DISCUSSION: The Director, California Service Center (the director), denied the nonimmigrant visa petition, and the matter is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed. The petition will remain denied.

The petitioner is a citizen of the United States who seeks to classify the beneficiary, a native and citizen of the Philippines, as the fiancée of a United States citizen pursuant to § 101(a)(15)(K) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(15)(K).

The director denied the nonimmigrant visa petition because the petitioner failed to establish that he and the beneficiary met in person during the two-year period immediately preceding the filing of the petition or demonstrate that he is eligible for a waiver of the meeting requirement. The petitioner submits additional evidence on appeal.

Applicable Law

A "fiancé(e)" is defined at Section 101(a)(15)(K) of the Act as:

subject to subsections (d) and (p) of section 214, an alien who -

(i) is the fiancée or fiancé of a citizen of the United States . . . and who seeks to enter the United States solely to conclude a valid marriage with the petitioner within ninety days after admission[.]

Section 214(d)(1) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1184(d)(1), states in pertinent part that a fiancé(e) petition:

shall be approved only after satisfactory evidence is submitted by the petitioner to establish that the parties have previously met in person within 2 years before the date of filing the petition, have a bona fide intention to marry, and are legally able and actually willing to conclude a valid marriage in the United States within a period of ninety days after the alien's arrival except that the Secretary of Homeland Security in [her] discretion may waive the requirement that the parties have previously met in person. . . .

The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(b)(8)(ii) states that if all required initial evidence is not submitted with the petition or does not demonstrate eligibility, U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) may, in its discretion, deny the petition for lack of initial evidence. The specific requirements for filing a Petition for Alien Fiancé(e) (Form I-129F), including a description of the required initial evidence, may be found in the Instructions to the Form I-129F.

The statutory requirement of an in-person meeting between the petitioner and the beneficiary is further explained at 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(k)(2), which states:

The petitioner shall establish to the satisfaction of the director that the petitioner and K-1 beneficiary have met in person within the two years immediately preceding the filing of the petition. As a matter of discretion, the director may exempt the petitioner from this requirement only if it is established that compliance would result in extreme hardship to the petitioner or that compliance would violate strict and long-established customs of the K-1 beneficiary's foreign culture or social practice, as where marriages are traditionally arranged by the parents of the contracting parties and the prospective bride and groom are prohibited from meeting subsequent to the arrangement and prior to the wedding day. In addition to establishing that the required meeting would be a violation of custom or practice, the petitioner must also establish that any and all other aspects of the traditional arrangements have been or will be met in accordance with the custom or practice. Failure to establish that the petitioner and K-1 beneficiary have met within the required period or that compliance with the requirement should be waived shall result in the denial of the petition. Such denial shall be without prejudice to the filing of a new petition once the petitioner and K-1 beneficiary have met in person.

The regulation does not define what may constitute extreme hardship to the petitioner. Therefore, each claim of extreme hardship must be judged on a case-by-case basis taking into account the totality of the petitioner's circumstances. Generally, a director looks at whether the petitioner can demonstrate the existence of circumstances that are (1) not within the power of the petitioner to control or change, and (2) likely to last for a considerable duration or the duration cannot be determined with any degree of certainty.

Factual and Procedural History

The petitioner filed the fiancé(e) petition with USCIS on November 13, 2012. Therefore, the petitioner and the beneficiary were required to have met in person between November 13, 2010 and November 13, 2012. When he filed the petition, the petitioner stated that he had not met the beneficiary within the requisite period. In the Request for Evidence (RFE), the director informed the petitioner that he must either submit evidence of having met the beneficiary in person during the required time period or request a waiver of the meeting requirement. In response, the petitioner submitted, among other things, letters from his friends and doctor; a letter to the beneficiary inviting her to visit the petitioner in Nevada; a nonimmigrant visa application dated October 27, 2012 and signed by the beneficiary; and photographs of the petitioner's motorized wheel chair, the ramps to his house and office, and his lift. The petitioner's friends stated in their letters that the petitioner has blood clots, had work done to his arteries, and requires an electric wheel chair to ambulate. The petitioner's doctor advised the petitioner against prolonged airplane flights because of the petitioner's health problems. The director found the petitioner's response insufficient and denied the petition.

On the notice of appeal the petitioner asserts that medical problems and lack of financial resources prevented him from meeting the beneficiary at the U.S. border during the requisite period. The petitioner states that the beneficiary was denied a visitor's visa to the United States in September 2011, and he submits a copy of a denial notice. The petitioner contends that the beneficiary is poor and her house was recently destroyed, and he provides a copy of an e-mail message from the beneficiary about her house.

Analysis

As stated at section 214(d)(1) of the Act, the relevant time in which the personal meeting between the petitioner and the beneficiary must occur is within the two-year period before the petition is filed. The petitioner claims that he would have suffered financial hardship and placed his health in jeopardy had he met the beneficiary during the requisite period. The letter from the doctor stated that “[i]t is medically inadvisable . . . to travel long distance by plane because of chronic severe disabling medical illnesses.” The doctor advised the petitioner against long airplane flights, but the letter does not provide any probative details about why airplane travel is not advised. Nor does the doctor’s letter state that travel would have been a health hazard or that any travel is impossible. Further, the Act requires only that a personal meeting between the petitioner and beneficiary take place within the two-year period before the petition is filed, and does not require any specific location for the personal meeting. Section 214(d)(1) of the Act. The petitioner has not shown that meeting the beneficiary in a third country was not a viable alternative. The petitioner asserts that he would have suffered financial hardship in meeting the beneficiary in a nearby country. However, a petitioner must demonstrate more than just the financial hardship associated with travel in general. A petitioner must provide evidence that compliance with the in-person meeting requirement would have resulted in extreme hardship to the petitioner. 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(k)(2). In this case, the petitioner has provided no evidence that he would have suffered extreme hardship in meeting the beneficiary, and he does not claim that compliance with the meeting requirement would have violated the beneficiary’s cultural practices.

Conclusion

The statutorily required personal meeting between the petitioner and the beneficiary did not occur during the required time and the petitioner is not exempt from the requirement. Consequently, the beneficiary may not benefit from the instant petition and it must remain denied. The appeal is dismissed. The denial of this petition is without prejudice to the filing of a new petition should the petitioner and the beneficiary meet in person in the future. 8 C.F.R. § 214.2(k)(2).

In fiancé(e) visa petition proceedings, it is the petitioner's burden to establish eligibility for the immigration benefit sought. Section 214(d)(1) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1184(d)(1); Matter of Otiende, 26 I&N Dec. 127, 128 (BIA 2013). Here, that burden has not been met.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
