Robert P. Wiemann, Director
Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The waiver application was denied by the District Director, Los Angeles (Santa Ana), CA and is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The applicant is a native and citizen of Mexico who was found to be inadmissible to the United States pursuant to section 212(a)(6)(C)(i) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(6)(C)(i), for procuring admission to the United States by fraud or willful misrepresentation. The applicant is the spouse of a U.S. citizen. The applicant seeks a waiver of inadmissibility pursuant to section 212(i) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(i), in order to reside in the United States with her family.

The district director concluded that the applicant failed to establish that extreme hardship would be imposed on a qualifying relative and denied the Application for Waiver of Grounds of Excludability. Decision of District Director, dated June 2, 2004.

On appeal, counsel asserts that the applicant's spouse's family is closely knit, separation of the family would be devastating and his two U.S. citizen children would suffer. Form I-290B, at 1-2, dated June 28, 2004.

The record includes, but is not limited to, statements from the applicant and her spouse, a psychological evaluation and medical reports for the children and employment letters for the applicant and her spouse. The entire record was reviewed and considered in arriving at a decision on the appeal.

The record reflects that in February 1994, the applicant was admitted into the United States with a counterfeit passport. As a result of this prior misrepresentation, the applicant is inadmissible to the United States.

Section 212(a)(6)(C) of the Act provides, in pertinent part, that:

- (i) Any alien who, by fraud or willfully misrepresenting a material fact, seeks to procure (or has sought to procure or has procured) a visa, other documentation, or admission into the United States or other benefit provided under this Act is inadmissible.

Section 212(i) of the Act provides that:

- (1) The Attorney General [now the Secretary of Homeland Security (Secretary)] may, in the discretion of the Attorney General [Secretary], waive the application of clause (i) of subsection (a)(6)(C) in the case of an alien who is the spouse, son or daughter of a United States citizen or of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence, if it is established to the satisfaction of the Attorney General [Secretary] that the refusal of admission to the United States of such immigrant alien would result in extreme hardship to the citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of such an alien.

The AAO notes that section 212(h) of the Act provides that a waiver of inadmissibility is dependent first upon a showing that the bar to admission imposes an extreme hardship on a qualifying family member. If extreme hardship is established, the Secretary then assesses whether an exercise of discretion is warranted.

Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, 22 I&N Dec. 560 (BIA 1999) provides a list of factors the Board of Immigration Appeals deems relevant in determining whether an alien has established extreme hardship pursuant to section 212(i) of the Act. These factors include the presence of lawful permanent resident or United States citizen family ties to this country; the qualifying relative's family ties outside the United States; the conditions in the country or countries to which the qualifying relative would relocate and the extent of the qualifying relative's ties in such countries; the financial impact of departure from this country; and significant conditions of health, particularly when tied to an unavailability of suitable medical care in the country to which the qualifying relative would relocate.

Therefore, an analysis under Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez is appropriate in this case. The AAO notes that extreme hardship to the applicant's spouse must be established in the event that the applicant's spouse relocates to Mexico or in the event that he remains in the United States, as he is not required to reside outside of the United States based on denial of the applicant's waiver request.

The first part of the analysis requires the applicant to establish extreme hardship to her spouse in the event that he relocates to Mexico. The applicant's spouse states that his three siblings and children are in the United States, he has no family in Mexico and he has no place to stay in Mexico. See Statement of Applicant's Spouse, undated. Counsel has submitted a psychological evaluation for the applicant's spouse's children which states that they evidence developmental delays that require attention and supervision. Psychological Assessment, dated August 1, 2004. Counsel has also submitted medical records for the children. The AAO notes that the children of the applicant's spouse are not qualifying relatives for purposes of a section 212(i) waiver. Their hardship is only relevant to the extent it causes hardship to the applicant's spouse and this point has not been documented. The record includes employment letters for the applicant and her spouse which indicate financial consequences of relocation, however, there is no indication that they cannot find employment in Mexico.

The second part of the analysis requires the applicant to establish extreme hardship in the event that her spouse remains in the United States. This applicant's spouse states that if he remained in the United States, he would have to support two households. Statement of Applicant's Spouse. No other contentions are made regarding this prong of the analysis.

After a thorough review of the record, the AAO finds that extreme hardship has not established in the event that the applicant's spouse relocates to Mexico or in the event that he remains in the United States.

U.S. court decisions have repeatedly held that the common results of deportation or exclusion are insufficient to prove extreme hardship. See Hassan v. INS, 927 F.2d 465, 468 (9th Cir. 1991). For example, Matter of Pilch, 21 I&N Dec. 627 (BIA 1996), held that emotional hardship caused by severing family and community ties is a common result of deportation and does not constitute extreme hardship. In addition, Perez v. INS, 96 F.3d 390 (9th Cir. 1996), held that the common results of deportation are insufficient to prove extreme hardship and defined extreme hardship as hardship that was unusual or beyond that which would normally be expected upon deportation. Hassan v. INS, supra, held further that the uprooting of family and separation from friends does not necessarily amount to extreme hardship but rather represents the type of inconvenience and hardship experienced by the families of most aliens being deported.

The AAO notes that a review of the documentation in the record fails to establish the existence of extreme hardship to the applicant's spouse caused by the applicant's inadmissibility to the United States. Having found the applicant statutorily ineligible for relief, no purpose would be served in discussing whether she merits a waiver as a matter of discretion.

In proceedings for application for waiver of grounds of inadmissibility under section 212(i) of the Act, the burden of proving eligibility remains entirely with the applicant. See Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. Here, the applicant has not met that burden. Accordingly, the appeal will be dismissed.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
