DISCUSSION: The service center director denied the instant nonimmigrant visa petition and the matter is now before the Administrative Appeals Office on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed as the matter is now moot.

In the Form I-129 visa petition, in describing its business, the petitioner stated "See support letter." In a letter submitted with the visa petition, the petitioner's president stated that the petitioner is an information technology services company. To employ the beneficiary in what it designates as a systems analyst position, the petitioner endeavors to classify him as a nonimmigrant worker in a specialty occupation pursuant to section 101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b).

The director denied the petition on October 16, 2009 because he determined that the petitioner failed to demonstrate that it would employ the beneficiary in a specialty occupation and failed to demonstrate that the labor condition application submitted to support the visa petition is valid for employment in the location where the beneficiary would work. On appeal, counsel contended that the director's decision to deny the petition does not accord with the evidence of record and, therefore, should be overturned.

A review of U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) records indicates that on April 19, 2010, a date subsequent to the denial of the instant petition, another employer filed a Form I-129 petition seeking nonimmigrant H-1B classification on the beneficiary's behalf. USCIS records further indicate that this other employer's petition was approved on September 30, 2010, which granted the beneficiary H-1B status from October 1, 2010 to September 21, 2013. Further still, on November 17, 2010 a third employer filed a Form I-129 visa petition on the beneficiary's behalf. That visa petition was approved on December 12, 2010, granting the beneficiary H-1B status from November 30, 2010 to November 15, 2013. Because the beneficiary in the instant petition has been approved for employment with other petitioners, further pursuit of the matter at hand is moot.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed. The petition is denied.
