Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The Director, California Service Center, initially approved the employment-based non-immigrant visa petition. On further review, the director determined that the beneficiary was not eligible for the visa classification. Accordingly, the director properly served the petitioner with a Notice of Intent to Revoke the approval of the petition and her reasons for doing so. The director subsequently exercised her discretion to revoke the approval of the petition May 6, 2013. The matter is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be summarily dismissed.

The petitioner is a church. It seeks to classify the beneficiary as a nonimmigrant religious worker pursuant to section 101(a)(15)(R) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15)(R), to perform services as a priest. The director determined that the beneficiary has reached the statutory maximum period for which he can qualify as an R-1 nonimmigrant religious worker.

The director also determined that the beneficiary had not maintained the R-1 nonimmigrant religious worker employment certification previously approved and that the beneficiary had violated the terms of his visa by working for another employer. The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(r)(12) requires that any request for an extension of stay as an R-1 must include initial evidence of the previous R-1 employment (including Internal Revenue Service documentation if available). The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 214.1(e) states that a nonimmigrant who is permitted to engage in employment may engage only in such employment as has been authorized. Any unauthorized employment by a nonimmigrant constitutes a failure to maintain status within the meaning of section 241(a)(1)(C)(i) of the Act. Under 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(r)(5), extension of status is available only to aliens who maintain R-1 status.

The issues of the beneficiary's prior employment and maintenance of R-1 status are significant only insofar as they relate to the application to extend that status. An application for extension is concurrent with, but separate from, the nonimmigrant petition. There is no appeal from the denial of an application for extension of stay filed on Form I-129. 8 C.F.R. § 214.1(c)(5). Because the beneficiary's past employment and maintenance of status are extension issues, rather than petition issues, the AAO lacks authority to decide those questions.

On appeal, the petitioner states that it will file a brief and submit additional information in support of the appeal within 30 days of filing.

The appeal is dated March 26, 2014. As of this date, more than seven months later, neither a brief nor additional evidence has been submitted. Therefore, the record will be considered complete as presently constituted.

As stated in 8 C.F.R. § 103.3(a)(1)(v), an appeal shall be summarily dismissed if the party concerned fails to identify specifically any erroneous conclusion of law or statement of fact for the appeal. The petitioner has not specifically addressed the reasons stated for denial and has not provided any additional evidence. The appeal must therefore be summarily dismissed.

In visa petition proceedings, it is the petitioner's burden to establish eligibility for the immigration benefit sought. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361; Matter of Otiende, 26 I&N Dec. 127, 128 (BIA 2013). Here, that burden has not been met.
