IN RE: Petitioner:
Beneficiary:

PETITION: Petition for a Nonimmigrant Worker Pursuant to Section 101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b)

ON BEHALF OF PETITIONER:

INSTRUCTIONS:

Enclosed please find the decision of the Administrative Appeals Office in your case. All of the documents related to this matter have been returned to the office that originally decided your case. Please be advised that any further inquiry that you might have concerning your case must be made to that office.

If you believe the law was inappropriately applied by us in reaching our decision, or you have additional information that you wish to have considered, you may file a motion to reconsider or a motion to reopen. The specific requirements for filing such a request can be found at 8 C.F.R. § 103.5. All motions must be submitted to the office that originally decided your case by filing a Form I-290B, Notice of Appeal or Motion, with a fee of $630. Please be aware that 8 C.F.R. § 103.5(a)(1)(i) requires that any motion must be filed within 30 days of the decision that the motion seeks to reconsider or reopen.

Thank you,

Perry Rhew
Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The service center director denied the nonimmigrant visa petition. The matter is now on appeal before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO). The appeal will be dismissed. The petition will be denied.

The petitioner is a software development and consulting firm established in 2005. It seeks to employ the beneficiary as a market research analyst and to classify him as a nonimmigrant worker in a specialty occupation pursuant to section 101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b).

The director denied the petition on the grounds that: (1) the petitioner failed to establish that it qualifies as a U.S. employer having an employer-employee relationship with the beneficiary; (2) the petitioner failed to establish that it qualifies as a U.S. agent arranging short-term employment on the beneficiary's behalf with numerous employers; (3) the petitioner did not submit a valid LCA for all work locations; and (4) the petitioner failed to establish that the proffered position qualifies for classification as a specialty occupation.

The record of proceeding before the AAO contains: (1) Form I-129 and supporting documentation; (2) the director's request for evidence (RFE); (3) the petitioner's response to the RFE; (4) the notice of decision; and (5) the Form I-290B and supporting materials. The AAO reviewed the record in its entirety before issuing its decision.

In the petition signed on September 14, 2009, the petitioner claimed to have 57 employees and a projected gross annual income of $6 million. The petitioner indicated that it wished to employ the beneficiary as a market research analyst from October 1, 2009 to September 30, 2012 at an hourly wage of $23.49.

The support letter states that the beneficiary will work as a market research analyst for three years. A service agreement submitted along with the petition states that the beneficiary will be working in Redwood City, California at the offices of [REDACTED] as an IT Market Research Analyst. The duties of the proffered position are the following:

- Develop the company's detailed marketing strategy, and stay abreast of trends and industry needs;
- Identify, examine, and analyze statistical data on a variety of products to forecast future marketing trends;
- Establish research methodology and design format using information sources and market data;
- Monitor marketing performance and study marketing strategies to determine effectiveness of services and make recommendations;
- Generate, refine and evaluate marketing strategies, and conduct profitability studies to support development and investment opportunities with a view towards improving and modifying tactics to increase sales and overall market share.

The petitioner states that it requires at least a bachelor's degree. The petitioner does not specify the field of study required. The record contains a copy of the beneficiary's Post Graduate Diploma in Business Management (Marketing) issued by Bhavan's S.P. Jain Institute of Management & Research and a Bachelor of Engineering degree from the Institute of Engineering & Technology, Indore. The record does not contain an education evaluation of the beneficiary's foreign degrees.

The Form I-129 indicates that the beneficiary will work at [REDACTED]. The petitioner also indicates in the employment agreement that the beneficiary will work at its offices in [REDACTED].

On September 19, 2009, the director issued an RFE advising the petitioner, in part, to submit (1) a more detailed job description, including specific job duties, percentage of time spent on each duty, level of responsibility, hours per week of work and the minimum education, training and experience necessary; (2) the petitioner's organizational chart identifying the proffered position; (3) an explanation why the proffered position is a specialty occupation; (4) an LCA including all work locations; and (5) evidence to demonstrate that a valid employer-employee relationship will exist for the duration of the requested validity period for the classification, such as copies of signed contracts between the petitioner and the beneficiary, a complete itinerary of services; signed contractual agreements between the petitioner and end-client.

On September 30, 2009, in response to the director's RFE, the petitioner submitted, in part, (1) a copy of the LCA submitted with the Form I-129²; (2) a one-year service agreement between the petitioner and [REDACTED] with two attachments, including a statement of work listing the beneficiary's job duties; and (3) an employment agreement between the petitioner and the beneficiary listing her position as "computer programmer."

The director denied the petition on October 7, 2009.

On appeal, the petitioner submits an organizational chart, corporate income tax returns, employee quarterly reports, and a lease agreement. The petitioner states on the Form I-290 that it "has actual control over the beneficiary" and that the evidence submitted sufficiently establishes that the position is a specialty occupation.

The AAO will first consider whether the petitioner has established that it will be the beneficiary's employer and whether there exists an employer-employee relationship. The petitioner does not offer any legal argument in support of a claim that the director erred in finding that it had failed to establish that there was a valid employer-employee relationship. On appeal, the petitioner simply submits an organizational chart that does not list the beneficiary. The organizational chart includes a note stating that the petitioner has "consultants at multiple client sites."

Under the test of Nationwide Mutual Ins. Co. v. Darden (Darden), 503 U.S. 318, 322-323 (1992) (hereinafter "Darden"), the United States Supreme Court has determined that where federal law fails to clearly define the term "employee," courts should conclude that the term was "intended to describe the conventional master-servant relationship as understood by common-law agency doctrine." Darden, 503 U.S. 318 at 322-323 (quoting Community for Creative Non-Violence v. Reid, 490 U.S. 730 (1989)). The Supreme Court stated:

"In determining whether a hired party is an employee under the general common law of agency, we consider the hiring party's right to control the manner and means by which the product is accomplished. Among the other factors relevant to this inquiry are the skill required; the source of the instrumentalities and tools; the location of the work; the duration of the relationship between the parties; whether the hiring party has the right to assign additional projects to the hired party; the extent of the hired party's discretion over when and how long to work; the method of payment; the hired party's role in hiring and paying assistants; whether the work is part of the regular business of the hiring party; whether the hiring party is in business; the provision of employee benefits; and the tax treatment of the hired party."

Darden, 503 U.S. at 323-324 (quoting Community for Creative Non-Violence v. Reid, 490 U.S. at 751-752); see also Clackamas Gastroenterology Associates, P.C. v. Wells, 538 U.S. at 440 (hereinafter "Clackamas"). As the common-law test contains "no shorthand formula or magic phrase that can be applied to find the answer, . . . all of the incidents of the relationship must be assessed and weighed with no one factor being decisive." Darden, 503 U.S. at 324 (quoting NLRB v. United Ins. Co. of America, 390 U.S. 254, 258 (1968)).³

³ While the Darden court considered only the definition of "employee" under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 ("ERISA"), 29 U.S.C. § 1002(6), and did not address the definition of "employer," courts have generally refused to extend the common law agency definition to ERISA's use of employer because "the definition of 'employer' in ERISA, unlike the definition of 'employee,' clearly indicates legislative intent to extend the definition beyond the traditional common law definition." See, e.g., Bowers v. Andrew Weir Shipping, Ltd., 810 F. Supp. 522 (S.D.N.Y. 1992), aff'd, 27 F.3d 800 (2nd Cir. 1994), cert. denied, 513 U.S. 1000 (1994). However, in this matter, the Act does not exhibit a legislative intent to extend the definition of "employer" in section 101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b) of the Act, "employment" in section 212(n)(1)(A)(i) of the Act, or "employee" in section 212(n)(2)(C)(vii) of the Act beyond the traditional common law definitions. Instead, in the context of the H-1B visa classification, the term "United States employer" was defined in the regulations to be even more restrictive than the common law agency definition. A federal agency's interpretation of a statute whose administration is entrusted to it is to be accepted unless Congress has spoken directly on the issue. See Chevron, U.S.A., Inc. v. Natural Resources Defense Council, Inc., 467 U.S. 837, 844-845 (1984).

The regulatory definition of "United States employer" requires H-1B employers to have a tax identification number, to employ persons in the United States, and to have an "employer-employee relationship" with the H-1B "employee." 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii). Accordingly, the term "United States employer" not only requires H-1B employers and employees to have an "employer-employee relationship" as understood by common-law agency doctrine, it imposes additional requirements of having a tax identification number and to employ persons in the United States. The lack of an express expansion of the definition regarding the terms "employee," "employed," "employment" or "employer-employee relationship" combined with the agency's otherwise generally circular definition of United

Therefore, in considering whether or not one is an "employee" in an "employer-employee relationship" with a "United States employer" for purposes of H-1B nonimmigrant petitions, USCIS must focus on the common-law touchstone of "control." Clackamas, 538 U.S. at 450; see also 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii)(2) (defining a "United States employer" as one who "has an employer-employee relationship with respect to employees under this part, as indicated by the fact that it may hire, pay, fire, supervise, or otherwise control the work of any such employee" (emphasis added)).

Factors indicating that a worker is or will be an "employee" of an "employer" are clearly delineated in both the Darden and Clackamas decisions. Darden, 503 U.S. at 323-324; Clackamas, 538 U.S. at 445; see also Restatement (Second) of Agency § 220(2) (1958). Such indicia of control include when, where, and how a worker performs the job; the continuity of the worker's relationship with the employer; the tax treatment of the worker; the provision of employee benefits; and whether the work performed by the worker is part of the employer's regular business. See Clackamas, 538 U.S. at 445; see also New Compliance Manual, Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, § 2-III(A)(1), (EEOC 2006) (adopting a materially identical test and indicating that said test was based on the Darden decision).

It is important to note that the factors listed in Darden and Clackamas are not exhaustive and must be evaluated on a case-by-case basis. Other aspects of the relationship between the parties may affect the determination of whether an employer-employee relationship exists. Furthermore, not all or even a majority of the listed criteria need be met; however, the fact finder must weigh and compare a combination of the factors in analyzing the facts of each individual case. The determination must be based on all of the circumstances in the relationship between the parties, regardless of whether the parties refer to it as an employee or as an independent contractor relationship. See Clackamas, 538 U.S. at 448-449; New Compliance Manual at § 2-III(A)(1).⁴

States employer in 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii) indicates that the regulations do not intend to extend the definition beyond "the traditional common law definition" or, more importantly, that construing these terms in this manner would thwart congressional design or lead to absurd results. Cf. Darden, 503 U.S. at 318-319. Therefore, in the absence of an intent to impose broader definitions by either Congress or USCIS, the "conventional master-servant relationship as understood by common-law agency doctrine," and the Darden construction test, apply to the terms "employee," "employer-employee relationship," "employed," and "employment" as used in section 101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b) of the Act, section 212(n) of the Act, and 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h). That being said, there are instances in the Act where Congress may have intended a broader application of the term "employer" than what is encompassed in the conventional master-servant relationship. See, e.g., section 214(c)(2)(F) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1184(c)(2)(F) (referring to "unaffiliated employers" supervising and controlling L-1B intracompany transferees having specialized knowledge); section 274A of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1324a (referring to the employment of unauthorized aliens).

Applying the Darden test to this matter, the petitioner has not established that it will be a "United States employer" having an "employer-employee relationship" with the beneficiary as an H-1B temporary "employee." It is first noted that, under Defensor, it was determined that hospitals, as the recipients of beneficiaries' services, are the "true employers" of H-1B nurses under 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h), even though a medical contract service agency is the actual petitioner, because the hospitals ultimately hire, pay, fire, supervise, or otherwise control the work of the beneficiaries. See Defensor v. Meissner, 201 F.3d at 388. This situation appears no different in that, while the beneficiary may be on the petitioner's payroll, [REDACTED] will ultimately pay the beneficiary with the petitioner's role being primarily that of a payroll service. Other than putting the beneficiary on its payroll and providing benefits, and stating that the petitioner has the right to exercise control and supervise the beneficiary, it is unclear what role the petitioner has in the beneficiary's duty assignment.

Next, no independent evidence was provided to indicate that the petitioner would control whether there is any work to be performed or that the petitioner would even oversee the beneficiary's work. Indeed, the organizational chart does not include the beneficiary's position or reporting chain of command. Additionally, the service agreement between the petitioner and [REDACTED] (the purported end-client) indicates, for example, that the beneficiary will provide the end-client with weekly time and project status reports. The first attachment to the service agreement suggests that [REDACTED] will be paying the beneficiary $50 per hour, but also indicates that the services will be provided to a third entity, [REDACTED]. The AAO also notes that the position title listed in the employment agreement between the petitioner and the beneficiary (i.e., computer programmer) differ from those listed in the petition and the service agreement between the petitioner and the purported end-client. Moreover, the beneficiary will work at the end-client location and, absent evidence to the contrary, the beneficiary will use the tools and instrumentalities of Y Media Labs to perform her duties, not those of the petitioner. Therefore, it cannot be concluded that the petitioner would control the work the beneficiary performs.

In view of the above, it appears that the beneficiary will not be an "employee" having an "employer-employee relationship" with the petitioner or even with a "United States employer" represented by the petitioner in a documented agent relationship. It has not been established that the beneficiary will be "controlled" by the petitioner or that the termination of the beneficiary's employment is the ultimate decision of the petitioner. Therefore, based on the tests outlined above, the petitioner has not established that it will be a "United States employer" having an "employer-employee relationship" with the beneficiary as an H-1B temporary "employee." 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii).

The AAO therefore affirms the director's finding that the petitioner does not qualify as a United States employer, as it failed to establish that it will control the beneficiary's work such that it will have an employer-employee relationship with the beneficiary.⁵

is the actual source of the instrumentalities and tools that must be examined, not who has the right to provide the tools required to complete an assigned project. See id. at 323.

⁵ The director's decision also finds that the petitioner does not qualify as a U.S. agent as defined in 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(2)(i)(F). The AAO notes that the petitioner did not claim to be a U.S. agent nor has the

The AAO further finds that the petitioner failed to establish that the LCA corresponds to the petition by encompassing all of the work locations and related wage requirements for the beneficiary's full employment period. For this additional reason, the director did not err in denying the petition on this basis.

In pertinent part, the regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(B) states:

The petitioner shall submit the following with an H-1B petition involving a specialty occupation: (1) A certification from the Secretary of Labor that the petitioner has filed a labor condition application

The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(b)(1) states, in pertinent part:

An applicant or petitioner must establish that he or she is eligible for the requested benefit at the time of filing the application or petition. All required application or petition forms must be properly completed and filed with any initial evidence required by applicable regulations and/or the form's instructions.

In addition, the regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(i)(B)(1), states, as part of the general requirements for petitions involving a specialty occupation, that:

Before filing a petition for H-1B classification in a specialty occupation, the petitioner shall obtain a certification from the Department of Labor that it has filed a labor condition application in the occupational specialty in which the alien(s) will be employed.

Further, the regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(2)(E), which states:

Amended or new petition. The petitioner shall file an amended or new petition, with fee, with the Service Center where the original petition was filed to reflect any material changes in the terms and conditions of employment or training or the alien's eligibility as specified in the original approved petition. An amended or new H-1C, H-1B, H-2A, or H-2B petition must be accompanied by a current or new Department of Labor determination. In the case of an H-1B petition, this requirement includes a new labor condition application.

It is self-evident that a change in the location of a beneficiary's work to a geographical area not covered by the LCA filed with the Form I-129 is a material change in the terms and conditions of employment. Because work location is critical to the petitioner's wage rate obligations, the change deprives the petition of an LCA supporting the period of work to be performed at the new location and at what will likely be a new wage rate.

Moreover, while DOL is the agency that certifies LCA applications before they are submitted to USCIS, DOL regulations note that the Department of Homeland Security (DHS) (i.e., its immigration benefits branch, USCIS) is the department responsible for determining whether the content of an LCA filed for a particular Form I-129 actually supports that petition. See 20 C.F.R. § 655.705(b), which states, in pertinent part (emphasis added):

For H-1B visas . . . DHS accepts the employer's petition (DHS Form I-129) with the DOL certified LCA attached. In doing so, the DHS determines whether the petition is supported by an LCA which corresponds with the petition, whether the occupation named in the [LCA] is a specialty occupation or whether the individual is a fashion model of distinguished merit and ability, and whether the qualifications of the nonimmigrant meet the statutory requirements of H-1B visa classification.

As 20 C.F.R. § 655.705(b) requires that USCIS ensure that an LCA actually supports the H-1B petition filed on behalf of the beneficiary, this regulation inherently necessitates the filing of an amended H-1B petition to permit USCIS to perform its regulatory duty to ensure that the new LCA actually supports the H-1B petition filed on behalf of the beneficiary. In addition, as 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(b)(1) requires eligibility to be established at the time of filing, it is factually impossible for an LCA certified by DOL after the filing of an initial H-1B petition to establish eligibility at the time the initial petition was filed. Therefore, in order for a petitioner to comply with 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(b)(1) and for USCIS to perform its regulatory duties under 20 C.F.R. § 655.705(b), a petitioner must file an amended H-1B petition with USCIS whenever a beneficiary's job location changes such that a new LCA is required to be filed with DOL.

Furthermore, to ascertain the intent of a petitioner, USCIS must look to the Form I-129 and the documents filed in support of the petition. It is only in this manner that the agency can determine the exact position offered, the location of employment, the proffered wage, et cetera. If a petitioner's intent changes with regard to a material term and condition of employment or the beneficiary's eligibility, an amended or new petition must be filed. To allow a petition to be amended in any other way would be contrary to the regulations. Taken to the extreme, a petitioner could then simply claim to offer what is essentially speculative employment when filing the petition only to "change its intent" after the fact, either before or after the H-1B petition has been adjudicated. The agency made clear long ago that speculative employment is not permitted in the H-1B program. A 1998 proposed rule documented this position as follows:

Historically, the Service has not granted H-1B classification on the basis of speculative, or undetermined, prospective employment. The H-1B classification is not intended as a vehicle for an alien to engage in a job search within the United States, or for employers to bring in temporary foreign workers to meet possible workforce needs arising from potential business expansions or the expectation of potential new customers or contracts. To determine whether an alien is properly classifiable as an H-1B nonimmigrant under the statute, the Service must first examine the duties of the position to be occupied to ascertain whether the duties of the position require the attainment of a specific bachelor's degree. See section 214(i) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the "Act"). The Service must then determine whether the alien has the appropriate degree for the occupation. In the case of speculative employment, the Service is unable to perform either part of this two-prong analysis and, therefore, is unable to adjudicate properly a request for H-1B classification. Moreover, there is no assurance that the alien will engage in a specialty occupation upon arrival in this country.

63 Fed. Reg. 30419, 30419 - 30420 (June 4, 1998). While a petitioner is certainly permitted to change its intent with regard to non-speculative employment, e.g., a change in duties or job location, it must nonetheless document such a material change in intent through an amended petition in accordance with 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(2)(i)(E).

The LCA and Form I-129 in this matter indicate the proffered position's location as being at the petitioner's address in Fremont, California, or at [REDACTED] in Redwood City, California. The petitioner only has a one-year service agreement with [REDACTED]. An attachment to the service agreement indicates that the beneficiary will be providing services to a third party, [REDACTED]. The record of proceeding therefore suggests that the beneficiary will likely work at locations not identified in the Form I-129 and the LCA and, as such, USCIS cannot ascertain that the LCA filed by the petitioner actually supports the H-1B petition. Again, a petitioner must establish eligibility at the time of filing the nonimmigrant visa petition. 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(b)(1). A visa petition may not be approved at a future date after the petitioner or beneficiary becomes eligible under a new set of facts. Matter of Michelin Tire Corp., 17 I&N Dec. 248 (Reg. Comm. 1978).

Also beyond the decision of the director, the AAO finds that the petition must be denied for the additional reason that it was filed without an itinerary of the dates and locations where the beneficiary would work, as required by the regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(2)(i)(B), which states, in pertinent part:

Service or training in more than one location. A petition which requires services to be performed or training to be received in more than one location must include an itinerary with the dates and locations of the services or training and must be filed with the Service office which has jurisdiction over I-129H petitions in the area where the petitioner is located. The address which the petitioner specifies as its location on the I-129H petition shall be where the petitioner is located for purposes of this paragraph.

The language of the regulation, which appears under the subheading "Filing of petitions" and uses the mandatory "must," indicates that an itinerary is material and required initial evidence for a petition involving employment at multiple locations, and that such a petition may not be approved for any employment for which there is not submitted, at the time of the petition's filing, at least the employment dates and locations. The AAO, in its discretion, affirms the director's denial of the petition for this additional reason.

Next, the AAO will consider whether the proffered position is a specialty occupation. Section 214(i)(1) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1184(i)(1), defines the term “specialty occupation” as an occupation that requires:

- (A) theoretical and practical application of a body of highly specialized knowledge, and
- (B) attainment of a bachelor’s or higher degree in the specific specialty (or its equivalent) as a minimum for entry into the occupation in the United States.

The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii) states, in pertinent part, the following:

Specialty occupation means an occupation which [(1)] requires theoretical and practical application of a body of highly specialized knowledge in fields of human endeavor including, but not limited to, architecture, engineering, mathematics, physical sciences, social sciences, medicine and health, education, business specialties, accounting, law, theology, and the arts, and [(2)] which requires the attainment of a bachelor's degree or higher in a specific specialty, or its equivalent, as a minimum for entry into the occupation in the United States.

Pursuant to 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A), to qualify as a specialty occupation, a proposed position must also meet one of the following criteria:

- (1) A baccalaureate or higher degree or its equivalent is normally the minimum requirement for entry into the particular position;
- (2) The degree requirement is common to the industry in parallel positions among similar organizations or, in the alternative, an employer may show that its particular position is so complex or unique that it can be performed only by an individual with a degree;
- (3) The employer normally requires a degree or its equivalent for the position; or
- (4) The nature of the specific duties is so specialized and complex that knowledge required to perform the duties is usually associated with the attainment of a baccalaureate or higher degree.

As a threshold issue, it is noted that 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A) must logically be read together with section 214(i)(1) of the Act and 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii). In other words, this regulatory language must be construed in harmony with the thrust of the related provisions and with the statute as a whole. See K Mart Corp. v. Cartier Inc., 486 U.S. 281, 291 (1988) (holding that construction of language which takes into account the design of the statute as a whole is preferred); see also COIT Independence Joint Venture v. Federal Sav. and Loan Ins. Corp., 489 U.S. 561 (1989); Matter of W-F-, 21 I&N Dec. 503 (BIA 1996). As such, the criteria stated in 8

C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A) should logically be read as being necessary but not necessarily sufficient to meet the statutory and regulatory definition of specialty occupation. To otherwise interpret this section as stating the necessary and sufficient conditions for meeting the definition of specialty occupation would result in particular positions meeting a condition under 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A) but not the statutory or regulatory definition. See Defensor v. Meissner, 201 F.3d 382, 387 (5th Cir. 2000) (hereinafter Defensor). To avoid this illogical and absurd result, 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A) must therefore be read as stating additional requirements that a position must meet, supplementing the statutory and regulatory definitions of specialty occupation.

Consonant with section 214(i)(1) of the Act and the regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii), USCIS consistently interprets the term “degree” in the criteria at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A) to mean not just any baccalaureate or higher degree, but one in a specific specialty that is directly related to the proffered position. Applying this standard, USCIS regularly approves H-1B petitions for qualified aliens who are to be employed as engineers, computer scientists, certified public accountants, college professors, and other such occupations. These professions, for which petitioners have regularly been able to establish a minimum entry requirement in the United States of a baccalaureate or higher degree in a specific specialty, or its equivalent, fairly represent the types of specialty occupations that Congress contemplated when it created the H-1B visa category.

The AAO notes that, as recognized by the court in Defensor, supra, where the work is to be performed for entities other than the petitioner, evidence of the client companies' job requirements is critical. The court held that the legacy Immigration and Naturalization Service had reasonably interpreted the statute and regulations as requiring the petitioner to produce evidence that a proffered position qualifies as a specialty occupation on the basis of the requirements imposed by the entities using the beneficiary's services. Id. at 387-388. Such evidence must be sufficiently detailed to demonstrate the type and educational level of highly specialized knowledge in a specific discipline that is necessary to perform that particular work.

The petitioner states in the Form I-290B that the beneficiary will work at the address of the purported end-client entity [REDACTED] for the duration of the petition. Nevertheless, the service agreement between the petitioner and [REDACTED] is for one year only. Moreover, the service agreement states that the petitioner is contracted to provide an “IT Market Research Analyst” and that the services are to be provided to a third party, [REDACTED]. The employment agreement between the petitioner and the beneficiary states she will work as a computer programmer at its office, or at the offices of the petitioner's clients, and/or at such other place or places as may be directed by the petitioner. As discussed above, it is not clear what role, if any, the petitioner has in the beneficiary's employment. There is insufficient evidence in the record to suggest that the beneficiary will be supervised by someone employed by the petitioner or that the beneficiary will use the tools or products of the petitioner. The record of proceedings is, at best, unclear as to the duties to be performed by the beneficiary on a day-to-day basis. As such, the petitioner has failed to establish the existence of H-1B caliber work for the beneficiary.

The petitioner's failure to establish the substantive nature of the work to be performed by the beneficiary precludes a finding that the proffered position is a specialty occupation under any criteria at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(4), because it is the substantive nature of that work that determines (1) the normal minimum educational requirement for the particular position, which is the focus of criterion 1; (2) industry positions which are parallel to the proffered position and thus appropriate for review for a common degree requirement, under the first alternate prong of criterion 2; (3) the level of complexity or uniqueness of the proffered position, which is the focus of the second alternate prong of criterion 2; (4) the factual justification for a petitioner normally requiring a degree or its equivalent, when that is an issue under criterion 3; and (5) the degree of specialization and complexity of the specific duties which is the focus of criterion 4.

Further, even if the petitioner were to demonstrate, which it did not do, that the beneficiary will work as a market research analyst on a project for ██████████ for the duration of the petition, the petitioner has failed to demonstrate that the proffered position as described by either the petitioner or ██████████ is a specialty occupation.

The AAO recognizes the U.S. Department of Labor's Occupational Outlook Handbook (Handbook) as an authoritative source on the duties and educational requirements of the wide variety of occupations that it addresses.⁶

While the Handbook reports that a baccalaureate degree is the minimum educational requirement for many market and survey research jobs, it does not state that such a degree is required for all or even most market and research jobs and, even if it did, it does not indicate that the degrees held by such workers must be in a specific specialty that is directly related to market research, as would be required for the occupational category to be recognized as a specialty occupation. See id. This is evident in the range of qualifying degrees indicated in the Significant Points section that introduces the Handbook's chapter "Market and Survey Researchers," which states: "Market and survey researchers can enter the occupation with a bachelor's degree, but those with a master's or Ph.D. in marketing or a social science should enjoy the best opportunities." Id.

That the Handbook does not indicate that market research analyst positions normally require at least a bachelor's degree in a specific specialty is also evident in the following discussion in the "Training, Other Qualifications, and Advancement" section of its chapter "Market and Survey Researchers," which does not specify a particular major or academic concentration:

A bachelor's degree is the minimum educational requirement for many market and survey research jobs. However, a master's degree is usually required for more technical positions.

In addition to completing courses in business, marketing, and consumer behavior, prospective market and survey researchers should take social science courses, including economics, psychology, and sociology. Because of the importance of quantitative skills to market and survey researchers, courses in mathematics, statistics, sampling theory and survey design, and computer science are extremely helpful. Market and survey researchers often earn advanced degrees in business administration, marketing, statistics, communications, or other closely related disciplines.

Id. Because the Handbook indicates that entry into the market research analyst occupation does not normally require a degree in a specific specialty, which is in accordance with the petitioner's example of not requiring at least a bachelor's degree or equivalent in a specific specialty for the proffered position, the Handbook does not support the proffered position as being a specialty occupation.

As the evidence of record does not establish that the particular position here proffered is one for which the normal minimum entry requirement is a baccalaureate or higher degree, or the equivalent, in a specific specialty closely related to the position's duties, the petitioner has not satisfied the criterion at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A)(1).

Next, the AAO finds that the petitioner has not satisfied the first of the two alternative prongs of 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A)(2). This prong alternatively requires a petitioner to establish that a bachelor's degree, in a specific specialty, is common to the petitioner's industry in positions that are both: (1) parallel to the proffered position; and (2) located in organizations that are similar to the petitioner.

In determining whether there is such a common degree requirement, factors often considered by USCIS include: whether the Handbook reports that the industry requires a degree; whether the industry's professional association has made a degree a minimum entry requirement; and whether letters or affidavits from firms or individuals in the industry attest that such firms "routinely employ and recruit only degreed individuals." See Shanti, Inc. v. Reno, 36 F. Supp. 2d 1151, 1165 (D.Minn. 1999) (quoting Hird/Blaker Corp. v. Sava, 712 F. Supp. 1095, 1102 (S.D.N.Y. 1989)).

The petitioner has not established that its proffered position is one for which the Handbook reports an industry-wide requirement for at least a bachelor's degree in a specific specialty. The petitioner in this case does not specify the specialty in which the degree would be required. A petitioner must demonstrate that the proffered position requires a precise and specific course of study that relates directly and closely to the position in question. Since there must be a close correlation between the required specialized studies and the position, the requirement of a degree with a generalized title, such as business administration, without further specification, does not establish the position as a specialty occupation. See Matter of Michael Hertz Associates, 19 I&N Dec. 558 (Comm'r 1988).

To prove that a job requires the theoretical and practical application of a body of specialized knowledge as required by Section 214(i)(1) of the Act, a petitioner must establish that the position requires the attainment of a bachelor's or higher degree in a specialized field of study or its equivalent. USCIS interprets the degree requirement at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A)(1) to require a degree in a specific specialty that is directly related to the proposed position. USCIS has consistently stated that, although a general-purpose bachelor's degree, such as a degree in business administration, may be a legitimate prerequisite for a particular position, requiring such a degree, without more, will not justify a finding that a particular position qualifies for classification as a specialty occupation. See Royal Siam Corp. v. Chertoff, 484 F.3d 139, 147 (1st Cir. 2007).

The petitioner has also not satisfied the second alternative prong of 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A)(2), which provides that “an employer may show that its particular position is so complex or unique that it can be performed only by an individual with a degree.” The petitioner did not submit any documentation to evidence that the proffered position requires at least a bachelor’s degree or the equivalent in a specific specialty.

No evidence was provided that the petitioner has a prior history of recruiting and hiring for the proffered position only persons with at least a bachelor’s degree in a specific specialty. Therefore, the petitioner has not satisfied the third criterion of 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A).⁷

Finally, the petitioner has not satisfied the fourth criterion of 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A), which is reserved for positions with specific duties so specialized and complex that their performance requires knowledge that is usually associated with the attainment of a baccalaureate or higher degree in a specific specialty or its equivalent. The proposed duties have not been described with sufficient specificity to show that they are more specialized and complex than market-research-analyst positions that are not usually associated with a degree in a specific specialty.

Therefore, the petitioner has failed to establish that the proffered position qualifies as a specialty occupation under any of the requirements at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(iii)(A). The AAO therefore affirms the director’s finding that the petitioner failed to establish that the proposed position qualifies for classification as a specialty occupation.

Also beyond the decision of the director, the AAO finds that the petition must be denied for the additional reason that it was filed without an itinerary of the dates and locations where the beneficiary would work, as required by the regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(2)(i)(B), which states, in pertinent part:

⁷ While a petitioner may believe or otherwise assert that a proffered position requires a degree, that opinion alone without corroborating evidence cannot establish the position as a specialty occupation. Were USCIS limited solely to reviewing a petitioner’s claimed self-imposed requirements, the any individual with a bachelor’s degree could be brought to the United States to perform any occupation as long as the employer artificially created a token degree requirement, whereby all individuals employed in a particular position possessed a baccalaureate or higher degree in the specific specialty or its equivalent. See Defensor, 201 F.3d at 387. In other words, if a petitioner’s degree requirements is only symbolic and the proffered position does not in fact require such a specialty degree or its equivalent to perform its duties, the occupation would not meet the statutory or regulatory definition of specialty occupation. See 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(4)(ii) (defining the term “specialty occupation”).

Service or training in more than one location. A petition which requires services to be performed or training to be received in more than one location must include an itinerary with the dates and locations of the services or training and must be filed with the Service office which has jurisdiction over I-129H petitions in the area where the petitioner is located. The address which the petitioner specifies as its location on the I-129H petition shall be where the petitioner is located for purposes of this paragraph.

The language of the regulation, which appears under the subheading "Filing of petitions" and uses the mandatory "must," indicates that an itinerary is material and required initial evidence for a petition involving employment at multiple locations, and that such a petition may not be approved for any employment for which there is not submitted, at the time of the petition's filing, at least the employment dates and locations. USCIS may in its discretion deny an application or petition for lack of initial evidence. 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(b)(8)(ii). The AAO hereby exercises that discretion and denies the petition for this additional reason.

The AAO does not need to examine the issue of the beneficiary's qualifications, because the petitioner has not provided sufficient evidence to demonstrate that the position is a specialty occupation. In other words, the beneficiary's credentials to perform a particular job are relevant only when the job is found to be a specialty occupation. As discussed in this decision, the petitioner did not submit sufficient evidence regarding the proffered position to determine that it is a specialty occupation and, therefore, the issue of whether it will require a baccalaureate or higher degree, or its equivalent, in a specific specialty also cannot be determined. Therefore, the AAO need not and will not address the beneficiary's qualifications further, except to note that, in any event, the petitioner did not submit an evaluation of her foreign degree or sufficient evidence to establish that her degree is the equivalent of a U.S. bachelor's degree in a specific specialty. As such, since evidence was not presented that the beneficiary has at least a bachelor's degree or the equivalent in a specific specialty, the petition could not be approved even if eligibility for the benefit sought had been otherwise established.

The appeal will be dismissed and the petition denied for the above stated reasons, with each considered as an independent and alternative basis for the decision. In visa petition proceedings, the burden of proving eligibility for the benefit sought remains entirely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. Here, that burden has not been met.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed. The petition is denied.
