Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The preference visa petition was denied by the Director, Nebraska Service Center, and is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The petitioner is an auto paint and body shop. The petitioner seeks to classify the beneficiary as a manager. As required by statute, a Form ETA 750, Application for Alien Employment Certification, approved by the United States Department of Labor (DOL), accompanied the petition. The director determined that the petitioner failed to demonstrate a continuing ability to pay the proffered wage beginning on the priority date.

The record shows that the appeal is properly filed, timely and makes a specific allegation of error in law or fact. The procedural history in this case is documented by the record and incorporated into the decision. Further elaboration of the procedural history will be made only as necessary.

As set forth in the director's denial, the issue in this case is whether or not the petitioner has the ability to pay the proffered wage as of the priority date and continuing until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence.

Section 203(b)(3)(A)(i) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1153(b)(3)(A)(i), provides for the granting of preference classification to qualified immigrants who are capable, at the time of petitioning for classification under this paragraph, of performing skilled labor (requiring at least two years training or experience), not of a temporary nature, for which qualified workers are not available in the United States.

The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2) states in pertinent part:

Ability of prospective employer to pay wage. Any petition filed by or for an employment-based immigrant which requires an offer of employment must be accompanied by evidence that the prospective United States employer has the ability to pay the proffered wage. The petitioner must demonstrate this ability at the time the priority date is established and continuing until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence. Evidence of this ability shall be either in the form of copies of annual reports, federal tax returns, or audited financial statements.

The petitioner must demonstrate the continuing ability to pay the proffered wage beginning on the priority date, which is the date the Form ETA 750 was accepted for processing by any office within the employment system of the DOL. See 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(d). The petitioner must also demonstrate that, on the priority date, the beneficiary had the qualifications stated on its Form ETA 750 as certified by the DOL and submitted with the instant petition. Matter of Wing's Tea House, 16 I&N Dec. 158 (Act. Reg. Comm. 1977).

Here, the Form ETA 750 was accepted on May 5, 2004. The proffered wage as stated on the Form ETA 750 is $59,030.00 per year. The Form ETA 750 indicates that the position requires two years of experience in the job offered or two years of experience in a related occupation, management.

The AAO conducts appellate review on a de novo basis. See Soltane v. DOJ, 381 F.3d 143, 145 (3d Cir. 2004). The AAO considers all pertinent evidence in the record, including new evidence properly submitted upon appeal.<sup>1</sup>

The evidence in the record of proceeding shows that the petitioner is a multi-member limited liability company (LLC).<sup>2</sup> On the Form ETA 750, signed by the beneficiary, the beneficiary does not claim to have been employed by the petitioner.

The petitioner must establish that its job offer to the beneficiary is a realistic one. Because the filing of a Form ETA 750 labor certification application establishes a priority date for any immigrant petition later based on the Form ETA 750, the petitioner must establish that the job offer was realistic as of the priority date and that the offer remained realistic for each year thereafter, until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence. The petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage is an essential element in evaluating whether a job offer is realistic. See Matter of Great Wall, 16 I&N Dec. 142 (Acting Reg. Comm. 1977); see also 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2). In evaluating whether a job offer is realistic, United States Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) requires the petitioner to demonstrate financial resources sufficient to pay the beneficiary's proffered wages, although the totality of the circumstances affecting the petitioning business will be considered if the evidence warrants such consideration. See Matter of Sonogawa, 12 I&N Dec. 612 (Reg. Comm. 1967).

On appeal, counsel asserts that the director failed to consider all of the facts and evidence in the case in order to obtain an accurate account of the petitioner's financial ability to pay the proffered wage.

In determining the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage during a given period USCIS will first examine whether the petitioner employed and paid the beneficiary during that period. If the petitioner establishes by documentary evidence that it employed the beneficiary at a salary equal to or greater than the proffered wage, the evidence will be considered prima facie proof of the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage. The proffered wage in this case is $59,030.00.

<sup>1</sup> The submission of additional evidence on appeal is allowed by the instructions to the Form I-290B, which are incorporated into the regulations at 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(a)(1).

<sup>2</sup> A limited liability company is an entity formed under state law by filing articles of organization. A limited liability company may be classified for federal income tax purposes as if it were a sole proprietorship, a partnership or a corporation. If the LLC has only one owner, it will automatically be treated as a sole proprietorship unless an election is made to be treated as a corporation. If the LLC has two or more owners, it will automatically be considered to be a partnership unless an election is made to be treated as a corporation. If the LLC does not elect its classification, a default classification of partnership (multi-member LLC) or disregarded entity (taxed as if it were a sole proprietorship) will apply. See 26 C.F.R. § 301.7701-3. The election referred to is made using IRS Form 8832, Entity Classification Election.

The petitioner did not submit any evidence to demonstrate that it employed the beneficiary. Therefore, for the years 2004, 2005, 2006, and 2007, the petitioner has not established that it paid the beneficiary the proffered wage.

If, as in this case, the petitioner does not establish that it employed and paid the beneficiary an amount at least equal to the proffered wage throughout the designated period, then USCIS will next examine the net income figure reflected on the petitioner's federal income tax return, without consideration of depreciation or other expenses. River Street Donuts, LLC v. Napolitano, 558 F.3d 111 (1st Cir. 2009); Taco Especial v. Napolitano, 696 F. Supp. 2d 873 (E.D. Mich. 2010). Reliance on federal income tax returns as a basis for determining a petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage is well established by judicial precedent. Elatos Restaurant Corp. v. Sava, 632 F. Supp. 1049, 1054 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) (citing Tongatapu Woodcraft Hawaii, Ltd. v. Feldman, 736 F.2d 1305 (9th Cir. 1984)); see also Chi-Feng Chang v. Thornburgh, 719 F. Supp. 532 (N.D. Texas 1989); K.C.P. Food Co., Inc. v. Sava, 623 F. Supp. 1080 (S.D.N.Y. 1985); Ubeda v. Palmer, 539 F. Supp. 647 (N.D. Ill. 1982), aff'd, 703 F.2d 571 (7th Cir. 1983). Reliance on the petitioner's gross receipts and wage expense is misplaced. Showing that the petitioner's gross receipts exceeded the proffered wage is insufficient. Similarly showing that the petitioner paid wages in excess of the proffered wage is insufficient.

In K.C.P. Food Co., Inc. v. Sava, 623 F. Supp. at 1084, the court held that the Immigration and Naturalization Service, now USCIS, had properly relied on the petitioner's net income figure, as stated on the petitioner's corporate income tax returns, rather than the petitioner's gross income. The court specifically rejected the argument that USCIS should have considered income before expenses were paid rather than net income. See Taco Especial v. Napolitano, 696 F. Supp. 2d at 881 (gross profits overstate an employer's ability to pay because it ignores other necessary expenses).

With respect to depreciation, the court in River Street Donuts noted:

The AAO recognized that a depreciation deduction is a systematic allocation of the cost of a tangible long-term asset and does not represent a specific cash expenditure during the year claimed. Furthermore, the AAO indicated that the allocation of the depreciation of a long-term asset could be spread out over the years or concentrated into a few depending on the petitioner's choice of accounting and depreciation methods. Nonetheless, the AAO explained that depreciation represents an actual cost of doing business, which could represent either the diminution in value of buildings and equipment or the accumulation of funds necessary to replace perishable equipment and buildings. Accordingly, the AAO stressed that even though amounts deducted for depreciation do not represent current use of cash, neither does it represent amounts available to pay wages.

We find that the AAO has a rational explanation for its policy of not adding depreciation back to net income. Namely, that the amount spent on a long term tangible asset is a "real" expense.

River Street Donuts at 118. “[USCIS] and judicial precedent support the use of tax returns and the net income figures in determining petitioner’s ability to pay. Plaintiffs’ argument that these figures should be revised by the court by adding back depreciation is without support.” Chi-Feng Chang at 537 (emphasis added).

The petitioner’s federal income tax returns stated its net income as detailed below.

Therefore, for the years 2004, 2005, 2006, and 2007, the petitioner did not have sufficient net income to pay the proffered wage.

As an alternate means of determining the petitioner’s ability to pay the proffered wage, USCIS may review the petitioner’s net current assets. Net current assets are the difference between the petitioner’s current assets and current liabilities.<sup>5</sup> An LLC’s year-end current assets are shown on Schedule L, lines 1 through 6. Its year-end current liabilities are shown on lines 15 through 17. If the total of an LLC’s end-of-year net current assets and the wages paid to the beneficiary (if any) are equal to or greater than the proffered wage, the petitioner is expected to be able to pay the proffered wage using those net current assets. The petitioner’s tax returns demonstrate its end-of-year net current assets as shown in the table below.

<sup>3</sup> For an LLC filing taxes like a partnership, where income is exclusively from a trade or business, USCIS considers net income to be the figure shown on Line 22 of the Form 1065, U.S. Partnership Income Tax Return. However, where an LLC has income, credits, deductions or other adjustments from sources other than a trade or business, they are reported on Schedule K. If the Schedule K has relevant entries for additional income or additional credits, deductions or other adjustments, net income is found on page 4 of IRS Form 1065 at line 1 of the Analysis of Net Income (Loss) of Schedule K.

<sup>4</sup> Although the petitioner submitted a copy of a notice of extension to file its 2007 company income tax return, the notice indicates that the petitioner was afforded a six month extension. However, to date, some three and one-half years later, the petitioner has not provided a copy of its tax return for 2007.

<sup>5</sup> According to Barron’s Dictionary of Accounting Terms 117 (3rd ed. 2000), “current assets” consist of items having (in most cases) a life of one year or less, such as cash, marketable securities, inventory and prepaid expenses. “Current liabilities” are obligations payable (in most cases) within one year, such accounts payable, short-term notes payable, and accrued expenses (such as taxes and salaries). Id. at 118.

Therefore, for the years 2004, 2005, 2006, and 2007, the record shows that the petitioner did not have sufficient net current assets to pay the proffered wage.

Therefore, from the date the Form ETA 750 was accepted for processing by the DOL, the petitioner had not established that it had the continuing ability to pay the beneficiary the proffered wage as of the priority date through an examination of wages paid to the beneficiary, or its net income or net current assets.

Counsel submits on appeal a "company agreement" which indicates that it was entered into on July 1, 2004. Counsel asserts on appeal that the "company agreement" indicates that members of the LLC will be personally liable for wages owed to employees where the company does not have the financial ability to pay such wages. Counsel further asserts that with this agreement, the owner's assets should be taken into consideration in determining the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage.

Contrary to counsel's claims, USCIS (legacy INS) has long held that it may not "pierce the corporate veil" and look to the assets of the corporation's, or the LLC's owners to satisfy the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage. It is an elementary rule that a corporation or an LLC is a separate and distinct legal entity from its owners, shareholders, and members. See Matter of M, 8 I&N Dec. 24 (BIA 1958), Matter of Aphrodite Investments, Ltd., 17 I&N Dec. 530 (Comm'r 1980), and Matter of Tessel, 17 I&N Dec. 631 (Acting Assoc. Comm'r 1980). Consequently, assets of its shareholders, members, or of other enterprises or corporations cannot be considered in determining the petitioning LLC's ability to pay the proffered wage. Furthermore, there is no evidence in the record to demonstrate that the "company agreement" would be enforceable by USCIS, any unpaid employees, or the state of Texas. Going on record without supporting documentary evidence is not sufficient for purposes of meeting the burden of proof in these proceedings. Matter of Soffici, 22 I&N Dec. 158, 165 (Comm'r 1998) (citing Matter of Treasure Craft of California, 14 I&N Dec. 190 (Reg'l Comm'r 1972)).

In addition, the petitioner has not provided any evidence to show the agreement's effect upon its Certificate of Formation-Limited Liability Company that should have been filed in the state of Texas. It is noted that although the petitioner was given an opportunity to provide evidence of its ability to pay the proffered wage in response to the director's Request for Evidence (RFE) dated May 5, 2008, it elected not to file the agreement until on appeal. A petitioner may not make material changes to a petition in an effort to make a deficient petition conform to USCIS requirements. See Matter of Izummi, 22 I&N Dec. 169, 176 (Assoc. Comm'r 1988). Doubt cast on any aspect of the petitioner's evidence may lead to a reevaluation of the reliability and sufficiency of the remaining evidence offered in support of the visa petition. It is incumbent upon the petitioner to resolve any inconsistencies in the record by independent objective evidence, and attempts to explain or reconcile such inconsistencies, absent competent objective evidence pointing to where the truth, in fact, lies, will not suffice. Matter of Ho, 19 I&N Dec. 582, 591-592 (BIA 1988). Regardless, although the “company agreement” indicates that the business entity was formed and agreed upon on July 1, 2004, the petitioner’s Forms 1065 tax returns and Form I-140 indicates that the business entity was established on April 22, 2002. Therefore, the AAO cannot take the agreement into consideration in determining the petitioner’s ability to pay the proffered wage.

Crucially, even if the AAO were to consider the personal assets of the members of the petitioning LLC, the record fails to establish that these members would have been able to pay the proffered wage (or pay the difference between the petitioner’s net income and net current assets) since the priority date from their personal assets. The only evidence in the record of their financial capabilities in 2004, 2005, and 2006 are unaudited, internally-created “personal financial statements.” These statements are not supported by any evidence, such as bank and brokerage account statements, and are the claimed assets not balanced against the members’ recurring household expenses and current liabilities. The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2) makes clear that where a petitioner relies on financial statements to demonstrate its ability to pay the proffered wage, those financial statements must be audited. As there is no accountant’s report accompanying these statements, the AAO cannot conclude that they are audited statements. Unaudited financial statements are the representations of management. The unsupported representations of management are not reliable evidence and are insufficient to demonstrate the ability to pay the proffered wage. Furthermore, and despite their scant evidentiary value, the personal financial statements indicate that the members had limited liquid assets available and substantial liabilities, the repayment terms of which were not disclosed. Overall, the “personal financial statements” would not establish that the members had the ability to pay the proffered wage to the beneficiary since the priority date even if the AAO were to take into considering the members’ financial strength.

Moreover, counsel implies that the petitioner’s indebtedness to the members of the LLC could be used to establish the petitioner’s ability to pay the proffered wage. However, these debts are listed as liabilities on the LLC’s tax returns and are thus not available to pay the proffered wage. A liability will not be considered to be an asset. To the extent this indebtedness is an asset of the individual members, not only will the AAO not pierce the corporate veil (see supra), it has not been established that the members could realistically collect this debt from the petitioner and have it available to pay the proffered wage. The existence of this indebtedness in no way establishes that either the LLC or its members had, or have the sustained, continuing ability to pay the beneficiary the proffered wage since the priority date.

Also, counsel is citing Ranchito Coletero, 2002-INA-104 (2004 BALCA), and similar decisions, for the premise that some entities fail to show profits and typically rely upon individual or family assets. Counsel does not state how the DOL’s Board of Alien Labor Certification Appeals (BALCA) precedent is binding on the AAO. While 8 C.F.R. § 103.3(c) provides that precedent decisions of USCIS are binding on all its employees in the administration of the Act, BALCA decisions are not similarly binding. Precedent decisions must be designated and published in bound volumes or as interim decisions. 8 C.F.R. § 103.9(a). Moreover, Ranchito Coletero deals with a sole proprietorship and is not directly applicable to the instant petition, which deals with an LLC.

Counsel urges the consideration of the beneficiary's proposed employment as an indication that the petitioner's income will increase. However, in this instance, insufficient documentation has been provided to explain how the beneficiary's employment as a paint shop manager will significantly increase profits for the petitioner. This hypothesis cannot be concluded to outweigh the evidence in the record. Against the projection of future earnings, Matter of Great Wall, 16 I&N Dec. 142, 144-145 (Acting Reg'l Comm'r 1977), states:

I do not feel, nor do I believe the Congress intended, that the petitioner, who admittedly could not pay the offered wage at the time the petition was filed, should subsequently become eligible to have the petition approved under a new set of facts hinged upon probability and projections, even beyond the information presented on appeal.

Counsel's reliance on the balances in the petitioner's bank accounts is misplaced. First, bank statements are not among the three types of evidence, enumerated in 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2), required to illustrate a petitioner's ability to pay a proffered wage. While this regulation allows additional material "in appropriate cases," the petitioner in this case has not demonstrated why the documentation specified at 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2) is inapplicable or otherwise paints an inaccurate financial picture of the petitioner. Second, bank statements show the amount in an account on a given date, and cannot show the sustainable ability to pay a proffered wage. Third, no evidence was submitted to demonstrate that the funds reported on the petitioner's bank statements somehow reflect additional available funds that were not reflected on its tax return(s), such as the petitioner's taxable income (income minus deductions) or the cash specified on Schedule L that was already considered in determining the petitioner's net current assets.

Although counsel claims that the petitioner's gross receipts have increased over time, reliance on the petitioner's gross receipts to establish the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage is misplaced. As noted above, USCIS properly relies on the petitioner's net income, as stated on the petitioner's corporate tax returns. River Street Donuts, LLC v. Napolitano, 558 F.3d at 116; K.C.P. Food Co., Inc. v. Sava, 623 F. Supp. at 1084.

It is further noted that although the petitioner's tax records demonstrate an increase in profit, USCIS records indicate that the petitioner has filed other immigrant petitions since the petitioner's establishment in 2002; and therefore, the petitioner must establish that it had sufficient funds to pay all the wages from the priority date and continuing to the present. If the instant petition were the only petition filed by the petitioner, the petitioner would be required to produce evidence of its ability to pay the proffered wage to the single beneficiary of the instant petition. However, where a petitioner has filed multiple petitions for multiple beneficiaries which have been pending simultaneously, the petitioner must produce evidence that its job offers to each beneficiary are realistic, and therefore, that it has the ability to pay the proffered wages to each of the beneficiaries of its pending petitions, as of the priority date of each petition and continuing until the beneficiary of each petition obtains lawful permanent residence. See Matter of Great Wall, 16 I&N Dec. 142, 144-145 (Acting Reg. Comm. 1977) (petitioner must establish ability to pay as of the date of the Form ETA 750 job offer). See also 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2).

Counsel's assertions and the evidence presented on appeal cannot be concluded to outweigh the evidence of record that demonstrates that the petitioner could not pay the proffered wage from the day the Form ETA 750 was accepted for processing by the DOL.

USCIS may consider the overall magnitude of the petitioner's business activities in its determination of the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage. See Matter of Sonogawa, 12 I&N Dec. 612. The petitioning entity in Sonogawa had been in business for over 11 years and routinely earned a gross annual income of about $100,000. During the year in which the petition was filed in that case, the petitioner changed business locations and paid rent on both the old and new locations for five months. There were large moving costs and also a period of time when the petitioner was unable to do regular business. The Regional Commissioner determined that the petitioner's prospects for a resumption of successful business operations were well established. The petitioner was a fashion designer whose work had been featured in Time and Look magazines. Her clients included [REDACTED] movie actresses, and society matrons. The petitioner's clients had been included in the lists of the best-dressed California women. The petitioner lectured on fashion design at design and fashion shows throughout the United States and at colleges and universities in California. The Regional Commissioner's determination in Sonogawa was based in part on the petitioner's sound business reputation and outstanding reputation as a couturiere. As in Sonogawa, USCIS may, at its discretion, consider evidence relevant to the petitioner's financial ability that falls outside of a petitioner's net income and net current assets. USCIS may consider such factors as the number of years the petitioner has been doing business, the established historical growth of the petitioner's business, the overall number of employees, the occurrence of any uncharacteristic business expenditures or losses, the petitioner's reputation within its industry, whether the beneficiary is replacing a former employee as is stated here or an outsourced service, or any other evidence that USCIS deems relevant to the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage.

In assessing the totality of the circumstances in this case, it is concluded that the petitioner has not established that it had the continuing ability to pay the proffered wage. There are no facts paralleling those in Sonogawa that are present in the instant matter to a degree sufficient to establish that the petitioner had the ability to pay the proffered wage. The petitioner has not demonstrated the occurrence of any uncharacteristic business expenditures or losses in any of the relevant years which would circumvent its inability to pay the proffered wage. The petitioner has not submitted evidence to establish that the beneficiary is replacing a former employee whose primary duties were described in the Form ETA 750. Counsel suggests that USCIS should consider the petitioner's anticipated business growth and increased profits in the future. While the petitioner may anticipate business growth and increased profits in the future, it still must show that it had such capacity beginning on the priority date, May 5, 2004. Furthermore, as noted above, the petitioner has filed other immigrant petitions for other beneficiaries that have been pending simultaneously with the instant petition. It is not realistic that the petitioner could have paid the proffered wage to the beneficiary, assessing the totality of the circumstances. Going on record without supporting documentary evidence is not sufficient for purposes of meeting the burden of proof in these proceedings. Matter of Soffici at 165.

Beyond the decision of the director, the petitioner will also be denied because it has not been established that the beneficiary is qualified for the proffered position. According to the Form ETA 750, the position requires two years of experience in the job offered or two years of experience in management. On the Form ETA 750 and Form I-140, the petitioner described the specific job duties to be performed by the beneficiary. The petitioner submitted a letter from a former officer of [REDACTED] who stated that the beneficiary was employed by the company as a retail manager, and that the beneficiary reported to him from April 2001 through October 2002 (one and one-half years). The letter does not indicate that the beneficiary was employed for two years as required by the Form ETA 750. See 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(1) and (l)(3)(ii)(A). In addition, the beneficiary stated, under penalty of perjury on the Form ETA 750 that he had been employed by Dollar Class, Inc. from November 2002 through May 5, 2004, the day he signed the Form ETA 750. The petitioner has not provided any additional evidence of the beneficiary's employment. To be eligible for approval, a beneficiary must have the education and experience specified on the labor certification as of the petition's filing date, which as noted above, is May 5, 2004. See Matter of Wing's Tea House, 16 I&N Dec. 158 (Act. Reg. Comm. 1977). Accordingly, the petition will be denied for this additional reason.

Based upon the evidence submitted, the petitioner did not establish that it had the continuing ability to pay the proffered wage.

The burden of proof in these proceedings rests solely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. The petitioner has not met that burden.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
