DISCUSSION: The preference visa petition was denied by the Director, Texas Service Center, and is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The petitioner is an individual. She seeks to employ the beneficiary permanently in the United States as a house worker. As required by statute, the petition is accompanied by a Form ETA 750, Application for Alien Employment Certification, approved by the United States Department of Labor (DOL). The director determined that the petitioner had not established that she had the continuing ability to pay the beneficiary the proffered wage beginning on the priority date of the visa petition. The director denied the petition accordingly.

The record shows that the appeal is properly filed, timely and makes a specific allegation of error in law or fact. The procedural history in this case is documented by the record and incorporated into the decision. Further elaboration of the procedural history will be made only as necessary.

As set forth in the director's September 3, 2009 denial, the issue in this case is whether or not the petitioner has the ability to pay the proffered wage as of the priority date and continuing until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence.

Section 203(b)(3)(A)(iii) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1153(b)(3)(A)(iii), provides for the granting of preference classification to other qualified immigrants who are capable, at the time of petitioning for classification under this paragraph, of performing unskilled labor, not of a temporary or seasonal nature, for which qualified workers are not available in the United States.

The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2) states in pertinent part:

Ability of prospective employer to pay wage. Any petition filed by or for an employment-based immigrant which requires an offer of employment must be accompanied by evidence that the prospective United States employer has the ability to pay the proffered wage. The petitioner must demonstrate this ability at the time the priority date is established and continuing until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence. Evidence of this ability shall be either in the form of copies of annual reports, federal tax returns, or audited financial statements.

The petitioner must demonstrate the continuing ability to pay the proffered wage beginning on the priority date, which is the date the Form ETA 750 was accepted for processing by any office within the employment system of the DOL. See 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(d). The petitioner must also demonstrate that, on the priority date, the beneficiary had the qualifications stated on its Form ETA 750 as certified by the DOL and submitted with the instant petition. Matter of Wing's Tea House, 16 I&N Dec. 158 (Act. Reg. Comm. 1977).

Here, the Form ETA 750 was accepted on November 22, 2004. The proffered wage as stated on the Form ETA 750 is $14.54 per hour ($30,243.20 per year). The Form ETA 750 states that the position requires three months experience in the job offered.

The AAO conducts appellate review on a de novo basis. See Soltane v. DOJ, 381 F.3d 143, 145 (3d Cir. 2004). The AAO considers all pertinent evidence in the record, including new evidence properly submitted upon appeal.<sup>1</sup>

The evidence in the record of proceeding shows that the petitioner is an individual. On the Form ETA 750B, signed by the beneficiary on September 17, 2004, the beneficiary claimed to have never worked for the petitioner.

The petitioner must establish that its job offer to the beneficiary is a realistic one. Because the filing of a Form ETA 750 establishes a priority date for any immigrant petition later based on the Form ETA 750, the petitioner must establish that the job offer was realistic as of the priority date and that the offer remained realistic for each year thereafter, until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence. The petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage is an essential element in evaluating whether a job offer is realistic. See Matter of Great Wall, 16 I&N Dec. 142 (Acting Reg. Comm. 1977); see also 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2). In evaluating whether a job offer is realistic, United States Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) requires the petitioner to demonstrate financial resources sufficient to pay the beneficiary's proffered wages, although the totality of the circumstances affecting the petitioning business will be considered if the evidence warrants such consideration. See Matter of Sonogawa, 12 I&N Dec. 612 (Reg. Comm. 1967).

In determining the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage during a given period, USCIS will first examine whether the petitioner employed and paid the beneficiary during that period. If the petitioner establishes by documentary evidence that it employed the beneficiary at a salary equal to or greater than the proffered wage, the evidence will be considered prima facie proof of the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage.

Here, the petitioner did not employ the beneficiary in any of the relevant years. Therefore, a determination of ability to pay, in this case, will not consider any wage amounts paid to the beneficiary.

If, as in this case, the petitioner has not established that it paid the beneficiary an amount at least equal to the proffered wage during the required period, USCIS will next examine the net income figure reflected on the petitioner's federal income tax return, without consideration of depreciation or other expenses. River Street Donuts, LLC v. Napolitano, 558 F.3d 111 (1st Cir. 2009); Taco Especial v. Napolitano, 696 F. Supp. 2d 873 (E.D. Mich. 2010). Reliance on federal income tax returns as a basis for determining a petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage is well established by judicial precedent. Elatos Restaurant Corp. v. Sava, 632 F. Supp. 1049, 1054 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) (citing Tongatapu Woodcraft Hawaii, Ltd. v. Feldman, 736 F.2d 1305 (9th Cir. 1984)); see also Chi-Feng Chang v. Thornburgh, 719 F. Supp. 532 (N.D. Texas 1989); K.C.P. Food Co., Inc. v. Sava, <sup>1</sup> The submission of additional evidence on appeal is allowed by the instructions to the Form I-290B, which are incorporated into the regulations at 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(a)(1). The record in the instant case provides no reason to preclude consideration of any of the documents newly submitted on appeal. See Matter of Soriano, 19 I&N Dec. 764 (BIA 1988).

623 F. Supp. 1080 (S.D.N.Y. 1985); Ubeda v. Palmer, 539 F. Supp. 647 (N.D. Ill. 1982), aff'd, 703 F.2d 571 (7th Cir. 1983).

The petitioner is an individual. Therefore the individual's adjusted gross income, assets and liabilities are also considered as part of the petitioner's ability to pay. Individuals report income and expenses on their IRS Form 1040 federal tax return each year. Individuals must show that they can cover their existing expenses as well as pay the proffered wage out of their adjusted gross income or other available funds. In addition, individuals must show that they can sustain themselves and their dependents. See Ubeda v. Palmer, 539 F. Supp. 647 (N.D. Ill. 1982), aff'd, 703 F.2d 571 (7th Cir. 1983).

In the instant case, the petitioner's tax returns reflect that she had a family of five in 2004, a family of three in 2005, 2007 and 2009, and a family of two in 2006 and 2008. The petitioner submitted her tax returns for 2004 through 2009. The petitioner also submitted a marriage certificate showing that she married [REDACTED] in 2007. The petitioner and her spouse filed separate tax returns for 2007 and 2008. The petitioner submitted a list of her yearly expenses which will also be considered. The petitioner's tax returns show her Adjusted Gross Income and expenses as detailed in the table below.

Year	Adjusted Gross Income	Expenses	Amount Available to Pay Proffered Wage
2009	$77,177	$92,488.80	$0
2008	$294,425	$92,488.80	$201,936.20
2007	$285,425	$92,488.80	$192,936.20
2006	$74,512	$92,488.80	$0
2005	$36,131	$92,488.80	$0
2004	$456,482	$92,488.80	$363,993.20

The petitioner's adjusted gross income was sufficient to pay the proffered wage in 2004, 2007, and 2008. The petitioner's adjusted gross income was insufficient to pay the proffered wage in 2005, 2006, and 2009. It is improbable that the petitioner could support herself on a deficit, which is what remains after reducing the adjusted gross income by the amount required to pay the proffered wage.

In a request for evidence (RFE) dated February 17, 2011, the AAO requested the following documents from the petitioner: a copy of her divorce decree; copies of court orders; copies of any other agreements between the petitioner and her former husband regarding payment of alimony and child support; independent objective evidence of all alimony and child support payments received by the petitioner from her former husband in 2005 and 2006 (i.e., copies of cancelled checks, statements issued by the local child support enforcement division, etc.); and any other additional evidence.

In response to the RFE, the petitioner submitted a divorce decree, settlement agreement, and financial records from Bank of America. The petitioner did not submit independent objective evidence of all alimony and child support payments received by the petitioner from her former husband in 2005 and 2006. The failure to submit requested evidence which precludes a material line of inquiry shall be grounds for denying the petition. See 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(b)(14).

The petitioner's bank statements show support payments for 2010 and 2011. Thus, the petitioner has shown that her adjusted gross income was sufficient to pay the proffered wage in 2010 and 2011. However, no evidence was submitted to show alimony and child support payments received by the petitioner in 2005, 2006, and 2009.<sup>2</sup>

USCIS may consider evidence relevant to the petitioner's financial ability that falls outside of her adjusted gross income in its determination of the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage. See Matter of Sonogawa, 12 I&N Dec. 612 (Reg'l Comm'r 1967).<sup>3</sup> USCIS may consider such factors as any uncharacteristic expenditures or losses incurred by the petitioner, whether the beneficiary is replacing a former household worker or an outsourced service, or any other evidence that USCIS deems relevant to the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage.

In the instant case, there is no independent objective evidence of alimony and child support payments received by the petitioner from her former husband in 2005 and 2006. Thus, assessing the totality of the circumstances in this individual case, it is concluded that the petitioner has not established that she had the continuing ability to pay the proffered wage.

The evidence submitted does not establish that the petitioner had the continuing ability to pay the proffered wage beginning on the priority date.

The burden of proof in these proceedings rests solely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. The petitioner has not met that burden.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.

<sup>3</sup> The petitioning entity in Sonogawa had been in business for over 11 years and routinely earned a gross annual income of about $100,000. During the year in which the petition was filed in that case, the petitioner changed business locations and paid rent on both the old and new locations for five months. There were large moving costs and also a period of time when the petitioner was unable to do regular business. The Regional Commissioner determined that the petitioner's prospects for a resumption of successful business operations were well established. The petitioner was a fashion designer whose work had been featured in Time and Look magazines. Her clients included Miss Universe, movie actresses, and society matrons. The petitioner's clients had been included in the lists of the best-dressed California women. The petitioner lectured on fashion design at design and fashion shows throughout the United States and at colleges and universities in California. The Regional Commissioner's determination in Sonogawa was based in part on the petitioner's sound business reputation and outstanding reputation as a couturiere.
