DISCUSSION: The application was denied by the Field Office Director, Newark, New Jersey. The matter is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The record reflects that the applicant was born on December 12, 1969 in Jamaica. The applicant's parents are [REDACTED]. The applicant's parents were married in 1972. The applicant's mother became a U.S. citizen upon her naturalization on November 18, 1983, when the applicant was 13 years old. The applicant's father naturalized after the applicant's eighteenth birthday. The applicant was admitted to the United States as a lawful permanent resident on December 19, 1975, when he was six years old. He presently seeks a certificate of citizenship claiming that he derived U.S. citizenship upon his mother's naturalization pursuant to former section 321 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1432 (repealed).

The field office director determined that the applicant could not derive U.S. citizenship under former section 321 of the Act because he could not establish that both his parents were naturalized prior to the applicant's eighteenth birthday. The application was accordingly denied.

On appeal, the applicant, through counsel, states that his parents were separated when his mother naturalized and that he therefore derived U.S. citizenship upon his mother's naturalization. See Appeal Brief.

The AAO reviews these proceedings de novo. See Soltane v. DOJ, 381 F.3d 143, 145 (3d Cir. 2004). The applicant has failed to establish his eligibility for citizenship and the appeal will be dismissed for the reasons discussed below.

The applicable law for derivative citizenship purposes is "the law in effect at the time the critical events giving rise to eligibility occurred." Minasyan v. Gonzales, 401 F.3d 1069, 1075 (9th Cir. 2005); see also Matter of Rodriguez-Tejedor, 23 I&N Dec. 153 (BIA 2001) (holding that the amendments to the Act enacted by the Child Citizenship Act of 2000 (the CCA), Pub. L. No. 106-395, 114 Stat. 1631 (Oct. 30, 2000) are not retroactive and apply only to persons who were not yet 18 years old as of February 27, 2001). Former section 321 of the Act is therefore applicable in this case.

Former section 321 of the Act, stated, in pertinent part, that:

(a) A child born outside of the United States of alien parents, or of an alien parent and a citizen parent who has subsequently lost citizenship of the United States, becomes a citizen of the United States upon fulfillment of the following conditions:

(1) The naturalization of both parents; or

(2) The naturalization of the surviving parent if one of the parents is deceased; or

(3) The naturalization of the parent having legal custody of the child when there has been a legal separation of the parents or the naturalization of the mother if the child was born out of wedlock and the paternity of the child has not been established by legitimation; and if-

(4) Such naturalization takes place while said child is under the age of 18 years; and

(5) Such child is residing in the United States pursuant to a lawful admission for permanent residence at the time of the naturalization of the parent last naturalized under clause (1) of this subsection, or the parent naturalized under clause (2) or (3) of this subsection, or thereafter begins to reside permanently in the United States while under the age of 18 years.

Pursuant to former section 321 of the Act, citizenship may be derived solely through one parent only when the other parent is deceased, where the child was born out of wedlock and paternity was not established by legitimation, or through the parent having custody of the applicant when there has been a legal separation of the parents. See Nehme v. INS, 252 F.3d 415, 425-26 (5th Cir. 2001) (recognizing that requiring the naturalization of both parents, when the parents were married, "was necessary to promote the child from being separated from an alien parent who has a legal right to custody"); see also Wedderburn v. INS, 215 F.3d 795, 800 (7th Cir. 2000) (explaining that "Congress rationally could conclude that as long as the marriage continues the citizenship of children should not change automatically with the citizenship of a single parent") (emphasis in original).

The applicant's father was naturalized after the applicant's eighteenth birthday and was not deceased. Thus, the applicant did not derive U.S. citizenship under former sections 321(a)(1) or (2) of the Act. Further, although the applicant was born out of wedlock, his paternity was established through legitimation when his parents married in Jamaica in 1972. See Matter of Hines, 24 I&N Dec. 544 (BIA 2008). The applicant therefore did not derive U.S. citizenship solely through his mother as an out of wedlock child. Lastly, because the applicant's parents were married in 1972 and not "legally separated," the applicant did not derive U.S. citizenship under the first clause of former section 321(a)(3) of the Act. The Board of Immigration Appeals (the Board) stated clearly in Matter of H, 3 I&N Dec. 742 (BIA 1949), that "legal separation" means either a limited or absolute divorce obtained through judicial proceedings. See also, Nehme, supra. A married couple, even when living apart with no plans of reconciliation, is not legally separated. Matter of Mowrer, 17 I&N Dec. 613, 615 (BIA 1981). A privately-executed separation agreement made between the applicant's parents does not qualify as a "legal separation" under section 321(a)(3) of the former Act. Afeta v. Gonzales, 467 F.3d 402, 407 (4th Cir. 2006).

“There must be strict compliance with all the congressionally imposed prerequisites to the acquisition of citizenship.” Fedorenko v United States, 449 U.S. 490, 506 (1981). The burden of proof in citizenship cases is on the claimant to establish the claimed citizenship by a preponderance of the evidence. See Section 341 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1452; 8 CFR § 341.2. The applicant has not met his burden of proof, and his appeal will be dismissed.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
