DISCUSSION: The Director, Vermont Service Center, denied the nonimmigrant visa petition, and the matter is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be sustained.

On the Form I-129 visa petition, the petitioner describes itself as an educational institute. In order to temporarily employ the beneficiary, the petitioner seeks to classify her as a nonimmigrant worker in a specialty occupation pursuant to section 101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15)(H)(i)(b).

The director denied the petition, finding that the petitioner failed to establish that it would employ the beneficiary in a specialty occupation position. On appeal, counsel asserted that the director's basis for denial was erroneous and contended that the petitioner satisfied all evidentiary requirements. In support of these contentions, counsel submitted a brief and additional evidence.

Upon our review of the entire record of proceeding, including the submissions on appeal, we find that the petitioner has overcome the basis of the director's denial. As the totality of the evidence presented in this particular record of proceeding establishes by a preponderance of that evidence (1) the specialty occupation nature of the particular position for which this petition was filed, and (2) the beneficiary's qualifications to serve in that specialty occupation, the appeal will be sustained and the petition will be approved.

In visa petition proceedings, it is the petitioner's burden to establish eligibility for the immigration benefit sought. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361; Matter of Otiende, 26 I&N Dec. 127, 128 (BIA 2013). Here, that burden has been met.

ORDER: The appeal is sustained.
