Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The preference visa petition was denied by the Director, Nebraska Service Center (the director), and is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The petitioner is a renovation and painting business. It seeks to employ the beneficiary permanently in the United States as an interior painter. As required by statute, the petition is accompanied by a Form ETA 750, Application for Alien Employment Certification, approved by the United States Department of Labor (DOL). The director determined that the petitioner had not established that it had the continuing ability to pay the beneficiary the proffered wage beginning on the priority date of the visa petition. The director denied the petition accordingly.

The record shows that the appeal is properly filed and timely and makes a specific allegation of error in law or fact. The procedural history in this case is documented by the record and incorporated into the decision. Further elaboration of the procedural history will be made only as necessary.

As set forth in the director's April 17, 2009 denial, the single issue in this case is whether or not the petitioner has the ability to pay the proffered wage as of the priority date and continuing until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence.

Section 203(b)(3)(A)(i) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1153(b)(3)(A)(i), provides for the granting of preference classification to qualified immigrants who are capable, at the time of petitioning for classification under this paragraph, of performing skilled labor (requiring at least two years training or experience), not of a temporary nature, for which qualified workers are not available in the United States.

The regulation 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2) states in pertinent part:

> Ability of prospective employer to pay wage. Any petition filed by or for an employment-based immigrant which requires an offer of employment must be accompanied by evidence that the prospective United States employer has the ability to pay the proffered wage. The petitioner must demonstrate this ability at the time the priority date is established and continuing until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence. Evidence of this ability shall be either in the form of copies of annual reports, federal tax returns, or audited financial statements.

The petitioner must demonstrate the continuing ability to pay the proffered wage beginning on the priority date, which is the date the Form ETA 750, Application for Alien Employment Certification, was accepted for processing by any office within the employment system of the DOL. See 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(d). The petitioner must also demonstrate that, on the priority date, the beneficiary had the qualifications stated on its Form ETA 750, Application for Alien Employment Certification, as certified by the DOL and submitted with the instant petition. Matter of Wing's Tea House, 16 I&N Dec. 158 (Acting Reg'l Comm'r 1977).

Here, the Form ETA 750 was accepted on April 26, 2001. The proffered wage as stated on the Form ETA 750 is $14.00 per hour ($29,120 per year). The Form ETA 750 states that the position requires two years of experience in the job offered.

The AAO conducts appellate review on a de novo basis. See Soltane v. DOJ, 381 F.3d 143, 145 (3d Cir. 2004). The AAO considers all pertinent evidence in the record, including new evidence properly submitted upon appeal.[1]

On appeal, counsel submits a brief; and copies of the petitioner's Schedule C of Form 1040 for 2001, 2002, 2003, 2004, 2005, 2006 and 2007. Counsel did not, however, provide the associated IRS Form 1040 for those years with the appeal.

The evidence in the record of proceeding shows that the petitioner is structured as a sole proprietorship. On the petition, the petitioner claimed to have been established in 1987 and currently to employ two workers.[2] On the Form ETA 750B, signed by the beneficiary on April 16, 2001, the beneficiary claimed to work for the petitioner between August and November 1999.

On appeal, counsel asserts that the director erred in his analysis of the petitioner's ability to pay, interpreting the regulations "too narrowly." Counsel asserts that the director erroneously based his determination of the petitioner's ability to pay on the petitioner's net income, rather than its gross revenues. Counsel also asserts that the director should have considered "assets and other available funds" in his determination. Additionally, counsel asserts that the director should have considered the petitioner's ability to reduce business expenses, use credit and increase its business income through the hiring of the beneficiary.

The petitioner must establish that its job offer to the beneficiary is a realistic one. Because the filing of an ETA 750 labor certification application establishes a priority date for any immigrant petition later based on the ETA 750, the petitioner must establish that the job offer was realistic as of the priority date and that the offer remained realistic for each year thereafter, until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence. The petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage is an essential element in

[1] The submission of additional evidence on appeal is allowed by the instructions to the Form I-290B, which are incorporated into the regulations by the regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(a)(1). The record in the instant case provides no reason to preclude consideration of any of the documents newly submitted on appeal. See Matter of Soriano, 19 I&N Dec. 764 (BIA 1988).

[2] The petitioner paid no wages or salaries in 2006 or 2007. Further, in Part III of Schedule C for 2006, the petitioner identified $0 for cost of labor. The petitioner provided no Part III of Schedule C for 2007.

It is incumbent on the petitioner to resolve any inconsistencies in the record by independent objective evidence, and attempts to explain or reconcile such inconsistencies, absent competent objective evidence pointing to where the truth, in fact, lies, will not suffice. Matter of Ho, 19 I&N Dec. 582, 591-592 (BIA 1988).

evaluating whether a job offer is realistic. See Matter of Great Wall, 16 I&N Dec. 142 (Acting Reg'l Comm'r 1977); see also 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2). In evaluating whether a job offer is realistic, United States Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) requires the petitioner to demonstrate financial resources sufficient to pay the beneficiary's proffered wages, although the totality of the circumstances affecting the petitioning business will be considered if the evidence warrants such consideration. See Matter of Sonegawa, 12 I&N Dec. 612 (Reg'l Comm'r 1967).

In determining the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage during a given period, USCIS will first examine whether the petitioner employed and paid the beneficiary during that period. If the petitioner establishes by documentary evidence that it employed the beneficiary at a salary equal to or greater than the proffered wage, the evidence will be considered prima facie proof of the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage. In the instant case, the beneficiary has not claimed to have worked for the petitioner during the period of time under consideration. Further, the petitioner has provided neither evidence of having employed the beneficiary nor evidence of having paid the beneficiary any wages at any time from the priority date onwards.

If the petitioner does not establish that it employed and paid the beneficiary an amount at least equal to the proffered wage during that period, USCIS will next examine the net income figure reflected on the petitioner's federal income tax return, without consideration of depreciation or other expenses. River Street Donuts, LLC v. Napolitano, 558 F.3d 111 (1st Cir. 2009); Taco Especial v. Napolitano, 696 F. Supp. 2d 873 (E.D. Mich. 2010), aff'd, No. 10-1517 (6th Cir. filed Nov. 10, 2011). Reliance on federal income tax returns as a basis for determining a petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage is well established by judicial precedent. Elatos Restaurant Corp. v. Sava, 632 F. Supp. 1049, 1054 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) (citing Tongatapu Woodcraft Hawaii, Ltd. v. Feldman, 736 F.2d 1305 (9th Cir. 1984)); see also Chi-Feng Chang v. Thornburgh, 719 F. Supp. 532 (N.D. Texas 1989); K.C.P. Food Co., Inc. v. Sava, 623 F. Supp. 1080 (S.D.N.Y. 1985); Ubeda v. Palmer, 539 F. Supp. 647 (N.D. Ill. 1982), aff'd, 703 F.2d 571 (7th Cir. 1983).

The petitioner is a sole proprietorship, a business in which one person operates the business in his or her personal capacity. Black's Law Dictionary 1398 (7th Ed. 1999). Unlike a corporation, a sole proprietorship does not exist as an entity apart from the individual owner. See Matter of United Investment Group, 19 I&N Dec. 248, 250 (Comm'r 1984). Therefore the sole proprietor's adjusted gross income, assets and personal liabilities are also considered as part of the petitioner's ability to pay. Sole proprietors report income and expenses from their businesses on their individual (Form 1040) federal tax return each year. The business-related income and expenses are reported on Schedule C and are carried forward to the first page of the tax return. Sole proprietors must show that they can cover their existing business expenses as well as pay the proffered wage out of their adjusted gross income or other available funds. In addition, sole proprietors must show that they can sustain themselves and their dependents. See Ubeda v. Palmer, 539 F. Supp. 647 (N.D. Ill. 1982), aff'd, 703 F.2d 571 (7th Cir. 1983).

In Ubeda, 539 F. Supp. at 650, the court concluded that it was highly unlikely that a petitioner could support himself, his spouse and five dependents on a gross income of slightly more than $20,000 where the beneficiary's proposed salary was $6,000 or approximately thirty percent (30%) of the petitioner's gross income.

In the instant case, in 2001 and 2002, the sole proprietor supported a family of four. In 2004, 2005, 2006 and 2007, the petitioner supported a family of three. The petitioner provided no indication regarding the number of people in his family for 2003. The proprietor's tax returns reflect the following information for the following years:

- In 2001, the proprietor's IRS Form 1040, line 33, stated adjusted gross income of $13,153.24.
- In 2002, the proprietor's IRS Form 1040, line 35, stated adjusted gross income of $8,084.75.
- In 2003, the petitioner did not provide its complete federal income tax return and has failed to show its adjusted gross income for this year.
- In 2004, the petitioner's IRS Form 1040, line 36, stated adjusted gross income of $5,298.28.
- In 2005, the petitioner's IRS Form 1040, line 37, stated adjusted gross income of $8,050.26.
- In 2006, the petitioner's IRS Form 1040, line 37, stated adjusted gross income of $7,659.84.
- In 2007, the petitioner's IRS Form 1040, line 37, stated adjusted gross income of $1,018.60.

In 2001, 2002, 2004, 2005, 2006 and 2007, the sole proprietor's adjusted gross income is not sufficient to pay the beneficiary the proffered wage. Further, the petitioner provided some evidence of its personal, recurring monthly expenses which amount to $4,253.72 or $51,044 per year.[3] The sole proprietor has demonstrated insufficient adjusted gross income either to pay the beneficiary or to cover its monthly expenses. Further, the petitioner failed to provide the U.S. Individual Income Tax Return (Form 1040) for 2003 and has, therefore, not demonstrated sufficient adjusted gross income to pay the beneficiary the proffered wage for that year.

On appeal, counsel asserts that the director erred in his analysis of the petitioner's ability to pay, interpreting the regulations "too narrowly." Counsel asserts that the director erroneously considered the petitioner's net income rather than its gross revenues.

Reliance on the petitioner's gross receipts and wage expense is misplaced. Showing that the petitioner's gross receipts exceeded the proffered wage is insufficient. Similarly, showing that the petitioner paid wages in excess of the proffered wage is insufficient.

In K.C.P. Food Co., Inc. v. Sava, 623 F. Supp. at 1084, the court held that the Immigration and Naturalization Service, now USCIS, had properly relied on the petitioner's net income figure, as stated on the petitioner's corporate income tax returns, rather than the petitioner's gross income. The court specifically rejected the argument that USCIS should have considered income before expenses were paid rather than net income. See Taco Especial v. Napolitano, 696 F. Supp. 2d at 881 (gross profits overstate an employer's ability to pay because it ignores other necessary expenses).

[3] The petitioner provided copies of some bills for 2009: Dish television, Utica First Insurance, Countrywide Mortgage, Allstate automobile insurance for two vehicles, utilities, cable television and Sprint. The sole proprietor failed to document its personal, monthly expenses for food, clothes and fuel. Therefore, it is likely that the monthly expenses are higher than represented above.

However, the petitioner is not a corporation but a sole proprietorship, a business in which one person operates the business in his or her personal capacity. Black's Law Dictionary 1398 (7th Ed. 1999). Unlike a corporation, a sole proprietorship does not exist as an entity apart from the individual owner. See Matter of United Investment Group, 19 I&N Dec. 248, 250 (Comm'r 1984). Therefore the sole proprietor's adjusted gross income, assets and personal liabilities are also considered as part of the petitioner's ability to pay. Sole proprietors report income and expenses from their businesses on their individual (Form 1040) federal tax return each year. The business-related income and expenses are reported on Schedule C and are carried forward to the first page of the tax return. Sole proprietors must show that they can cover their existing business expenses as well as pay the proffered wage out of their adjusted gross income or other available funds. In addition, sole proprietors must show that they can sustain themselves and their dependents. See Ubeda v. Palmer, 539 F. Supp. 647 (N.D. Ill. 1982), aff'd, 703 F.2d 571 (7th Cir. 1983).

Counsel's assertion that USCIS should consider the petitioner's gross revenues is misplaced and contrary to precedent because as a sole proprietor, the petitioner reports its business revenues on Schedule C. Though the petitioner identifies its gross revenues on Schedule C, from that sum he must pay all of his business-related expenses. The remaining net profit from the sole proprietor's business is then reported on line 12 of Form 1040 as business income. However, after other income, gains, losses and other deductions have been calculated, the sole proprietor's ability to pay is determined using the adjusted gross income. From the adjusted gross income, the sole proprietor must demonstrate the ability not only to pay the beneficiary the proffered wage but also to support his or her household. To that end, the petitioner is obligated to provide evidence of its recurring, monthly household expenses. However, the petitioner may also provide evidence of any personal, unencumbered and liquefiable assets that could reasonably be applied towards paying employee wages. In this case, the petitioner has provided no such evidence.

On appeal, counsel asserts that the director neglected to consider assets and other available funds which were available to pay the proffered wage. For example, counsel asserts that the sole proprietor's wife also owns a business and that the income generated by that business is used to sustain the sole proprietor's household but could also be used to pay the beneficiary. However, counsel provided no documentary evidence of the sole proprietor's personal, unencumbered and liquefiable assets which could reasonably be applied towards paying the beneficiary's wages and no evidence of income other than that which has been identified on the petitioner's U.S. Individual Income Tax Return

Going on record without supporting documentary evidence is not sufficient for purposes of meeting the burden of proof in these proceedings. Matter of Soffici, 22 I&N Dec. 158, 165 (Comm'r 1998) (citing Matter of Treasure Craft of California, 14 I&N Dec. 190 (Reg'l Comm'r 1972)).

Further, the assertions of counsel do not constitute evidence. Matter of Obaigbena, 19 I&N Dec. 533, 534 (BIA 1988); Matter of Ramirez-Sanchez, 17 I&N Dec. 503, 506 (BIA 1980).

On appeal, counsel asserts that the director erred in neglecting to consider the possibility that the sole proprietor could reduce business expenses, use credit and increase business income through the employing of the beneficiary.

Against the projection of future earnings, Matter of Great Wall, 16 I&N Dec. 142, 144-145 (Acting Reg'l Comm'r 1977), states:

> I do not feel, nor do I believe the Congress intended, that the petitioner, who admittedly could not pay the offered wage at the time the petition was filed, should subsequently become eligible to have the petition approved under a new set of facts hinged upon probability and projections, even beyond the information presented on appeal.

This rationale would also apply to counsel's assertion that the sole proprietor could possibly reduce business expenses. Further, a petition cannot be approved at a future date after the petitioner becomes eligible under a new set of facts. See Matter of Katigbak, 14 I&N Dec. 45, 49 (Comm'r 1971).

With respect to the possibility that the petitioner could use credit for purposes of paying the beneficiary the proffered wage, the petitioner has not even demonstrated that it has an existing line of credit or loan which would be available for purposes of paying the beneficiary or financing the business.

Going on record without supporting documentary evidence is not sufficient for purposes of meeting the burden of proof in these proceedings. Matter of Soffici, 22 I&N Dec. 158, 165 (Comm'r 1998) (citing Matter of Treasure Craft of California, 14 I&N Dec. 190 (Reg'l Comm'r 1972)).

Further, in calculating the ability to pay the proffered salary, USCIS will not augment the petitioner's net income or net current assets by adding in the petitioner's credit limits, bank lines, or lines of credit. A "bank line" or "line of credit" is a bank's unenforceable commitment to make loans to a particular borrower up to a specified maximum during a specified time period. A line of credit is not a contractual or legal obligation on the part of the bank. See John Downes and Jordan Elliot Goodman, Barron's Dictionary of Finance and Investment Terms 45 (5th ed. 1998).

Since a line of credit is a "commitment to loan" and not an existent loan, the petitioner has not established that any unused funds from a line of credit are available at the time of filing the petition. As noted above, a petitioner must establish eligibility at the time of filing; a petition cannot be approved at a future date after the petitioner becomes eligible under a new set of facts. See Matter of Katigbak, 14 I&N Dec. 45, 49 (Comm'r 1971). Moreover, the petitioner's existent loans will be reflected in the balance sheet provided in the tax return or audited financial statement and will be fully considered in the evaluation of the petitioner's net current assets. Comparable to the limit on a credit card, the line of credit cannot be treated as cash or as a cash asset. However, if the petitioner wishes to rely on a line of credit as evidence of ability to pay, the petitioner must submit documentary evidence, such as a detailed business plan and audited cash flow statements, to demonstrate that the line of credit will augment and not weaken its overall financial position. Finally, USCIS will give less weight to loans and debt as a means of paying salary since the debts will increase the petitioner's liabilities and will not improve its overall financial position. Although lines of credit and debt are an integral part of any business operation, USCIS must evaluate the overall financial position of a petitioner to determine whether the employer is making a realistic job offer and has the overall financial ability to satisfy the proffered wage. See Matter of Great Wall, 16 I&N Dec. 142 (Acting Reg'l Comm'r 1977).

USCIS may consider the overall magnitude of the petitioner's business activities in its determination of the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage. See Matter of Sonegawa, 12 I&N Dec. 612 (Reg'l Comm'r 1967). The petitioning entity in Sonegawa had been in business for over 11 years and routinely earned a gross annual income of about $100,000. During the year in which the petition was filed in that case, the petitioner changed business locations and paid rent on both the old and new locations for five months. There were large moving costs and also a period of time when the petitioner was unable to do regular business. The Regional Commissioner determined that the petitioner's prospects for a resumption of successful business operations were well established. The petitioner was a fashion designer whose work had been featured in Time and Look magazines. Her clients included Miss Universe, movie actresses, and society matrons. The petitioner's clients had been included in the lists of the best-dressed California women. The petitioner lectured on fashion design at design and fashion shows throughout the United States and at colleges and universities in California. The Regional Commissioner's determination in Sonegawa was based in part on the petitioner's sound business reputation and outstanding reputation as a couturiere. As in Sonegawa, USCIS may, at its discretion, consider evidence relevant to the petitioner's financial ability that falls outside of a petitioner's net income and net current assets. USCIS may consider such factors as the number of years the petitioner has been doing business, the established historical growth of the petitioner's business, the overall number of employees, the occurrence of any uncharacteristic business expenditures or losses, the petitioner's reputation within its industry, whether the beneficiary is replacing a former employee or an outsourced service, or any other evidence that USCIS deems relevant to the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage.

In the instant case, the petitioner has provided financial documentation for seven years of business operations. In that time, the sole proprietor's gross receipts have decreased from $192,426 to $63,138 or by 67 percent. On Form I-140, the petitioner claimed to have employed two workers. However, in 2001 though the petitioner paid $49,269 in wages/salaries/cost of labor, by 2006 that figure had declined to $0. Additionally, the petitioner paid no wages or salaries in 2007, suggesting that the petitioner no longer has any employees. Thus, rather than establish the historical growth of the petitioner's business, the evidence demonstrates consistent decline in the petitioner's business operations. Further, the petitioner has not demonstrated any uncharacteristic business expenditures or losses, the petitioner's reputation within its industry or whether the beneficiary is replacing a former employee or an outsourced service. Thus, assessing the totality of the circumstances in this individual case, it is concluded that the petitioner has not established that it had the continuing ability to pay the proffered wage.

An application or petition that fails to comply with the technical requirements of the law may be denied by the AAO even if the Service Center does not identify all of the grounds for denial in the initial decision. See Spencer Enterprises, Inc. v. United States, 229 F. Supp. 2d 1025, 1043 (E.D. Cal. 2001), aff'd, 345 F.3d 683 (9th Cir. 2003); see also Soltane v. DOJ, 381 F.3d 143, 145 (3d Cir. 2004) (noting that the AAO conducts appellate review on a de novo basis).

Beyond the decision of the director, it is also concluded that it is more likely than not that the petition is not supported by a bona fide job offer. See Matter of Silver Dragon Chinese Restaurant, 19 I&N Dec. 401 (Comm'r 1986). Specifically, it appears from the evidence in the record that the beneficiary is related to the petitioner, possibly as a nephew.

The proprietor and the beneficiary both share the same surname. Additionally, at the time the I-140 petition was filed, the beneficiary was residing at the proprietor's address: Further, according to USCIS electronic records, the proprietor, filed Form I-130, Petition for Alien Relative in behalf of whose date of birth is November 19, 1950. Since, the Form I-130 may only be filed for spouses, children and siblings, given the age and gender of it would appear that this individual is the brother of the proprietor, recently filed Form I-130 in behalf of On the beneficiary's Form I-485, he identifies his parents as and are the beneficiary's parents and is the proprietor's brother, then the beneficiary is the proprietor's nephew.

Under 20 C.F.R. § 626.20(c)(8) and § 656.3, the petitioner must demonstrate that a valid employment relationship exists, that a bona fide job opportunity is available to U.S. workers. See also C.F.R. § 656.17(l); Matter of Amger Corp., 87-INA-545 (BALCA 1987). A relationship invalidating a bona fide job offer may arise where the beneficiary is related to the petitioner by "blood" or it may "be financial, by marriage, or through friendship." Matter of Sunmart 374, 00-INA-93 (BALCA May 15, 2000); see also Keyjoy Trading Co., 1987-INA-592 (BALCA Dec. 15, 1987) (en banc).

Based on the relationship described above, and considering the evidence in the record relating to the employer and the job opportunity, the petitioner has failed to establish that the instant petition is based a bona fide job opportunity available to U.S. workers. If the matter is pursued, the petitioner must address this issue.

The petition will be denied for the above stated reasons, with each considered as an independent and alternative basis for denial. In visa petition proceedings, the burden of proving eligibility for the benefit sought remains entirely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. Here, that burden has not been met.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
