Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The nonimmigrant visa petition was denied by the Director, Vermont Service Center, and is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed and the petition will be denied.

The petitioner is engaged in the tile and stone business, and it seeks to employ the beneficiaries as tile setters, pursuant to section 101(a)(15)(H)(ii)(b) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(H)(ii)(b), for the period from January 18, 2010 to November 18, 2010. The Department of Labor (DOL) certified the petitioner's temporary labor certification (Form ETA-9142), for 15 tile setters for employment from January 18, 2010 until November 18, 2010.

On February 2, 2010, the director denied the petition concluding that the petitioner had not established a temporary need for the beneficiaries' services. The director also denied the petition based on the fact that the petitioner failed to submit evidence requested by the director.

Section 101(a)(15)(H)(ii)(b) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15)(H)(ii)(b), defines an H-2B temporary worker as:

an alien having a residence in a foreign country which he has no intention of abandoning, who is coming temporarily to the United States to perform other temporary service or labor if unemployed persons capable of performing such service or labor cannot be found in this country . . . .

The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h) provides, in part:

(6) Petition for alien to perform temporary nonagricultural services or labor (H-2B):

(i) Petition. (A) H-2B nonagricultural temporary worker. An H-2B nonagricultural temporary worker is an alien who is coming temporarily to the United States to perform temporary services or labor without displacing qualified United States workers available to perform such services or labor and whose employment is not adversely affecting the wages and working conditions of United States workers.

(ii) Temporary services or labor:

(A) Definition. Temporary services or labor under the H-2B classification refers to any job in which the petitioner's need for the duties to be performed by the employee(s) is temporary, whether or not the underlying job can be described as permanent or temporary.

(B) Nature of petitioner's need. Employment is of a temporary nature when the employer needs a worker for a limited period of time. The employer must establish that the need for the employee will end in the near, definable future. Generally, that period of time will be limited to one year or less, but in the case of a one-time event could last up to 3 years. The petitioner's need for the services or labor shall be a one-time occurrence, a seasonal need, a peak load need, or an intermittent need.

(1) One-time occurrence. The petitioner must establish that it has not employed workers to perform the services or labor in the past and that it will not need workers to perform the services or labor in the future, or that it has an employment situation that is otherwise permanent, but a temporary event of short duration has created the need for a temporary worker.

(2) Seasonal need. The petitioner must establish that the services or labor is traditionally tied to a season of the year by an event or pattern and is of a recurring nature. The petitioner shall specify the period(s) of time during each year in which it does not need the services or labor. The employment is not seasonal if the period during which the services or labor is not needed is unpredictable or subject to change or is considered a vacation period for the petitioner's permanent employees.

(3) Peakload need. The petitioner must establish that it regularly employs permanent workers to perform the services or labor at the place of employment and that it needs to supplement its permanent staff at the place of employment on a temporary basis due to a seasonal or short-term demand and that the temporary additions to staff will not become a part of the petitioner's regular operation.

(4) Intermittent need. The petitioner must establish that it has not employed permanent or full-time workers to perform the services or labor, but occasionally or intermittently needs temporary workers to perform services or labor for short periods.

In addition, the regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(6)(iii)(C) states the following:

The petitioner may not file an H-2B petition unless the United States petitioner has applied for a labor certification with the Secretary of Labor or the Governor of Guam within the time limits prescribed or accepted by each, and has obtained a favorable labor certification determination as required by paragraph (h)(6)(iv) or (h)(6)(v) of this section.

The precedent decision Matter of Artee Corp., 18 I&N Dec. 366 (Comm. 1982), states the test for determining whether an alien is coming "temporarily" to the United States to "perform temporary services or labor" is whether the need of the petitioner for the duties to be performed is temporary. Matter of Artee holds that it is the nature of the need, not the nature of the duties, that is controlling.

As a general rule, the period of the petitioner's need must be a year or less, although there may be extraordinary circumstances where the temporary services or labor might last longer than one year. The petitioner's need for the services or labor shall be a one-time occurrence, a seasonal need, a peakload need, or an intermittent need. 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(6)(ii)(B). The petitioner indicates in its statement of temporary need that the employment is peakload.

To establish that the nature of the need is "peakload," the petitioner must demonstrate that it regularly employs permanent workers to perform the services or labor at the place of employment and that it needs to supplement its permanent staff at the place of employment on a temporary basis due to a seasonal or short-term demand and that the temporary additions to staff will not become a part of the petitioner's regular operation. 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(6)(ii)(B)(3).

In determining whether an employer has demonstrated a temporary need for an H-2B worker, it must be determined whether the job duties, which are the subject of the temporary application, are permanent or temporary. If the duties are permanent in nature, the petitioner must clearly show that the need for the beneficiary's services or labor is of a short, identified length, limited by an identified event. Based on the evidence presented, a claim that a temporary need exists cannot be justified.

On the Form I-129, the petitioner explained that it had not been able to hire enough U.S. workers to fill the required positions of tile setters. The petitioner submitted an approval notice from United States Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) granted to the petitioner for 60 H-2B workers from April 1, 2009 until November 12, 2009.

On December 17, 2009, the director requested further information regarding the petitioner's temporary need. The director also requested financial evidence to support the petitioner's peakload need such as copies of payroll records and quarterly payroll tax returns for the past 24 months to include the position of tile setter.

In its response, the petitioner submitted copies of prior approval notices from USCIS granted to the petitioner for H-2B workers. The petitioner also submitted prior certified temporary labor certifications from DOL granted to the petitioner for the position of tile setters. Furthermore, the petitioner submitted a letter dated October 30, 2009, stating that its peak load need "begins on or about mid January and ends on or about mid November." The petitioner also submitted a list of bids made by the petitioner in 2009, and the list indicated that the projects are pending. Furthermore, it appears that the bids are for projects throughout the entire year. Finally, the petitioner submitted sample contracts and invoices, several of which are for 2009.

Moreover, counsel for the petitioner submitted a letter, dated January 18, 2010, stating that the petitioner received a certified labor certification and it has previously been granted approval for H-2B workers and counsel contends that this is sufficient evidence to establish eligibility for instant petition. Furthermore, counsel explained the peakload need as follows:

Our client has a temporary and peak load need to supplement its staffing on a temporary basis for the positions, because of the seasonal peak nature of construction business and customer/market demand for such services. During the time period from mid-January to mid-November, generally land developers, general contractors and builders slow their work on projects due to slower customer and market demand, as well as inclement seasonal-weather conditions and less daylight during the day; and, the trickle down effect of such slow down is that all construction related businesses also see a drop in their workload. Adverse weather conditions include rain and cold temperatures which impede certain work (demolition, leveling, concrete forming/pouring, framing), which affects all construction related work. If concrete cannot be poured, then all other trades which must follow have to adhere to the same peakload timelines in the construction trades.

On appeal, the petitioner submits contractor intent letters, bids and proposals for projects scheduled for 2010 and signed contracts for projects to be completed in 2010. However, some of the contracts are for projects that were completed in 2009, and some are only signed by the petitioner. Counsel also explained that the reason the petitioner did not provide financial evidence as requested by the director in its request for evidence is because "our Client has advised us that due to the fluctuating economic situation the information is not the best barometer for their temporary peakload need, since the entire construction market is coming out of an economic downturn."

In this instance, the petitioner has not shown that it is experiencing an unusual increase in the demand for its services that is different from its ordinary workload need for tile setters. The petitioner has not carefully documented the peakload need through data on its annual historical need for additional supplemental labor, its usual workload and staffing needs, and the special needs created by its current situation or contracts. Although the director specifically requested documentation evidencing the petitioner's staffing, the petitioner did not provide that documentation. Failure to submit requested evidence that precludes a material line of inquiry shall be grounds for denying the petition. 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(b)(14). Without information of the petitioner's temporary and permanent employees for the position of tile setter, it is impossible to determine if the petitioner has a peakload need for these workers.

In addition, the petitioner submitted a list of projects for 2009 and it does not appear from the list that there is a significant drop in projects in December. The petitioner also submitted contracts and invoices from 2009 but that documentation also does not present evidence that the petitioner's workload drops in December. Going on record without supporting documentary evidence is not sufficient for purposes of meeting the burden of proof in these proceedings. Matter of Soffici, 22 I&N Dec. 158, 165 (Comm. 1998) (citing Matter of Treasure Craft of California, 14 I&N Dec. 190 (Reg. Comm. 1972)).

Although the petitioner stated that the peakload need of the company runs from mid-January to mid-November, that statement has not been substantiated by financial or other documentary evidence, such as staffing charts of permanent and temporary tile setters employed by the petitioner for each month of the year, or work contracts and invoices that confirm the accuracy of the information given in the statement and establish that the petitioner's business activity has formed a need for temporary workers for a certain time period and will recur next year at the same time. The petitioner has not demonstrated that the additional personnel needed to fill the peakload positions will be engaged in different duties or will have different specialty skills than the other workers currently employed by the company because the petitioner did not present any evidence of its staffing. Absent supporting documentation, the petitioner has not shown that its need for the beneficiaries' services is tied to a trend or a particular event that recurs every year. Again, going on record without supporting documentary evidence is not sufficient for purposes of meeting the burden of proof in these proceedings. Matter of Soffici, 22 I&N Dec. at 165.

Further, the petitioner has not established that it will not continually need to have someone perform these services in order to keep its business operational. The petitioner's need for tile setters to perform the duties described on Form ETA 750, which is the nature of the petitioner's business, will always exist. As noted above, the petitioner submitted a list of projects for 2009 and it appears that the projects run all year round.

In addition, on appeal, counsel for the petitioner stated that the DOL specifically monitors the recruitment efforts during the Labor Certification process and requires a report establishing that the recruitment was sufficient to justify a peak load need. The regulations at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(h)(6)(iii)(A) states that "the labor certification shall be advice to the director on whether or not United States workers capable of performing the temporary services are available and whether or not the alien's employment will adversely affect the wages and working conditions of similarly employed United States workers." Thus, the certified labor certification by DOL is solely "advice" as to whether U.S. workers are available to fill the temporary position and is not a determination of the petitioner's temporary and peakload need for additional workers.

The director also denied the petition because the petitioner failed to submit all documentation requested by the director. The director requested additional information due to inconsistencies in the record. Failure to submit requested evidence that precludes a material line of inquiry shall be grounds for denying the petition. 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(b)(14). In addition, it is incumbent upon the petitioner to resolve any inconsistencies in the record by independent objective evidence. Any attempt to explain or reconcile such inconsistencies will not suffice unless the petitioner submits competent objective evidence pointing to where the truth lies. Matter of Ho, 19 I&N Dec. 582, 591-92 (BIA 1988).

Counsel for the petitioner also noted that USCIS approved other petitions that had been previously filed by the petitioner for the position of tile setter. If the previous nonimmigrant petitions were approved based on the same unsupported and contradictory assertions that are contained in the current record, the approval would constitute material and gross error on the part of the director. The AAO is not required to approve applications or petitions where eligibility has not been demonstrated, merely because of prior approvals that may have been erroneous. See, e.g. Matter of Church Scientology International, 19 I&N Dec. 593, 597 (Comm. 1988). It would be absurd to suggest that USCIS or any agency must treat acknowledged errors as binding precedent. Sussex Engg. Ltd. v. Montgomery, 825 F.2d 1084, 1090 (6th Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 485 U.S. 1008 (1988).

Furthermore, the AAO's authority over the service centers is comparable to the relationship between a court of appeals and a district court. Even if a service center director had approved the nonimmigrant petitions on behalf of the beneficiary, the AAO would not be bound to follow the contradictory decision of a service center. Louisiana Philharmonic Orchestra v. INS, 2000 WL 282785 (E.D. La.), aff'd, 248 F.3d 1139 (5th Cir. 2001), cert. denied, 122 S.Ct. 51 (2001).

The burden of proof in these proceedings rests solely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. Here, the petitioner has not met that burden.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
