Thank you,

Perry Rhew
Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The service center director denied the nonimmigrant visa petition. The matter is now on appeal before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO). The appeal will be dismissed. The petition will be denied.

The petitioner is engaged in information technology consulting services. It seeks to employ the beneficiary as a computer programmer and to classify him as a nonimmigrant worker in a specialty occupation pursuant to section 101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b).

The director denied the petition, finding that the petitioner failed to: (1) establish that the proposed position qualifies for classification as a specialty occupation; (2) submit a valid Labor Condition Application (LCA) for all work locations of the beneficiary; and (3) submit an itinerary for all work locations of the beneficiary. On appeal, the petitioner submits a letter in support of the contention that it has met all regulatory requirements.

The record of proceeding before the AAO contains: (1) Form I-129 and supporting documentation; (2) the director's request for evidence (RFE); (3) the petitioner's response to the RFE; (4) the notice of decision; and (5) Form I-290B and supporting materials. The AAO reviewed the record in its entirety before issuing its decision.

In the letter of support dated November 27, 2007, the petitioner claimed that it "employs information technology professionals to develop computer software for its own use and to serve as programming consultants to top companies throughout the United States." The petitioner supplemented the record with an overview of the petitioner's company, its organizational chart, and its annual report and other corporate documents. The petitioner further stated that it wished to employ the beneficiary as a computer programmer, and provided a basic overview of the duties of the proffered position.

The director found the initial evidence insufficient to establish eligibility, and thus issued an RFE on March 17, 2009. The petitioner was asked to submit an itinerary for the beneficiary, outlining all work locations and the duration of all assignments, as well as further information on the project(s) on which the beneficiary would be assigned. The director requested documentary evidence such as contracts with or letters from clients describing the nature of any projects on which the beneficiary would work.

In a response dated April 15, 2009, the petitioner addressed the director's queries. The petitioner explained that the beneficiary was currently on assignment with the [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] In support of this contention, the petitioner submitted the following documents:

- Purchase Order dated 12/17/2007
- Statement of Work with Modis, Inc. dated January 1, 2009
- Subcontractor Agreement with Attic Technologies dated December 17, 2007
- Subcontractor Agreement with Modis, Inc. dated December 24, 2008

The petitioner noted that, while the purchase order indicated that the project would last between four to six months, the assignment has been extended on an indefinite basis. The petitioner claimed that should a new assignment require him to change work locations, the petitioner would obtain a new LCA for that location.

The petitioner concluded by stating that despite the assignment of the beneficiary to client projects, the petitioner would remain the actual legal employer of the beneficiary at all times.

The first issue before the AAO is whether the petitioner submitted an itinerary and valid LCA with the petition, and thus established filing eligibility at the time the Form I-129 was received by U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS).

General requirements for filing immigration applications and petitions are set forth at 8 C.F.R. §103.2(a)(1) as follows:

[E]very application, petition, appeal, motion, request, or other document submitted on the form prescribed by this chapter shall be executed and filed in accordance with the instructions on the form, such instructions . . . being hereby incorporated into the particular section of the regulations requiring its submission . . . .

Further discussion of the filing requirements for applications and petitions is found at 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(b)(1):

Demonstrating eligibility at time of filing. An applicant or petitioner must establish that he or she is eligible for the requested benefit at the time of filing the application or petition. All required application or petition forms must be properly completed and filed with any initial evidence required by applicable regulations and/or the form's instructions. Any evidence submitted in connection with the application or petition is incorporated into and considered part of the relating application or petition.

The regulations require that before filing a Form I-129 petition on behalf of an H-1B worker, a petitioner obtain a certified LCA from the Department of Labor (DOL) in the occupational specialty in which the H-1B worker will be employed. See 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(i)(B). The instructions that accompany the Form I-129 also specify that an H-1B petitioner must document the filing of a labor certification application with the DOL when submitting the Form I-129.

Additionally, the regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(2)(i)(B) provides as follows:

Service or training in more than one location. A petition which requires services to be performed or training to be received in more than one location must include an itinerary with the dates and locations of the services or training and must be filed with the Service office which has jurisdiction over I-129H petitions in the area where the petitioner is located. The address which the petitioner specifies as its location on the I-129H petition shall be where the petitioner is located for purposes of this paragraph.

In the instant case, the petitioner filed the Form I-129 with USCIS on November 27, 2007. On the Form I-129, the petitioner indicated that the beneficiary would work in South Portland, Maine as well as in South Easton, Massachusetts. The petitioner submitted a certified LCA with the petition, however, which indicated that the beneficiary's work location would be Cincinnati, Ohio. Moreover, in response to the director's RFE, the petitioner claimed that the beneficiary was currently working on a project for [REDACTED]

██████████ and would work on that project indefinitely. In its letter dated April 15, 2009, the petitioner further stated that if and when this project ended, the petitioner would place the beneficiary at another client site and submit a new LCA for that location.

The Form I-129 filing requirements imposed by regulation require that the petitioner submit evidence of a certified LCA at the time of filing. Title 20 C.F.R. § 655.705(b) further indicates that an LCA must correspond to the petition with which it is submitted. The LCA submitted with the petition is certified for Cincinnati, Ohio, and not the claimed work location of the beneficiary, which is Des Moines, Iowa, or the originally intended work locations as stated on the Form I-129. On appeal, the petitioner makes no attempt to address this issue, and no explanation as to why the location of Cincinnati, Ohio included on the certified LCA is submitted. Neither contract submitted in response to the RFE identifies Cincinnati as a worksite or as a client address, and the petitioner's headquarters is located in Maine. It is incumbent upon the petitioner to resolve any inconsistencies in the record by independent objective evidence. Any attempt to explain or reconcile such inconsistencies will not suffice unless the petitioner submits competent objective evidence pointing to where the truth lies. Matter of Ho, 19 I&N Dec. 582, 591-92 (BIA 1988).

Upon review of the record, the petitioner failed to submit a certified LCA that corresponds to the petition or that even covers the current intended worksite of the beneficiary in Des Moines, Iowa. Despite arguing that it "cannot submit an LCA for an unknown location of a future temporary assignment" because to do so would result in the type of speculation USCIS urges petitioners to avoid, the petitioner has failed to establish eligibility at the time of filing. A petitioner must establish eligibility at the time of filing the nonimmigrant visa petition. 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(b)(1). A visa petition may not be approved at a future date after the petitioner or beneficiary becomes eligible under a new set of facts. Matter of Michelin Tire Corp., 17 I&N Dec. 248 (Reg. Comm. 1978). The petitioner failed to comply with the filing requirements at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(i)(B). For this reason alone, the petition may not be approved.

Additionally, the petitioner relies on the purchase order dated December 17, 2007 as evidence of the beneficiary's assigned work location. The document is generic and provides little detail regarding the nature of the project, and likewise does not identify the client. The evidentiary weight accorded to this document will be discussed in further detail later in this decision. For purposes of determining whether the petitioner submitted a concise itinerary for the beneficiary, however, this document fails to comply with the regulatory requirements.

According to the purchase order, the petitioner will provide services through the beneficiary for a period of four to six months from December 17, 2007. The petitioner claims in response to the RFE and again on appeal that this project has been extended indefinitely, and that the beneficiary is still assigned to this project. This statement is insufficient to satisfy the requirement for an itinerary.

The petitioner requests authorization to employ the beneficiary from November 27, 2007 until September 30, 2010. The only period of employment defined in writing is through June 17, 2007 according to the purchase order. The petitioner submits no corroborating documentary evidence to support its claim that the project under this purchase order has been extended indefinitely. Going on record without supporting documentary evidence is not sufficient for purposes of meeting the burden of proof in these proceedings. Matter of Soffici, 22 I&N Dec. 158, 165 (Comm. 1998) (citing Matter of Treasure Craft of California, 14 I&N Dec. 190 (Reg. Comm. 1972)).

In addition, the petitioner openly acknowledges that the current project of the beneficiary could terminate at any time, and further confirms that it has no way of knowing at the current time where the beneficiary would be placed should the current project conclude. For purposes of establishing eligibility in this matter, this contention is unacceptable. Again, a visa petition may not be approved based on speculation of future eligibility or after the petitioner or beneficiary becomes eligible under a new set of facts. See Matter of Michelin Tire Corp., 17 I&N Dec. 248; Matter of Katigbak, 14 I&N Dec. 45, 49 (Comm. 1971). The petitioner failed to provide a concise itinerary covering all work locations for the beneficiary during the requested validity period. For this additional reason, the petition may not be approved.

The next issue is whether the beneficiary will be employed in a specialty occupation.

Section 214(i)(1) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1184(i)(1), defines the term "specialty occupation" as an occupation that requires:

- (A) theoretical and practical application of a body of highly specialized knowledge, and
- (B) attainment of a bachelor's or higher degree in the specific specialty (or its equivalent) as a minimum for entry into the occupation in the United States.

The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii) states, in pertinent part, the following:

Specialty occupation means an occupation which requires theoretical and practical application of a body of highly specialized knowledge in fields of human endeavor including, but not limited to, architecture, engineering, mathematics, physical sciences, social sciences, medicine and health, education, business specialties, accounting, law, theology, and the arts, and which requires the attainment of a bachelor's degree or higher in a specific specialty, or its equivalent, as a minimum for entry into the occupation in the United States.

Pursuant to 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A), to qualify as a specialty occupation, a proposed position must also meet one of the following criteria:

- (1) A baccalaureate or higher degree or its equivalent is normally the minimum requirement for entry into the particular position;
- (2) The degree requirement is common to the industry in parallel positions among similar organizations or, in the alternative, an employer may show that its particular position is so complex or unique that it can be performed only by an individual with a degree;
- (3) The employer normally requires a degree or its equivalent for the position; or

- (4) The nature of the specific duties is so specialized and complex that knowledge required to perform the duties is usually associated with the attainment of a baccalaureate or higher degree.

As a threshold issue, it is noted that 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A) must logically be read together with section 214(i)(1) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1184(i)(1), and 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii). In other words, this regulatory language must be construed in harmony with the thrust of the related provisions and with the statute as a whole. See K Mart Corp. v. Cartier Inc., 486 U.S. 281, 291 (1988) (holding that construction of language which takes into account the design of the statute as a whole is preferred); see also COIT Independence Joint Venture v. Federal Sav. and Loan Ins. Corp., 489 U.S. 561 (1989); Matter of W-F-, 21 I&N Dec. 503 (BIA 1996). As such, the criteria stated in 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A) should logically be read as being necessary but not necessarily sufficient to meet the statutory and regulatory definition of specialty occupation. To otherwise interpret this section as stating the necessary and sufficient conditions for meeting the definition of specialty occupation would result in particular positions meeting a condition under 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A) but not the statutory or regulatory definition. See Defensor v. Meissner, 201 F.3d 384, 387 (5th Cir. 2000). To avoid this illogical and absurd result, 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A) must therefore be read as stating additional requirements that a position must meet, supplementing the statutory and regulatory definitions of specialty occupation.

Consonant with section 214(i)(1) of the Act and the regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii), U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) consistently interprets the term “degree” in the criteria at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A) to mean not just any baccalaureate or higher degree, but one in a specific specialty that is directly related to the proffered position. Applying this standard, USCIS regularly approves H-1B petitions for qualified aliens who are to be employed as engineers, computer scientists, certified public accountants, college professors, and other such professions. These occupations all require a baccalaureate degree in the specific specialty as a minimum for entry into the occupation and fairly represent the types of professions that Congress contemplated when it created the H-1B visa category.

In addressing whether the proffered position is a specialty occupation, the record is devoid of any documentary evidence as to where and for whom the beneficiary would be performing his services during the requested employment period, and whether his services would be that of a computer programmer.

The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iv) provides that “[a]n H-1B petition involving a specialty occupation shall be accompanied by [d]ocumentation . . . or any other required evidence sufficient to establish . . . that the services the beneficiary is to perform are in a specialty occupation.” Moreover, the regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iv)(A)(1) indicates that contracts are one of the types of evidence that may be required to establish that the services to be performed by the beneficiary will be in a specialty occupation.

The November 27, 2007 support letter submitted by the petitioner describes the proffered position as follows:

In this position, [the beneficiary’s] responsibilities will include programming, developing, implementing, testing and tuning of software applications for clients, primarily using Powerbuilder, Oracle, PL/SQL, C/C++, Visual Basic, HTML, JAVA, UNIX in Windows and Linux development operating environments. Typical duties in the position will include:

- Programming and development of computer software applications in various languages in a broad range of moderately complex assignments, under supervision of a manager.
- Implementation of application software in strict adherence to customer specifications.
- Preparation of application software test plans, carrying out testing, and making required amendments.
- Application of specialized knowledge in particular computer software languages, tools and operating systems including JAVA, Powerbuilder, C/C++, Visual Basic, Unix in Windows and Linux development operating environments.

In response to the RFE, which requested more specific information regarding each project upon which the beneficiary would work, the petitioner indicated that the beneficiary was assigned to a project for the [REDACTED] and referred to supporting documentation such as the purchase order, statement of work, and two subcontractor agreements in support of this contention. No additional description of duties was submitted, and none of the aforementioned documents outlined with specificity the nature of the beneficiary's duties on the alleged project.

The statement of duties set forth in the November 27, 2007 letter of support is generic and vague, and fails to specifically discuss the duties of the beneficiary on the [REDACTED] project. In fact the description indicates that the list of duties provided is "typical," and further indicates that certain tasks, such as implementation of application software, must be performed "in strict adherence to customer specifications." Therefore, it is evident that the end client on a particular project determines the exact nature of the beneficiary's duties.

As discussed briefly above, the purchase order identifies the beneficiary by name, but does not identify the client or the specific project upon which he will work. Moreover, the statement of work and two subcontracts do not identify the beneficiary as a party, and further do not discuss the exact nature of the work to be done. Instead, these agreements outline technical procedures such as invoicing and confidentiality requirements.

Moreover, even if sufficient documentation was submitted to show that the beneficiary was actually assigned to a specific project for the [REDACTED], the purchase order, if the AAO accepts the petitioner's explanation that it represents the work order for the [REDACTED], indicates that the project is scheduled to terminate within four to six months from the start date of December 17, 2007. The petitioner claims that the exact nature of the beneficiary's assignments throughout the validity period will vary based on client needs during the duration of the petition, for which approval was requested through September 30, 2010. The uncertainty surrounding the future projects and work assignments of the beneficiary renders it impossible to find that the proffered position is a specialty occupation, since no specific description of the duties the beneficiary will perform is included in the record.

The petitioner is responsible for assigning staff to various client projects as needed. As discussed previously, details are not provided about the beneficiary's specific role in the [REDACTED] project, on which he allegedly is still working (based on the petitioner's claim that an indefinite extension, not supported by documentary evidence, has been granted).

On appeal, the petitioner provides no documentary evidence to clarify the beneficiary's duties, his project assignments, or to support the contention that the [REDACTED] project has been extended as claimed.

The brief description of duties in the petitioner's support letter is generic and fails to specifically describe the nature of the services required by the beneficiary on the project in question. Moreover, the fact that the petitioner acknowledges that the beneficiary's assignments will fluctuate throughout the validity period confirms that his duties and responsibilities are subject to change in accordance with client requirements. Therefore, absent evidence of contracts or statements of work describing the duties the beneficiary would perform and for whom throughout the entire validity period, the petitioner fails to establish that the duties that the beneficiary would perform are those of a specialty occupation. Simply going on record without supporting documentary evidence is not sufficient for the purpose of meeting the burden of proof in these proceedings. Matter of Soffici, 22 I&N Dec. at 165.

USCIS routinely looks to Defensor v. Meissner, 201 F.3d 384, which requires an examination of the ultimate employment of the beneficiary to determine whether the position constitutes a specialty occupation. The petitioner in Defensor, Vintage Health Resources (Vintage) is a medical contract service agency that brought foreign nurses into the United States and located jobs for them at hospitals as registered nurses. The court in Defensor found that Vintage had "token degree requirements," to "mask the fact that nursing in general is not a specialty occupation." Id. at 387.

The court in Defensor held that for the purpose of determining whether a proffered position is a specialty occupation, the petitioner acting as an employment contractor is merely a "token employer," while the entity for which the services are to be performed is the "more relevant employer." Id. at 388. The Defensor court recognized that evidence of the client companies' job requirements is critical where the work is to be performed for entities other than the petitioner. Id. The Defensor court held that the legacy Immigration and Naturalization Service had reasonably interpreted the statute and regulations as requiring the petitioner to produce evidence that a proffered position qualifies as a specialty occupation on the basis of the requirements imposed by the entities using the beneficiary's services. Id. In Defensor, the court found that that evidence of the client companies' job requirements is critical if the work is to be performed for entities other than the petitioner. Id.

In this matter, it is unclear whether the petitioner will be an employer or will act as an employment contractor. The job description provided by the petitioner, as well as various statements from the petitioner both prior to adjudication and on appeal, indicate that the beneficiary will be working on different projects throughout the duration of the petition. Despite the director's specific request for documentation to establish the ultimate location(s) of the beneficiary's employment, the petitioner failed to comply. The petitioner's failure to provide evidence of valid work orders or employment contracts between the petitioner and clients, which identify the beneficiary as personnel and outline the nature of his duties, renders it impossible to conclude for whom the beneficiary will ultimately provide services, and exactly what those services would entail. The AAO, therefore, cannot analyze whether his duties would require at least a baccalaureate degree or the equivalent in a specific specialty, as required for classification as a specialty occupation.

The petitioner's failure to establish the substantive nature of the work to be performed by the beneficiary precludes a finding that the proffered position is a specialty occupation under any criterion at 8 C.F.R.

§ 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A), because it is the substantive nature of that work that determines (1) the normal minimum educational requirement for the particular position, which is the focus of criterion 1; (2) industry positions which are parallel to the proffered position and thus appropriate for review for a common degree requirement, under the first alternate prong of criterion 2; (3) the level of complexity or uniqueness of the proffered position, which is the focus of the second alternate prong of criterion 2; (4) the factual justification for a petitioner's normally requiring a degree or its equivalent, when that is an issue under criterion 3; and (5) the degree of specialization and complexity of the specific duties, which is the focus of criterion 4. For this additional reason, the petition must be denied.

Accordingly, the petitioner has not established that the proposed position qualifies as a specialty occupation under any of the criteria at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A) or that the beneficiary would be coming temporarily to the United States to perform the duties of a specialty occupation as that term is defined at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii).

Beyond the decision of the director, the petitioner has not established that it meets the regulatory definition of an intending United States employer. § 101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b) of the Act; 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii). Specifically, the AAO must determine whether the petitioner has established that it will have "an employer-employee relationship with respect to employees under this part, as indicated by the fact that it may hire, pay, fire, supervise, or otherwise control the work of any such employee." 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii)(2).

Section 101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b) of the Act, defines an H-1B nonimmigrant as an alien:

(i) who is coming temporarily to the United States to perform services . . . in a specialty occupation described in section 1184(i)(1) . . . , who meets the requirements of the occupation specified in section 1184(i)(2) . . . , and with respect to whom the Secretary of Labor determines . . . that the intending employer has filed with the Secretary an application under 1182(n)(1).

"United States employer" is defined in the Code of Federal Regulations at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii) as follows:

United States employer means a person, firm, corporation, contractor, or other association, or organization in the United States which:

- (1) Engages a person to work within the United States;
- (2) Has an employer-employee relationship with respect to employees under this part, as indicated by the fact that it may hire, pay, fire, supervise, or otherwise control the work of any such employee; and
- (3) Has an Internal Revenue Service Tax identification number.

The record is not persuasive in establishing that the petitioner or any of its clients will have an employer-employee relationship with the beneficiary.

Although "United States employer" is defined in the regulations, it is noted that "employee," "employed," "employment," and "employer-employee relationship" are not defined for purposes of the H-1B visa classification even though these terms are used repeatedly in both the Act and the regulations, including within the definition of "United States employer" at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii). Section 101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b) of the Act indicates that an alien coming to the United States to perform services in a specialty occupation will have an "intending employer" who will file a labor condition application with the Secretary of Labor pursuant to section 212(n)(1) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(n)(1). The intending employer is described as offering full-time or part-time "employment" to the H-1B "employee." Sections 212(n)(1)(A)(i) and 212(n)(2)(C)(vii) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. §§ 1182(n)(1)(A)(i) and 1182(n)(2)(C)(vii). Further, the regulations indicate that "United States employers" must file Form I-129 in order to classify aliens as H-1B temporary "employees." 8 C.F.R. §§ 214.2(h)(1) and 214.2(h)(2)(i)(A). Finally, the definition of "United States employer" indicates in its second prong that the petitioner must have an "employer-employee relationship" with the "employees under this part," i.e., the H-1B beneficiary, and that this relationship be evidenced by the employer's ability to "hire, pay, fire, supervise, or otherwise control the work of any such employee." 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii) (defining the term "United States employer"). Accordingly, neither the legacy Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) nor U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) has defined the terms "employee," "employed," "employment," or "employer-employee relationship" by regulation for purposes of the H-1B visa classification, even though the law describes H-1B beneficiaries as being "employees" who must have an "employer-employee relationship" with a "United States employer."<sup>1</sup> Therefore, for purposes of the H-1B visa classification, these terms are undefined.

The Supreme Court of the United States has determined that where federal law fails to clearly define the term "employee," courts should conclude that the term was "intended to describe the conventional master-servant relationship as understood by common-law agency doctrine." Nationwide Mutual Ins. Co. v. Darden, 503 U.S. 318, 322-323 (1992) (hereinafter "Darden") (quoting Community for Creative Non-Violence v. Reid, 490 U.S. 730 (1989)). That definition is as follows:

"In determining whether a hired party is an employee under the general common law of agency, we consider the hiring party's right to control the manner and means by which the product is accomplished. Among the other factors relevant to this inquiry are the skill required; the source of the instrumentalities and tools; the location of the work; the duration of the relationship between the parties; whether the hiring party has the right to assign additional projects to the hired party; the extent of the hired party's discretion over when and how long to work; the method of payment; the hired party's role in hiring and paying assistants; whether the work is part of the regular business of the hiring party; whether the hiring party is in business; the provision of employee benefits; and the tax treatment of the hired party.”

<sup>1</sup> Under 8 C.F.R. §§ 214.2(h)(2)(i)(F), it is possible for an "agent" who will not be the actual "employer" of a beneficiary to file an H petition on behalf of the actual employer and the alien. While an employment agency may petition for the H-1B visa, the ultimate end-user of the alien's services is the "true employer" for H-1B visa purposes, since the end-user will "hire, pay, fire, supervise, or otherwise control the work" of the beneficiary "at the root level." Defensor v. Meissner, 201 F.3d 384, 387-388. Accordingly, despite the intermediary position of the employment agency, the ultimate employer must still satisfy the requirements of the statute and regulations: "To interpret the regulations any other way would lead to an absurd result." Id. at 388.

Darden, 503 U.S. at 323-324 (quoting Community for Creative Non-Violence v. Reid, 490 U.S. at 751-752); see also Restatement (Second) of Agency § 220(2) (1958); Clackamas Gastroenterology Associates, P.C. v. Wells, 538 U.S. 440 (2003) (hereinafter "Clackamas"). As the common-law test contains “no shorthand formula or magic phrase that can be applied to find the answer, . . . all of the incidents of the relationship must be assessed and weighed with no one factor being decisive.” Darden, 503 U.S. at 324 (quoting NLRB v. United Ins. Co. of America, 390 U.S. at 258 (1968)).<sup>2</sup>

Therefore, in considering whether or not one is an "employee" in an "employer-employee relationship" with a

<sup>2</sup> While the Darden court considered only the definition of "employee" under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 ("ERISA"), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(6), and did not address the definition of "employer," courts have generally refused to extend the common law agency definition to ERISA's use of employer because "the definition of 'employer' in ERISA, unlike the definition of 'employee,' clearly indicates legislative intent to extend the definition beyond the traditional common law definition." See, e.g., Bowers v. Andrew Weir Shipping, Ltd., 810 F. Supp. 522 (S.D.N.Y. 1992), aff'd, 27 F.3d 800 (2nd Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1000 (1994). However, in this matter, the Act does not exhibit a legislative intent to extend the definition of "employer" in section 101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b) of the Act, "employment" in section 212(n)(1)(A)(i) of the Act, or "employee" in section 212(n)(2)(C)(vii) of the Act beyond the traditional common law definitions. Instead, in the context of the H-1B visa classification, the term "United States employer" was defined in the regulations to be even more restrictive than the common law agency definition. A federal agency's interpretation of a statute whose administration is entrusted to it is to be accepted unless Congress has spoken directly on the issue. See Chevron, U.S.A., Inc. v. Natural Resources Defense Council, Inc., 467 U.S. 837, 844-45 (1984).

The regulatory definition of "United States employer" requires H-1B employers to have a tax identification number, to employ persons in the United States, and to have an "employer-employee relationship" with the H-1B "employee." 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii). Accordingly, the term "United States employer" not only requires H-1B employers and employees to have an "employer-employee relationship" as understood by common-law agency doctrine, it imposes additional requirements, thus indicating that the regulations do not indicate an intent to extend the definition beyond "the traditional common law definition." Therefore, in the absence of an intent to impose broader definitions by either Congress or USCIS, the "conventional master-servant relationship as understood by common-law agency doctrine," and the Darden construction test, apply to the terms "employee," "employer-employee relationship," "employed," and "employment" as used in section 101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b) of the Act, section 212(n) of the Act, and 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h). That being said, there are instances in the Act where Congress may have intended a broader application of the term "employer" than what is encompassed in the conventional master-servant relationship. See, e.g., section 214(c)(2)(F) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1184(c)(2)(F) (referring to "unaffiliated employers" supervising and controlling L-1B intracompany transferees having specialized knowledge); section 274A of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1324a (referring to the employment of unauthorized aliens).

"United States employer" for purposes of H-1B nonimmigrant petitions, USCIS will focus on the common-law touchstone of control. Clackamas, 538 U.S. at 450. Factors indicating that a worker is an "employee" of an "employer" are clearly delineated in both the Darden and Clackamas decisions. 503 U.S. at 323-324; see also Restatement (Second) of Agency § 220(2) (1958). Such indicia of control include when, where, and how a worker performs the job; the continuity of the worker's relationship with the employer; the tax treatment of the worker; the provision of employee benefits; and whether the work performed by the worker is part of the employer's regular business. See Clackamas, 538 U.S. at 448-449; cf. New Compliance Manual, Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, § 2-III(A)(1), (EEOC 2006) (adopting a materially identical test and indicating that said test was based on the Darden decision); see also Defensor v. Meissner, 201 F.3d at 388 (determining that hospitals, as the recipients of beneficiaries' services, are the true "employers" of H-1B nurses under 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h), even though a medical contract service agency is the actual petitioner, because the hospitals ultimately hire, pay, fire, supervise, or otherwise control the work of the beneficiaries).

It is important to note that the factors listed in Darden and Clackamas are not exhaustive and must be evaluated on a case-by-case basis. Other aspects of the relationship between the parties may affect the determination of whether an employer-employee relationship exists. Furthermore, not all or even a majority of the listed criteria need be met; however, the fact finder must weigh and compare a combination of the factors in analyzing the facts of each individual case. The determination must be based on all of the circumstances in the relationship between the parties, regardless of whether the parties refer to it as an employee or as an independent contractor relationship. See Clackamas, 538 U.S. at 448-449; New Compliance Manual at § 2-III(A)(1).

Likewise, the "mere existence of a document styled 'employment agreement'" shall not lead inexorably to the conclusion that the worker is an employee. Clackamas, 538 U.S. at 450. "Rather, as was true in applying common-law rules to the independent-contractor-versus-employee issue confronted in Darden, the answer to whether a shareholder-director is an employee depends on 'all of the incidents of the relationship . . . with no one factor being decisive.'" Id. at 451 (quoting Darden, 503 U.S. at 324).

Applying the Darden and Clackamas tests to this matter, the petitioner has not established that it or any of its clients will be a "United States employer" having an "employer-employee relationship" with the beneficiary as an H-1B temporary "employee."

In response to the director's RFE, in which contracts and/or work orders between the petitioner and end clients were requested, the petitioner claimed that the beneficiary would work for the [REDACTED] as evidenced by the purchase order, statement of work, and two subcontractor agreements with Modis, Inc. and Attic Technologies.

To qualify as a United States employer, all three criteria at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii) must be met. The Form I-129 and tax documents submitted by the petitioner indicate that the petitioner has an Internal Revenue Service Tax Identification Number. While the petitioner's letter of support indicates its intent to engage the beneficiary to work in the United States, no specific agreement of contract was submitted demonstrating an employer-employee relationship between the petitioner and the beneficiary. Therefore, the documentation submitted by the petitioner is insufficient to establish that an employer-employee relationship exists.

Although the petitioner submitted evidence such as the agreements discussed above, the petitioner did not submit any document which outlined in detail the nature and scope of the beneficiary's employment. Therefore, the key element in this matter, which is who exercises ultimate control over the beneficiary, has not been substantiated.

The petitioner contends that it will assign personnel to various client projects as needed, and claimed in its initial support letter to have clients throughout the United States. Additionally, in response to the RFE, the petitioner stated that it could not provide an itinerary for the beneficiary's time in the United States, since the nature of the petitioner's business does not permit the accurate prediction of where the beneficiary could potentially be located for the duration of the petition. The petitioner noted that the current project with the Iowa Foundation could be extended indefinitely, or essentially could end next month. Noting that this uncertainty was a part of the petitioner's business operations, it concluded that it was unable to provide an itinerary and complete overview of the work assignments the beneficiary would hold during the course of his employment.

The purchase order, statement of work, and subcontractor agreements shed little light on the beneficiary's proposed position. While the purchase order identifies the beneficiary as the subcontractor, the other documents make no mention of the beneficiary. More importantly, the purchase order does not identify the client; therefore, these documents appear more akin to four separate contractual agreements than four documents representing a single project upon which the beneficiary is claimed to be assigned. Moreover, the petitioner does not even know where the beneficiary will be employed after the expiration of the [REDACTED] project and for the duration of the validity period.

As such, while social security contributions, worker's compensation contributions, unemployment insurance contributions, federal and state income tax withholdings, and other benefits are still relevant factors in determining who will control an alien beneficiary, other incidents of the relationship, e.g., who will oversee and direct the work of the beneficiary, who will provide the instrumentalities and tools, where will the work be located, and who has the right or ability to affect the projects to which the alien beneficiary is assigned, must also be assessed and weighed in order to make a determination as to who will be the beneficiary's employer. Without full disclosure of all of the relevant factors, the AAO is unable to find that the requisite employer-employee relationship will exist between the petitioner and the beneficiary.

The evidence, therefore, is insufficient to establish that the petitioner qualifies as a United States employer, as defined by 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii). Merely claiming in its letters that the petitioner exercises complete control over the beneficiary, without evidence supporting the claim, does not establish eligibility in this matter. The evidence of record prior to adjudication did not establish that the petitioner would act as the beneficiary's employer in that it will hire, pay, fire, or otherwise control the work of the beneficiary. Despite the director's specific request for evidence such as employment contracts or agreements to corroborate its claim, the petitioner failed to submit such evidence.

Based on the tests outlined above, the petitioner has not established that it or any of its clients will be a "United States employer" having an "employer-employee relationship" with the beneficiary as an H-1B temporary "employee." 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii).

Likewise, the petitioner is not an agent as defined by the regulations. The definition of agent at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(2)(i)(F) provides for two types of agents: (1) “an agent performing the function of an employer”; and (2) “a company in the business as an agent involving multiple employers as the representative of both the employers and the beneficiary.” Absent documentation such as work orders or contracts between the ultimate end clients and the beneficiary, the petitioner cannot be considered an agent in this matter. As stated above, going on record without supporting documentary evidence is not sufficient for purposes of meeting the burden of proof in these proceedings. Matter of Soffici, 22 I&N Dec. at 165.

An application or petition that fails to comply with the technical requirements of the law may be denied by the AAO even if the Service Center does not identify all of the grounds for denial in the initial decision. See Spencer Enterprises, Inc. v. United States, 229 F. Supp. 2d 1025, 1043 (E.D. Cal. 2001), aff'd, 345 F.3d 683 (9th Cir. 2003); see also Soltane v. DOJ, 381 F.3d 143, 145 (3d Cir. 2004) (noting that the AAO conducts appellate review on a de novo basis).

The appeal will be dismissed and the petition denied for the above stated reasons, with each considered as an independent and alternative basis for the decision. In visa petition proceedings, the burden of proving eligibility for the benefit sought remains entirely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. Here, that burden has not been met.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed. The petition is denied.
