

Identifying data deleted to prevent clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy

U.S. Department of Homeland Security
U. S. Citizenship and Immigration Services
Office of Administrative Appeals MS 2090
Washington, DC 20529-2090

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration
Services

PUBLIC COPY

B6

[Redacted]

FILE:

[Redacted]

Office: NEBRASKA SERVICE CENTER

Date:

NOV 16 2010

IN RE:

Petitioner:
Beneficiary:

[Redacted]

PETITION: Immigrant petition for Alien Worker as a Skilled Worker or Professional pursuant to section 203(b)(3) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1153(b)(3)

ON BEHALF OF PETITIONER:

[Redacted]

INSTRUCTIONS:

Enclosed please find the decision of the Administrative Appeals Office in your case. All of the documents related to this matter have been returned to the office that originally decided your case. Please be advised that any further inquiry that you might have concerning your case must be made to that office.

If you believe the law was inappropriately applied by us in reaching our decision, or you have additional information that you wish to have considered, you may file a motion to reconsider or a motion to reopen. The specific requirements for filing such a request can be found at 8 C.F.R. § 103.5. All motions must be submitted to the office that originally decided your case by filing a Form I-290B, Notice of Appeal or Motion. The fee for a Form I-290B is currently $585, but will increase to $630 on November 23, 2010. Any appeal or motion filed on or after November 23, 2010 must be filed with the $630 fee. Please be aware that 8 C.F.R. § 103.5(a)(1)(i) requires that any motion must be filed within 30 days of the decision that the motion seeks to reconsider or reopen.

Thank you,

Elizabeth McCormack

Perry Rhew
Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The preference visa petition was denied by the Director, Nebraska Service Center, and is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The petitioner is an IT consulting firm. It seeks to employ the beneficiary permanently in the United States as a software engineer, applications. As required by statute, the petition is accompanied by a Form ETA 750, Application for Alien Employment Certification, approved by the United States Department of Labor (DOL). The director determined that the petitioner had not established that it had the continuing ability to pay the beneficiary the proffered wage beginning on the priority date of the visa petition. The director denied the petition accordingly.

The record shows that the appeal is properly filed, timely and makes a specific allegation of error in law or fact. The procedural history in this case is documented by the record and incorporated into the decision. Further elaboration of the procedural history will be made only as necessary.

As set forth in the director's February 26, 2009 denial, the primary issue in this case is whether the petitioner has the ability to pay the proffered wage as of the priority date and continuing until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence.

Section 203(b)(3)(A)(i) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1153(b)(3)(A)(i), provides for the granting of preference classification to qualified immigrants who are capable, at the time of petitioning for classification under this paragraph, of performing skilled labor (requiring at least two years training or experience), not of a temporary nature, for which qualified workers are not available in the United States. Section 203(b)(3)(A)(ii) of the Act, 8 U.S.C.S. § 1153(b)(3)(A)(ii), provides for the granting of preference classification to qualified immigrants who hold baccalaureate degrees and are members of the professions.

The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2) states in pertinent part:

Ability of prospective employer to pay wage. Any petition filed by or for an employment-based immigrant which requires an offer of employment must be accompanied by evidence that the prospective United States employer has the ability to pay the proffered wage. The petitioner must demonstrate this ability at the time the priority date is established and continuing until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence. Evidence of this ability shall be either in the form of copies of annual reports, federal tax returns, or audited financial statements.

The petitioner must demonstrate the continuing ability to pay the proffered wage beginning on the priority date, which is the date the Form ETA 750 was accepted for processing by any office within the employment system of the DOL. See 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(d). The petitioner must also demonstrate that, on the priority date, the beneficiary had the qualifications stated on its Form ETA 750 as certified by the DOL and submitted with the instant petition. Matter of Wing's Tea House, 16 I&N Dec. 158 (Act. Reg. Comm. 1977).

In this matter, the Form ETA 750 was accepted on February 15, 2005. The proffered wage as stated on the Form ETA 750 is $75,000.00 per year. The Form ETA 750 states that the position requires a 4 year BA/BS degree in computer science, engineering or a related field, and 2 years experience in the job offered or a related occupation.

The AAO conducts appellate review on a de novo basis. See Soltane v. DOJ, 381 F.3d 143, 145 (3d Cir. 2004). The AAO considers all pertinent evidence in the record, including new evidence properly submitted upon appeal.¹

The evidence in the record of proceeding shows that the petitioner is structured as a C corporation. On the petition, the petitioner states that it was established in 2004 and that it currently employs 20 workers. According to the tax returns in the record, the petitioner's fiscal year is based on a calendar year. On the Form ETA 750B, signed by the beneficiary on December 9, 2004, the beneficiary claims to be presently employed by the petitioner, but does not list a start date.

The petitioner must establish that its job offer to the beneficiary is a realistic one. Because the filing of a Form ETA 750 labor certification application establishes a priority date for any immigrant petition later based on the Form ETA 750, the petitioner must establish that the job offer was realistic as of the priority date and that the offer remained realistic for each year thereafter, until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence. The petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage is an essential element in evaluating whether a job offer is realistic. See Matter of Great Wall, 16 I&N Dec. 142 (Acting Reg. Comm. 1977); see also 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2). In evaluating whether a job offer is realistic, United States Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) requires the petitioner to demonstrate financial resources sufficient to pay the beneficiary's proffered wages, although the totality of the circumstances affecting the petitioning business will be considered if the evidence warrants such consideration. See Matter of Sonogawa, 12 I&N Dec. 612 (Reg. Comm. 1967).

In determining the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage during a given period, USCIS will first examine whether the petitioner employed and paid the beneficiary during that period. If the petitioner establishes by documentary evidence that it employed the beneficiary at a salary equal to or greater than the proffered wage, the evidence will be considered prima facie proof of the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage.

The petitioner must show that it can pay the proffered wage of $75,000.00 in each year. The petitioner submitted copies of IRS Forms W-2, Wage and Tax Statements issued to the beneficiary as shown in the table below.

- In 2005, the Form W-2 stated total wages of $38,461.66 ($36,538.34 less than the proffered wage).

¹ The submission of additional evidence on appeal is allowed by the instructions to the Form I-290B, which are incorporated into the regulations at 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(a)(1).

- In 2006, the Form W-2 stated total wages of $42,597.92 ($32,402.08 less than the proffered wage).
- In 2007, the Form W-2 stated total wages of $45,173.08 ($29,826.92 less than the proffered wage).
- In 2008, the Form W-2 stated total wages of $47,724.52 ($27,275.48 less than the proffered wage).

This evidence fails to demonstrate that the petitioner paid the beneficiary the full proffered wage during any relevant timeframe including the period from the priority date in 2005 or subsequently.

If, as in this case, the petitioner does not establish that it employed and paid the beneficiary an amount at least equal to the proffered wage throughout the designated period, then USCIS will next examine the net income figure reflected on the petitioner's federal income tax return, without consideration of depreciation or other expenses. River Street Donuts, LLC v. Napolitano, 558 F.3d 111 (1st Cir. 2009). Reliance on federal income tax returns as a basis for determining a petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage is well established by judicial precedent. Elatos Restaurant Corp. v. Sava, 632 F. Supp. 1049, 1054 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) (citing Tongatapu Woodcraft Hawaii, Ltd. v. Feldman, 736 F.2d 1305 (9th Cir. 1984)); see also Chi-Feng Chang v. Thornburgh, 719 F. Supp. 532 (N.D. Texas 1989); K.C.P. Food Co., Inc. v. Sava, 623 F. Supp. 1080 (S.D.N.Y. 1985); Ubeda v. Palmer, 539 F. Supp. 647 (N.D. Ill. 1982), aff'd, 703 F.2d 571 (7th Cir. 1983). Reliance on the petitioner's gross receipts and wage expense is misplaced. Showing that the petitioner's gross receipts exceeded the proffered wage is insufficient. Similarly, the petitioner showing that it paid wages in excess of the proffered wage is insufficient.

In K.C.P. Food Co., Inc. v. Sava, 623 F. Supp. at 1084, the court held that the Immigration and Naturalization Service, now USCIS, had properly relied on the petitioner's net income figure, as stated on the petitioner's corporate income tax returns, rather than the petitioner's gross income. The court specifically rejected the argument that USCIS should have considered income before expenses were paid rather than net income.

With respect to depreciation, the court in [REDACTED] noted:

The [REDACTED] recognized that a depreciation deduction is a systematic allocation of the cost of a tangible long-term asset and does not represent a specific cash expenditure during the year claimed. Furthermore, the [REDACTED] indicated that the allocation of the depreciation of a long-term asset could be spread out over the years or concentrated into a few depending on the petitioner's choice of accounting and depreciation methods. Nonetheless, the [REDACTED] explained that depreciation represents an actual cost of doing business, which could represent either the diminution in value of buildings and equipment or the accumulation of funds necessary to replace perishable equipment and buildings. Accordingly, the [REDACTED] stressed that even though amounts deducted for depreciation do not represent current use of cash, neither does it represent amounts available to pay wages.

We find that the [REDACTED] has a rational explanation for its policy of not adding depreciation back to net income. Namely, that the amount spent on a long term tangible asset is a "real" expense.

[REDACTED]. “[USCIS] and judicial precedent support the use of tax returns and the net income figures in determining petitioner’s ability to pay. Plaintiffs’ argument that these figures should be revised by the court by adding back depreciation is without support.” Chi-Feng Chang at 537 (emphasis added).

For a C corporation, USCIS considers net income to be the figure shown on Line 28 of the Form 1120, U.S. Corporation Income Tax Return. The record before the director closed on January 13, 2009, with the receipt by the director of the petitioner’s submission of evidence in response to the director’s request for evidence. As of that date, the petitioner’s 2009 federal income tax return was not yet due. On appeal, the petitioner submits a copy of its 2006 tax return and a copy of a notice for extension to file its 2008 tax return with IRS. The petitioner’s income tax return for 2007 was the most recent return available before the director.

The petitioner’s tax returns demonstrate its net income as shown in the table below.

- In 2005, the Form 1120 stated net income of $39,582.00.
- In 2006, the Form 1120 stated net income of ($94,233.00).
- In 2007, the Form 1120 stated net income of $17,274.00.

Therefore, for the fiscal years 2006 and 2007, the petitioner did not have sufficient net income to pay the difference between the proffered wage and wages actually paid to the beneficiary.²

As an alternate means of determining the petitioner’s ability to pay the proffered wage, USCIS may review the petitioner’s net current assets. Net current assets are the difference between the petitioner’s current assets and current liabilities.³ A corporation’s year-end current assets are shown on Schedule L, lines 1 through 6. Its year-end current liabilities are shown on lines 16 through 18. If the total of a corporation’s end-of-year net current assets and the wages paid to the beneficiary (if any) are equal to or greater than the proffered wage, the petitioner is expected to be able to pay the proffered wage using those net current assets. The petitioner's tax returns demonstrate its end-of-fiscal year net current assets as shown in the table below.

² The wages paid to the beneficiary in 2005 coupled with the petitioner’s net income amount for that year, establishes its ability to pay the proffered wage for 2005. Therefore, the director’s decision with respect to the petitioner’s inability to pay the proffered wage in 2005 will be withdrawn.

³ According to Barron’s Dictionary of Accounting Terms 117 (3rd ed. 2000), “current assets” consist of items having (in most cases) a life of one year or less, such as cash, marketable securities, inventory and prepaid expenses. “Current liabilities” are obligations payable (in most cases) within one year, such accounts payable, short-term notes payable, and accrued expenses (such as taxes and salaries). Id. at 118.

- In 2006, the Form 1120 stated net current assets of ($481,026.00).
- In 2007, the Form 1120 stated net current assets of ($344,839.00).

The evidence demonstrates that for the fiscal years 2006 and 2007, the petitioner did not have sufficient net current assets to pay the difference between the proffered wage and wages actually paid to the beneficiary.

Therefore, from the date the Form ETA 750 was accepted for processing by the DOL, the petitioner had not established that it had the continuing ability to pay the beneficiary the proffered wage as of the priority date through an examination of wages paid to the beneficiary, or its net income or net current assets.

On appeal, counsel concedes the director's determination that the petitioner lacked the ability to pay the proffered wage based upon the Forms W-2, net income, and net current assets amounts. However, counsel asserts that the director erred in failing to consider the totality of the circumstances. Counsel asserts that the petitioner does have a line of credit that the tax returns were prepared on a cash basis but should be considered on an accrual basis, that retained earnings from previous tax years are available as liquid cash liquid assets are also available as is evidenced from the petitioner's bank statements. Counsel also asserts that the Current Ratio Analysis should be considered in the instant case and that depreciation should be added back to the petitioner's income. Counsel asserts that the petitioner's business has been steadily growing and that its payroll commitments have been kept, and that in assessing the totality of the circumstances it should be take into account that the worker will contribute to the business' income.

With respect to the petitioner's line of credit, the only document evidencing a line of credit to the petitioner is dated May 25, 2008 with a maturity date of May 25, 2009. The petitioner did not submit evidence of a credit line for 2006 or 2007. More importantly, contrary to counsel's claim, in calculating the ability to pay the proffered salary, USCIS will not augment the petitioner's net income or net current assets by adding in the petitioner's lines of credit. A "bank line" or "line of credit" is a bank's unenforceable commitment to make loans to a particular borrower up to a specified maximum during a specified time period. A line of credit is not a contractual or legal obligation on the part of the bank. See Barron's Dictionary of Finance and Investment Terms, 45 (1998).

Since the line of credit is a "commitment to loan" and not an existent loan, the petitioner has not established that unused funds from any line of credit were available at the time of filing the petition. As noted above, a petitioner must establish eligibility at the time of filing; a petition cannot be approved at a future date after the petitioner becomes eligible under a new set of facts. See Matter of Katigbak, 14 I&N Dec. 45, 49 (Comm. 1971). Moreover, the petitioner's existent loans will be fully considered in the evaluation of the corporation's net current assets. Comparable to the limit on a credit card, the line of credit cannot be treated as cash or as a cash asset. However, if the petitioner wishes to rely on a line of credit as evidence of ability to pay, the petitioner must submit documentary evidence, such as a detailed business plan and audited cash flow statements, to demonstrate that the line of credit will augment and not weaken its overall financial position. Finally, USCIS will give less weight to loans and debt as a means of paying salary since the debts will increase the firm's liabilities and will not improve its overall financial position. Although lines of credit and debt are an integral part of any business operation, USCIS must evaluate the overall financial position of a petitioner to determine whether the employer is making a realistic job offer and has the overall financial ability to satisfy the proffered wage. See Matter of Great Wall, 16 I&N Dec. 142 (Acting Reg. Comm. 1977).

Counsel argues that the petitioner would have sufficient income were USCIS to consider the tax returns on an accrual basis. The petitioner's tax returns were prepared pursuant to cash convention, in which revenue is recognized when it is received, and expenses are recognized when they are paid. This office would, in the alternative, have accepted tax returns prepared pursuant to accrual convention, if those were the tax returns the petitioner had actually submitted to the IRS.

This office is not, however, persuaded by an analysis in which the petitioner, or anyone on its behalf, seeks to rely on tax returns or a financial statement prepared pursuant to one method, and on appeal seeks to shift revenue or expenses from one year to another as convenient to the petitioner's present purpose. If revenues are not recognized in a given year pursuant to the cash accounting then the petitioner, whose taxes are prepared pursuant to cash rather than accrual, and who relies on its tax returns in order to show its ability to pay the proffered wage, may not use those revenues as evidence of its ability to pay the proffered wage during that year. Similarly, if expenses are recognized in a given year, the petitioner may not shift those expenses to some other year in an effort to show its ability to pay the proffered wage pursuant to some hybrid of accrual and cash accounting. The amounts shown on the petitioner's tax returns shall be considered as they were submitted to the IRS, not as amended pursuant to an accountant's adjustments. If an accountant wished to persuade this office that accrual accounting supports the petitioner's continuing ability to pay the proffered wage beginning on the priority date, then the accountant would be obliged to prepare and submit audited financial statements pertinent to the petitioning business prepared according to generally accepted accounting principles. No accountant's reports were submitted in support of the petitioner's arguments on appeal.

Counsel further argues that depreciation should be added back in to the net current income of the petitioner. USCIS rejects the idea that the petitioner's total assets should have been considered in the determination of the ability to pay the proffered wage. The petitioner's total assets include depreciable assets that the petitioner uses in its business. Those depreciable assets will not be converted to cash during the ordinary course of business and will not, therefore, become funds available to pay the proffered wage. The depreciation amounts on the petitioner's tax returns are non-cash deductions. The amounts cannot be added back to net cash as recommended, and the argument for such a procedure is without support. See Elatos, supra.

Counsel's reliance on the balances in its bank accounts is also misplaced. First, bank statements are not among the three types of evidence, enumerated in 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2), required to illustrate a petitioner's ability to pay a proffered wage. While this regulation allows additional material "in appropriate cases," the petitioner in this case has not demonstrated why the documentation specified at 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2) is inapplicable or otherwise paints an inaccurate financial picture of the petitioner. Second, bank statements show the amount in an account on a given date, and cannot show the sustainable ability to pay a proffered wage. Third, no evidence was submitted to demonstrate that the funds reported on the petitioner's bank statements somehow reflect additional available funds that were not reflected on its tax return.

Counsel claims that the current ratio, current assets/current liabilities, shows that the petitioner has the ability to pay the proffered wage in each relevant year. Financial ratio analysis is the calculation and comparison of ratios that are derived from the information in a company's financial statements. The level and historical trends of these ratios can be used to make inferences about a company's financial condition, its operations, and attractiveness as an investment. The [REDACTED] notes that there is no single correct value for a current ratio, rendering it less useful for determinations of an entity's ability to pay a specific wage during a specific period. In isolation, a financial ratio is a useless piece of information.⁴

While counsel argues that the current ratio shows the petitioner has the ability to pay the proffered wage, he provides no evidence of any industry standard that would allow a comparison with the petitioner's current ratio. In addition, he has not provided any authority or precedent decisions to support the use of current ratios in determining the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage. Moreover, the petitioner has not submitted a financial ratio analysis of its position. Additionally, because the current ratio would not be designed to demonstrate an entity's ability to take on the additional, new obligations such as paying an additional wage, this office would not be persuaded to rely upon the current ratio analysis if submitted.

⁴ The observation that a particular ratio is high or low depends on the purpose for which the ratio is being observed. In context, however, a financial ratio can give a financial analyst an excellent picture of a company's situation and the trends that are developing. A ratio gains utility by comparison to other data and standards, such as the performance of the industry in which a company competes. Ratio Analysis enables the business owner/manager to spot trends in a business and to compare its performance and condition with the average performance of similar businesses in the same industry. Important balance sheet ratios measure liquidity and solvency (a business's ability to pay its bills as they come due) and leverage (the extent to which the business is dependent on creditors' funding). Liquidity ratios indicate the ease of turning assets into cash and include the current ratio, quick ratio, and working capital. See Financial Ratio Analysis, [REDACTED] (accessed March 21, 2006); Financial Management, [REDACTED] (accessed March 21, 2006); Industry Financial Ratios, Financial Ratio Analysis, [REDACTED] (accessed March 21, 2006).

Counsel urges the consideration of the beneficiary's proposed employment as an indication that the petitioner's income will increase. Counsel cites Masonry Masters, Inc. v. Thornburgh, 875 F.2d 898 (D.C. Cir. 1989), in support of this assertion. Although part of this decision mentions the ability of the beneficiary to generate income, the holding is based on other grounds and is primarily a criticism of USCIS for failure to specify a formula used in determining the proffered wage.⁵ Further, in this instance, no detail or documentation has been provided to explain how the beneficiary's employment as a software engineer will significantly increase profits for the petitioner. This hypothesis cannot be concluded to outweigh the evidence presented in the corporate tax returns.

Counsel infers that the beneficiary, as the petitioner's employee, will contribute to the petitioner's business' income. However, there has been no evidence submitted to substantiate this claim. Against the projection of future earnings, Matter of Great Wall, 16 I&N Dec. 142, 144-145 (Acting Reg. Comm. 1977) states:

I do not feel, nor do I believe the Congress intended, that the petitioner, who admittedly could not pay the offered wage at the time the petition was filed, should subsequently become eligible to have the petition approved under a new set of facts hinged upon probability and projections, even beyond the information presented on appeal.

On appeal, counsel relies on the language in the [REDACTED] to argue that the petitioner has established its continuing ability to pay the proffered wage beginning on the priority date. The [REDACTED] consistently adjudicates appeals in accordance with the Yates memorandum. However, counsel's interpretation of the language in that memorandum is overly broad and does not comport with the plain language of the regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2) set forth in the memorandum as authority for the policy guidance therein. The regulation requires that a petitioning entity demonstrate its continuing ability to pay the proffered wage beginning on the priority date. If USCIS and the [REDACTED] were to interpret and apply the [REDACTED] as counsel urges, then in this particular factual context, the clear language in the regulation would be usurped by an interoffice guidance memorandum without binding legal effect. The petitioner must demonstrate its continuing ability to pay the proffered wage beginning on the priority date, which in this case is February 15, 2005. Demonstrating that the petitioner is paying the proffered wage in a specific year may suffice to show the petitioner's ability to pay for that year, but the petitioner must still demonstrate its ability to pay for the rest of the pertinent period of time.

Counsel also asserts that net operating losses should be taken into account. The [REDACTED] notes that the 2006 and 2007 tax returns do not reflect any net operating losses.

⁵ Subsequent to that decision, USCIS implemented a formula that involves assessing wages actually paid to the alien beneficiary, and the petitioner's net income and net current assets.

Counsel's assertions and the evidence presented on appeal cannot be concluded to outweigh the evidence of record that demonstrates that the petitioner could not pay the proffered wage from the day the Form ETA 750 was accepted for processing by the DOL.

USCIS may consider the overall magnitude of the petitioner's business activities in its determination of the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage. See Matter of Sonogawa, 12 I&N Dec. 612. The petitioning entity in Sonogawa had been in business for over 11 years and routinely earned a gross annual income of about $100,000. During the year in which the petition was filed in that case, the petitioner changed business locations and paid rent on both the old and new locations for five months. There were large moving costs and also a period of time when the petitioner was unable to do regular business. The Regional Commissioner determined that the petitioner's prospects for a resumption of successful business operations were well established. The petitioner was a fashion designer whose work had been featured in Time and Look magazines. Her clients included [REDACTED], movie actresses, and society matrons. The petitioner's clients had been included in the lists of the best-dressed California women. The petitioner lectured on fashion design at design and fashion shows throughout the United States and at colleges and universities in California. The Regional Commissioner's determination in Sonogawa was based in part on the petitioner's sound business reputation and outstanding reputation as a couturiere. As in Sonogawa, USCIS may, at its discretion, consider evidence relevant to the petitioner's financial ability that falls outside of a petitioner's net income and net current assets. USCIS may consider such factors as the number of years the petitioner has been doing business, the established historical growth of the petitioner's business, the overall number of employees, the occurrence of any uncharacteristic business expenditures or losses, the petitioner's reputation within its industry, whether the beneficiary is replacing a former employee or an outsourced service, or any other evidence that USCIS deems relevant to the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage.

In this matter, the totality of the circumstances does not establish that the petitioner had or has the ability to pay the proffered wage in 2006 and 2007. There are no facts paralleling those in Sonogawa that are present in the instant matter to a degree sufficient to establish that the petitioner had the ability to pay the proffered wage. The petitioner has not submitted evidence establishing its business reputation. [REDACTED] has the petitioner demonstrated the occurrence of any uncharacteristic business expenditures or losses in 2006 or 2007. Counsel claims that the petitioner's business has been steadily growing and that its payroll commitments have been met. Reliance on the petitioner's gross receipts and wage expense is misplaced. Showing that the petitioner's gross receipts exceeded the proffered wage is insufficient. Similarly, the petitioner showing that it paid wages in excess of the proffered wage is insufficient. Counsel also claims that the petitioner has an expectation of continued increase in business and increasing profits despite the recent economic downturn. At the I-140 immigrant visa filing stage of proceeding, evidence is required of a sponsoring employer's ability to pay a proffered wage as of the priority date, not its guarantee to support the beneficiary in the future. 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2). The petitioner has not submitted evidence to establish that the beneficiary is replacing a former employee whose primary duties were described in the Form ETA 750. Accordingly, the evidence submitted does not establish that the petitioner had the continuing ability to pay the proffered wage beginning on the priority date.

Beyond the decision of the director, USCIS records show that the petitioner has filed multiple immigrant petitions subsequent to the priority date of the instant petition; and therefore, the petitioner must establish that it had sufficient funds to pay all the wages from the priority date and continuing to the present. If the instant petition were the only petition filed by the petitioner, the petitioner would be required to produce evidence of its ability to pay the proffered wage to the single beneficiary of the instant petition. However, where a petitioner has filed multiple petitions for multiple beneficiaries which have been pending simultaneously, the petitioner must produce evidence that its job offers to each beneficiary are realistic, and therefore, that it has the ability to pay the proffered wages to each of the beneficiaries of its pending petitions, as of the priority date of each petition and continuing until the beneficiary of each petition obtains lawful permanent residence. See Matter of Great Wall, 16 I&N Dec. 142, 144-145 (Acting Reg. Comm. 1977) (petitioner must establish ability to pay as of the date of the Form ETA 750 job offer, the predecessor to the Form ETA 9089 and Form ETA 9089). See also 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2). Accordingly, even if the instant record established the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage for the instant beneficiary, which it does not, the fact that there are multiple petitions would further call into question the petitioner's eligibility for the benefit sought.

Beyond the decision of the director, the petitioner has failed to establish that the beneficiary has two years experience in the job offered or in a related occupation. On the Form ETA 750 and Form I-140, the petitioner described the specific job duties to be performed by the beneficiary as a software engineer, applications. The petitioner submitted a letter of employment dated April 10, 1999, from the managing director of [REDACTED], who stated that the company employed the beneficiary as an assistant manager-marketing and application from June 19, 1995 through April 10, 1999. The managing director stated that the beneficiary had excellent communication skills, very good technical knowledge, and possessed great leadership qualities. However, the letter does not include a specific description of the job duties performed by the beneficiary. See 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(1) and (1)(3)(ii)(A). To be eligible for approval, a beneficiary must have the education and experience specified on the labor certification as of the petition's filing date, which as noted above, is February 15, 2005. See Matter of Wing's Tea House, 16 I&N Dec. 158 (Act. Reg. Comm. 1977). The petitioner has failed to establish the beneficiary's qualifications as of the priority date. For this additional reason, the petition may not be approved.

The petition will be denied and the appeal dismissed for the above stated reasons, with each considered as an alternative grounds for denial. The burden of proof in these proceedings rests solely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. The petitioner has not met that burden.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.