DISCUSSION: The nonimmigrant visa petition was revoked by the service center director and the matter is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed as the matter is now moot.

The petitioner submitted a Petition for Nonimmigrant Worker (Form I-129) to the Vermont Service Center on August 2, 2010. In the Form I-129 visa petition, the petitioner describes itself as a general dentistry practice established in 1984. In order to employ the beneficiary in what it designates as a dentist position, the petitioner seeks to classify him as a nonimmigrant worker in a specialty occupation pursuant to section 101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b).

The petition was initially approved; however, on August 17, 2012, the director revoked the approval on the basis that the petitioner failed to establish a valid employer-employee relationship. Specifically, the director noted that an administrative site visit to verify the beneficiary's employment revealed that the beneficiary may be a co-owner of the business and that the evidence did not establish who has the authority to hire, fire, pay, and change the beneficiary's job duties, or otherwise control his work. On appeal, counsel asserts that the director's basis for revocation of the approval of the petition was erroneous.

A review of U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) records indicates that this beneficiary is also the beneficiary of an approved immigrant petition and has adjusted status to that of a U.S. permanent resident as of March 28, 2013. While the petitioner has not withdrawn the appeal in this proceeding, it would appear that the beneficiary is presently a permanent resident and the issues in this proceeding are moot. Therefore, this appeal is dismissed.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed. The petition is denied.
