001 through the present. The petitioner failed to establish its ability to pay the proffered wage through examination of wages actually paid to the beneficiary for the years 2003 through the present. Therefore, the petitioner must demonstrate that it or its predecessor had sufficient net income or net current assets to pay the beneficiary the proffered wage for these relevant years.

If the petitioner does not establish that it employed and paid the beneficiary an amount at least equal to the proffered wage during that period, USCIS will next examine the net income figure reflected on the petitioner's federal income tax return, without consideration of depreciation or other expenses. River Street Donuts, LLC v. Napolitano, 558 F.3d 111 (1st Cir. 2009). Reliance on federal income tax returns as a basis for determining a petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage is well established by judicial precedent. Elatos Restaurant Corp. v. Sava, 632 F. Supp. 1049, 1054 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) (citing Tongatapu Woodcraft Hawaii, Ltd. v. Feldman, 736 F.2d 1305 (9th Cir. 1984)); see also Chi-Feng Chang v. Thornburgh, 719 F. Supp. 532 (N.D. Texas 1989); K.C.P. Food Co., Inc. v. Sava, 623 F. Supp. 1080 (S.D.N.Y. 1985); Ubeda v. Palmer, 539 F. Supp. 647 (N.D. Ill. 1982), aff'd, 703 F.2d 571 (7th Cir. 1983). Reliance on the petitioner's wage expense is misplaced. Showing that the petitioner paid wages in excess of the proffered wage is insufficient.

With respect to depreciation, the court in River Street Donuts noted:

The AAO recognized that a depreciation deduction is a systematic allocation of the cost of a tangible long-term asset and does not represent a specific cash expenditure during the year claimed. Furthermore, the AAO indicated that the allocation of the depreciation of a long-term asset could be spread out over the years or concentrated into a few depending on the petitioner's choice of accounting and depreciation methods. Nonetheless, the AAO explained that depreciation represents an actual cost of doing business, which could represent either the diminution in value of buildings and equipment or the accumulation of funds necessary to replace perishable equipment and buildings. Accordingly, the AAO stressed that even though amounts deducted for depreciation do not represent current use of cash, neither does it represent amounts available to pay wages.

We find that the AAO has a rational explanation for its policy of not adding depreciation back to net income. Namely, that the amount spent on a long term tangible asset is a "real" expense.

River Street Donuts at 116. "[USCIS] and judicial precedent support the use of tax returns and the net income figures in determining petitioner's ability to pay. Plaintiffs' argument that these figures should be revised by the court by adding back depreciation is without support." Chi-Feng Chang at 537 (emphasis added).

As alternate method, USCIS also reviews the petitioner's assets. Net current assets are the difference between the petitioner's current assets and current liabilities.² An LLC's year-end current assets are shown on Schedule L, lines 1(d) through 6(d) and include cash-on-hand, inventories, and receivables expected to be converted to cash within one year. Its year-end current liabilities are shown on lines 15(d) through 17(d). If the total of a LLC's end-of-year net current assets and the wages paid to the beneficiary (if any) are equal to or greater than the proffered wage, the petitioner is expected to be able to pay the proffered wage using those net current assets.

The evidence in the record indicates the petitioner is structured as a limited liability company (LLC) and filed its tax returns on IRS Form 1065, U.S. Return of Partnership Income.³ The record contains the petitioner's Form 1065 for 2006. However, as previously discussed, the successorship occurred in 2007, and therefore, the petitioner must establish its ability to pay the proffered wage from 2007 and the predecessor's ability to pay the proffered wage from 2001 to 2006. The petitioner's net income or net current assets reflected on its 2006 tax return cannot establish the predecessor's ability to pay the proffered wage in 2006.

The record does not contain any documentary evidence showing that the predecessor company paid the beneficiary the full proffered wage or had sufficient net income or net current assets in 2001 through 2006. The record does not contain any documentary evidence showing that the petitioner paid the beneficiary the full proffered wage or had sufficient net income or net current assets in 2007 through the present.

² According to Barron's Dictionary of Accounting Terms 117 (3rd ed. 2000), "current assets" consist of items having (in most cases) a life of one year or less, such as cash, marketable securities, inventory and prepaid expenses. "Current liabilities" are obligations payable (in most cases) within one year, such accounts payable, short-term notes payable, and accrued expenses (such as taxes and salaries). Id. at 118.

³ A limited liability company (LLC) is an entity formed under state law by filing articles of organization. An LLC may be classified for federal income tax purposes as if it were a sole proprietorship, a partnership or a corporation. If the LLC has only one owner, it will automatically be treated as a sole proprietorship unless an election is made to be treated as a corporation. If the LLC has two or more owners, it will automatically be considered to be a partnership unless an election is made to be treated as a corporation. If the LLC does not elect its classification, a default classification of partnership (multi-member LLC) or disregarded entity (taxed as if it were a sole proprietorship) will apply. See 26 C.F.R. § 301.7701-3. The election referred to is made using IRS Form 8832, Entity Classification Election. In the instant case, the petitioner, a multi-member LLC, is considered to be a partnership for federal tax purposes.

Therefore, from the date the Form ETA 750 was accepted for processing by the DOL in 2001, the petitioner failed to establish its or its predecessor's continuing ability to pay the proffered wage for the years 2001 through the present because it failed to submit regulatory-prescribed evidence for these years.

USCIS may also consider the overall magnitude of the petitioner's business activities in its determination of the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage. See Matter of Sonogawa, 12 I&N Dec. 612 (BIA 1967). The petitioning entity in Sonogawa had been in business for over 11 years and routinely earned a gross annual income of about $100,000. During the year in which the petition was filed in that case, the petitioner changed business locations and paid rent on both the old and new locations for five months. There were large moving costs and also a period of time when the petitioner was unable to do regular business. The Regional Commissioner determined that the petitioner's prospects for a resumption of successful business operations were well established. The petitioner was a fashion designer whose work had been featured in Time and Look magazines. Her clients included Miss Universe, movie actresses, and society matrons. The petitioner's clients had been included in the lists of the best-dressed California women. The petitioner lectured on fashion design at design and fashion shows throughout the United States and at colleges and universities in California. The Regional Commissioner's determination in Sonogawa was based in part on the petitioner's sound business reputation and outstanding reputation as a couturiere. As in Sonogawa, USCIS may, at its discretion, consider evidence relevant to the petitioner's financial ability that falls outside of a petitioner's net income and net current assets. USCIS may consider such factors as the number of years the petitioner has been doing business, the established historical growth of the petitioner's business, the overall number of employees, the occurrence of any uncharacteristic business expenditures or losses, the petitioner's reputation within its industry, whether the beneficiary is replacing a former employee or an outsourced service, or any other evidence that USCIS deems relevant to the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage.

In the instant case, the petitioner failed to demonstrate that it or its predecessor paid the beneficiary the full proffered wage for any single year and did not submit regulatory-prescribed evidence to establish its or its predecessor's ability to pay the proffered wage for any years. No unusual circumstances have been shown to exist in this case to parallel those in Sonogawa, nor has it been established that all these seven years were uncharacteristically unprofitable years for the petitioner. Thus, assessing the totality of the circumstances in this individual case, it is concluded that the petitioner has not established that it had the continuing ability to pay the proffered wage.

Counsel's assertions and evidence submitted on appeal cannot overcome the ground of denial in the director's October 8, 2008 decision that the petitioner failed to establish its and/or its predecessor's continuing ability to pay the proffered wage from the priority date to the present in this matter. Therefore, the petition cannot be approved. Accordingly, the director's decision is affirmed.

The burden of proof in these proceedings rests solely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. The petitioner has not met that burden.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
