DISCUSSION: The preference visa petition was denied by the Director, Nebraska Service Center, and is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The petitioner is a construction and trucking company. It seeks to employ the beneficiary permanently in the United States as a diesel mechanic. As required by statute, the petition is accompanied by a Form ETA 750, Application for Alien Employment Certification, approved by the United States Department of Labor (DOL). The director determined that the petitioner had not established that it had the continuing ability to pay the beneficiary the proffered wage beginning on the priority date of the visa petition. The director denied the petition accordingly.

The record shows that the appeal is properly filed and timely and makes a specific allegation of error in law or fact. The procedural history in this case is documented by the record and incorporated into the decision. Further elaboration of the procedural history will be made only as necessary.

As set forth in the director's March 26, 2009, denial, the issue on appeal is whether or not the petitioner has the ability to pay the proffered wage as of the priority date and continuing until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence.

Section 203(b)(3)(A)(i) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1153(b)(3)(A)(i), provides for the granting of preference classification to qualified immigrants who are capable, at the time of petitioning for classification under this paragraph, of performing skilled labor (requiring at least two years training or experience), not of a temporary nature, for which qualified workers are not available in the United States.

The regulation 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2) states in pertinent part:

Ability of prospective employer to pay wage. Any petition filed by or for an employment-based immigrant which requires an offer of employment must be accompanied by evidence that the prospective United States employer has the ability to pay the proffered wage. The petitioner must demonstrate this ability at the time the priority date is established and continuing until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence. Evidence of this ability shall be either in the form of copies of annual reports, federal tax returns, or audited financial statements.

The petitioner must demonstrate the continuing ability to pay the proffered wage beginning on the priority date, which is the date the Form ETA 750, Application for Alien Employment Certification, was accepted for processing by any office within the employment system of the DOL. See 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(d). The petitioner must also demonstrate that, on the priority date, the beneficiary had the qualifications stated on its Form ETA 750, Application for Alien Employment Certification, as certified by the DOL and submitted with the instant petition. Matter of Wing's Tea House, 16 I&N Dec. 158 (Acting Reg'l Comm'r 1977).

Here, the Form ETA 750 was accepted on October 14, 2003. The proffered wage as stated on the Form ETA 750 is $17.23 per hour ($35,838.40 per year based on forty hours per week). The Form ETA 750 states that the position requires two years of experience in the position offered as a diesel mechanic.

The AAO conducts appellate review on a de novo basis. See Soltane v. DOJ, 381 F.3d 143, 145 (3d Cir. 2004). The AAO considers all pertinent evidence in the record, including new evidence properly submitted upon appeal.¹

The evidence in the record of proceeding shows that the petitioner is structured as a sole proprietorship. On the petition, the petitioner claimed to have been established in 1978 and to currently employ 2 workers. On the Form ETA 750B, signed by the beneficiary on January 3, 2005, the beneficiary claimed to work for the petitioner since February 2002.

The petitioner must establish that its job offer to the beneficiary is a realistic one. Because the filing of an ETA 750 labor certification application establishes a priority date for any immigrant petition later based on the ETA 750, the petitioner must establish that the job offer was realistic as of the priority date and that the offer remained realistic for each year thereafter, until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence. The petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage is an essential element in evaluating whether a job offer is realistic. See Matter of Great Wall, 16 I&N Dec. 142 (Acting Reg'l Comm'r 1977); see also 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2). In evaluating whether a job offer is realistic, United States Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) requires the petitioner to demonstrate financial resources sufficient to pay the beneficiary's proffered wages, although the totality of the circumstances affecting the petitioning business will be considered if the evidence warrants such consideration. See Matter of Sonogawa, 12 I&N Dec. 612 (Reg'l Comm'r 1967).

In determining the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage during a given period, USCIS will first examine whether the petitioner employed and paid the beneficiary during that period. If the petitioner establishes by documentary evidence that it employed the beneficiary at a salary equal to or greater than the proffered wage, the evidence will be considered prima facie proof of the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage. In the instant case, the petitioner has not established that it employed and paid the beneficiary the full proffered wage from the priority date in 2003 onwards.²

² On appeal, counsel asserts that the beneficiary and the petitioner's owner are the only employees of the petitioner. Counsel suggests that evidence of wages paid to the beneficiary can be found on the petitioner's tax return, Schedule C, Item 11. No supporting evidence of wages paid to the beneficiary, such as W-2 forms or Forms 1099, were submitted. The assertions of counsel do not constitute evidence. Matter of Obaighena, 19 I&N Dec. 533, 534 (BIA 1988); Matter of Ramirez-Sanchez, 17 I&N Dec. 503, 506 (BIA 1980).

If the petitioner does not establish that it employed and paid the beneficiary an amount at least equal to the proffered wage during that period, USCIS will next examine the net income figure reflected on the petitioner's federal income tax return, without consideration of depreciation or other expenses. River Street Donuts, LLC v. Napolitano, 558 F.3d 111 (1st Cir. 2009); Taco Especial v. Napolitano, 696 F. Supp. 2d 873 (E.D. Mich. 2010). Reliance on federal income tax returns as a basis for determining a petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage is well established by judicial precedent. Elatos Restaurant Corp. v. Sava, 632 F. Supp. 1049, 1054 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) (citing Tongatapu Woodcraft Hawaii, Ltd. v. Feldman, 736 F.2d 1305 (9th Cir. 1984)); see also Chi-Feng Chang v. Thornburgh, 719 F. Supp. 532 (N.D. Texas 1989); K.C.P. Food Co., Inc. v. Sava, 623 F. Supp. 1080 (S.D.N.Y. 1985); Ubeda v. Palmer, 539 F. Supp. 647 (N.D. Ill. 1982), aff'd, 703 F.2d 571 (7th Cir. 1983).

The petitioner is a sole proprietorship, a business in which one person operates the business in his or her personal capacity. Black's Law Dictionary 1398 (7th Ed. 1999). Unlike a corporation, a sole proprietorship does not exist as an entity apart from the individual owner. See Matter of United Investment Group, 19 I&N Dec. 248, 250 (Comm'r 1984). Therefore the sole proprietor's adjusted gross income, assets and personal liabilities are also considered as part of the petitioner's ability to pay. Sole proprietors report income and expenses from their businesses on their individual (Form 1040) federal tax return each year. The business-related income and expenses are reported on Schedule C and are carried forward to the first page of the tax return. Sole proprietors must show that they can cover their existing business expenses as well as pay the proffered wage out of their adjusted gross income or other available funds. In addition, sole proprietors must show that they can sustain themselves and their dependents. See Ubeda v. Palmer, 539 F. Supp. 647 (N.D. Ill. 1982), aff'd, 703 F.2d 571 (7th Cir. 1983).

In Ubeda, 539 F. Supp. at 650, the court concluded that it was highly unlikely that a petitioner could support himself, his spouse and five dependents on a gross income of slightly more than $20,000 where the beneficiary's proposed salary was $6,000 or approximately thirty percent (30%) of the petitioner's gross income.

In response to the director's request for evidence, to establish the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage, the petitioner submitted evidence of Social Security disability benefits paid to the petitioner's owner since 2001. Social security benefits include monthly retirement, survivor and disability benefits. On the IRS Form 1040, Social Security Income is listed on lines 20a and 20b. Net benefits are listed on line 20a and taxable benefits are listed on line 20b. Nontaxable social security benefits (net benefits at line 20a minus taxable benefits at line 20b) paid to the sole proprietor, which are not reflected in the AGI calculation on IRS Form 1040, may be included in our determination of a sole proprietor's ability to pay the proffered wage in limited circumstances.

In the instant case, the sole proprietor supported a family of two until 2007, and from that point forward supported a family of one. The proprietor's tax returns reflect the following information for the following years:

Year	AGI	Non Taxed SS Income	Total
2003	($14,246)	$10,667	($3,579)
2004	$25,237	$0	$25,237
2005	$19,270	$0	$19,270
2006	$40,049	$7,022	$47,071
2007	$12,371	$12,030	$24,401

In 2003, 2004, 2005, and 2007, the sole proprietor's adjusted gross income added to his nontaxable social security income failed to cover the proffered wage of $35,838.40. Although, in 2006, the petitioner's adjusted gross income exceeded the proffered wage, the petitioner would be left with only $2,880.60 after subtracting the petitioner's owner's claimed monthly expenses.³

On appeal, counsel asserts that the petitioner's gross receipts from the business range from $40,000 to $136,000, and are sufficient to pay the proffered wage. USCIS will not consider gross income without also considering the expenses that were incurred to generate that income. The overall magnitude of the entity's business activities should be considered when the entity's ability to pay is marginal or borderline. See Matter of Sonogawa, 12 I&N Dec. 612 (Reg'l Comm'r 1967). While the petitioner's gross receipts are included on the Schedule C to IRS Form 1040, the net profit (or loss) from the petitioner business is carried forward to page one of the sole proprietor's IRS 1040 and included in the calculation of the petitioner's adjusted gross income, which is insufficient to establish the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage.

Counsel also asserts on appeal that "the initial evidence reflects that the petitioner's net current assets are equal to or greater than the proffered wage." The only asset which is referenced in the record, is the petitioner's owner's residence, which the petitioner claims to be valued at $39,000.⁴ A home is not a readily liquefiable asset. Further, it is unlikely that one would sell such a significant personal asset to pay the beneficiary's wage. USCIS may reject a fact stated in the petition if it does not believe that fact to be true. Section 204(b) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1154(b); see also Anetekhai v. I.N.S., 876 F.2d 1218, 1220 (5th Cir. 1989); Lu-Ann Bakery Shop, Inc. v. Nelson, 705 F. Supp. 7, 10 (D.D.C. 1988); Systronics Corp. v. INS, 153 F. Supp. 2d 7, 15 (D.D.C. 2001).

³ The petitioner provided a letter asserting his monthly personal expenses were approximately $349 for a car payment, $227 for installment loan payment, $20 for credit card payments, and $100 for household expenses. These claimed expenses would amount to $8,352 per year. However, it is unclear whether this calculation of monthly expenses applies to all relevant years (2003-2007) or only for 2009, the year in which the calculation was written. It is unlikely that a family of two would be able to live on household expenses (including food, utilities, and entertainment) of only $100 per month from 2003 to 2007.

USCIS may consider the overall magnitude of the petitioner's business activities in its determination of the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage. See Matter of Sonegawa, 12 I&N Dec. 612 (Reg'l Comm'r 1967). The petitioning entity in Sonegawa had been in business for over 11 years and routinely earned a gross annual income of about $100,000. During the year in which the petition was filed in that case, the petitioner changed business locations and paid rent on both the old and new locations for five months. There were large moving costs and also a period of time when the petitioner was unable to do regular business. The Regional Commissioner determined that the petitioner's prospects for a resumption of successful business operations were well established. The petitioner was a fashion designer whose work had been featured in Time and Look magazines. Her clients included Miss Universe, movie actresses, and society matrons. The petitioner's clients had been included in the lists of the best-dressed California women. The petitioner lectured on fashion design at design and fashion shows throughout the United States and at colleges and universities in California. The Regional Commissioner's determination in Sonegawa was based in part on the petitioner's sound business reputation and outstanding reputation as a couturiere. As in Sonegawa, USCIS may, at its discretion, consider evidence relevant to the petitioner's financial ability that falls outside of a petitioner's net income and net current assets. USCIS may consider such factors as the number of years the petitioner has been doing business, the established historical growth of the petitioner's business, the overall number of employees, the occurrence of any uncharacteristic business expenditures or losses, the petitioner's reputation within its industry, whether the beneficiary is replacing a former employee or an outsourced service, or any other evidence that USCIS deems relevant to the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage.

In the instant case, although the petitioner has been operating for more than thirty years, nothing in the record indicates that the tax records are not an accurate indicia of the petitioner's financial wellbeing and ability to pay the proffered wage. It is unlikely that the petitioner would be able to sacrifice so much of his personal income to pay the proffered wage. Additionally, it is unlikely that the petitioner would pay one employee a greater amount than it has paid for labor in the five years reflected on the record. Thus, assessing the totality of the circumstances in this individual case, it is concluded that the petitioner has not established that it had the continuing ability to pay the proffered wage.

The burden of proof in these proceedings rests solely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. The petitioner has not met that burden.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
