

identifying data deleted to prevent clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services

PUBLIC COPY

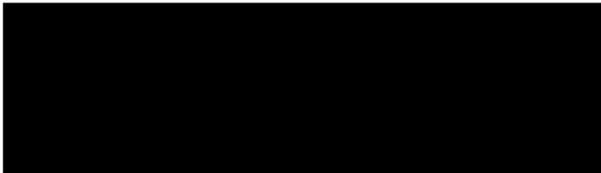

42

FILE: [REDACTED] Office: CALIFORNIA SERVICE CENTER Date: JUN 25 2007

IN RE: [REDACTED]

APPLICATION: Application for Waiver of Grounds of Inadmissibility under Section 212(i) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(i)

ON BEHALF OF APPLICANT:

INSTRUCTIONS:

This is the decision of the Administrative Appeals Office in your case. All documents have been returned to the office that originally decided your case. Any further inquiry must be made to that office.

Robert P. Wiemann, Chief
Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The waiver application was denied by the Director, California Service Center. The matter is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The applicant is a native and citizen of Pakistan who was determined to be inadmissible to the United States pursuant to section 212(a)(6)(C)(i) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(6)(C)(i), for having obtained admission to the United States by fraud or willful misrepresentation. He seeks a waiver of inadmissibility pursuant to section 212(i) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(i), in order to reside in the United States with his U.S. citizen spouse and children.

The record reflects that the applicant was ordered excluded in absentia on October 23, 1991 after attempting entry into the United States with a fraudulent I-688A temporary resident card and Pakistani passport on January 14, 1991.

The applicant and his spouse, the former [REDACTED] were married in the United States on January 17, 1995. They have three U.S. citizen children. [REDACTED] who is a native of the United States, filed a Form I-130, Petition for Alien Relative, on the applicant's behalf on January 14, 1998. The Form I-130 petition was approved on January 31, 1998. The applicant filed a Form I-485, Application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status, on December 13, 2001. The applicant filed a Form I-601, Application for Waiver of Grounds of Inadmissibility, on July 20, 2005.

The director concluded that the applicant had failed to establish that extreme hardship would be imposed on a qualifying relative and denied the Form I-601 waiver application accordingly. Notice of Decision of Director [REDACTED] dated June 22, 2006.

On appeal, counsel asserts that the waiver should be granted because of emotional support [REDACTED] receives from the applicant and because the applicant is the sole economic support for his family. Counsel contends that the applicant will not be able to find meaningful employment in Pakistan to support the family. Counsel also maintains that the applicant's spouse would suffer hardship if she relocated to Pakistan because "there are health hazards everywhere, there is no security, the USC children would be deprived of any meaningful education, the standard of living is substantially lower than in the United States." Appeal Brief of [REDACTED], p. 4, dated July 17, 2006.

Section 212(a)(9)(B) of the Act provides, in pertinent part, that:

(i) In general. - Any alien (other than an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence) who -

(II) Has been unlawfully present in the United States for one year or more, and who again seeks admission within 10 years of the date of such alien's departure or removal from the United States, is inadmissible.

....

(v) Waiver. – The Attorney General [now Secretary, Homeland Security, “Secretary”] has sole discretion to waive clause (i) in the case of an immigrant who is the spouse or son or daughter of a United States citizen or of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence, if it is established to the satisfaction of the Attorney General [Secretary] that the refusal of admission to such immigrant alien would result in extreme hardship to the citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of such alien.

Section 212(a)(6)(C) of the Act provides, in pertinent part:

- (i) Any alien who, by fraud or willfully misrepresenting a material fact, seeks to procure (or has sought to procure or has procured) a visa, other documentation, or admission into the United States or other benefit provided under this Act is inadmissible.

Section 212(i) of the Act provides:

- (1) The Attorney General [now the Secretary of Homeland Security (Secretary)] may, in the discretion of the Attorney General [Secretary], waive the application of clause (i) of subsection (a)(6)(C) in the case of an alien who is the spouse, son or daughter of a United States citizen or of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence, if it is established to the satisfaction of the Attorney General [Secretary] that the refusal of admission to the United States of such immigrant alien would result in extreme hardship to the citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of such an alien.

A section 212(i) waiver of the bar to admission resulting from violation of section 212(a)(6)(C) of the Act is dependent first upon a showing that the bar imposes an extreme hardship to the citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of the applicant. Hardship the alien himself experiences upon deportation is irrelevant to section 212(i) waiver proceedings; the only relevant hardship in the present case is that suffered by the applicant’s spouse. Once extreme hardship is established, it is but one favorable factor to be considered in the determination of whether the Secretary should exercise discretion. See Matter of Mendez, 21 I&N Dec. 296 (BIA 1996).

The concept of extreme hardship to a qualifying relative “is not . . . fixed and inflexible,” and whether extreme hardship has been established is determined based on an examination of the facts of each individual case. Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, 22 I&N Dec. 560, 565 (BIA 1999). In Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, the Board of Immigration Appeals set forth a list of non-exclusive factors relevant to determining whether an applicant has established extreme hardship to a qualifying relative pursuant to section 212(i) of the Act. These factors include, with respect to the qualifying relative, the presence of family ties to U.S. citizens or lawful permanent residents in the United States, family ties outside the United States, country conditions where the qualifying relative would relocate and family ties in that country, the financial impact of departure, and significant health conditions, particularly where there is diminished availability of medical care in the country to which the qualifying relative would relocate. Id. at 566.

Relevant factors, though not extreme in themselves, must be considered in the aggregate in determining whether extreme hardship exists. In each case, the trier of fact must consider the entire range of factors concerning hardship in their totality and determine whether the combination of hardships takes the case beyond those hardships ordinarily associated with deportation.

Matter of O-J-O-, 21 I&N Dec. 381, 383 (BIA 1996) (citations omitted).

In addition, U.S. Courts have held that “the most important single hardship factor may be the separation of the alien from family living in the United States”, and that, “[w]hen the BIA fails to give considerable, if not predominant, weight to the hardship that will result from family separation, it has abused its discretion.” Salcido-Salcido v. INS, 138 F.3d 1292, 1293 (9th Cir. 1998) (citations omitted), see also Cerrillo-Perez v. INS, 809 F.2d 1419, 1424 (9th Cir. 1987) (“We have stated in a series of cases that the hardship to the alien resulting from his separation from family members may, in itself, constitute extreme hardship.”) (citations omitted). Separation of family will therefore be given appropriate weight in the assessment of hardship factors in the present case.

An analysis under Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez is appropriate. The AAO notes that extreme hardship to a qualifying relative must be established in the event that he or she accompanies the applicant or in the event that he or she remains in the United States, as a qualifying relative is not required to reside outside of the United States based on the denial of the applicant’s waiver request.

The record, reviewed in its entirety and in light of the Cervantes-Gonzalez factors, cited above, does not support a finding that [REDACTED] faces extreme hardship if her husband is not granted a waiver of inadmissibility.

In affidavits submitted in support of the waiver application, [REDACTED] states that she provides full-time care to her three children and depends entirely on the applicant for financial support. She indicates that she cannot rely on support from her family because she does not have good relations with her family and “they live far away.” [REDACTED] maintains that her husband, who lacks “a high education” and is employed as a driver, would be unable to secure adequate employment in Pakistan to support the family. [REDACTED] asserts that she has been suffering from depression as a consequence of the possibility of being separated from her husband. Finally, [REDACTED] maintains that she and her children would suffer hardship in Pakistan because of poverty, language and cultural differences, racism toward Westerners, poor treatment of women, inadequate educational opportunities and general insecurity.

The AAO recognizes that [REDACTED], a native of the United States, would suffer extreme hardship if she relocated to Pakistan with the applicant. The AAO also recognizes that she would suffer emotionally as a result of separation from the applicant and would suffer financially as a result of the loss of her husband’s income if she remains in the United States. However, [REDACTED] situation is typical of individuals separated as a result of removal or inadmissibility and does not rise to the level of extreme hardship based on the record. U.S. court decisions have repeatedly held that the common results of removal or inadmissibility are insufficient to prove extreme hardship. See Hassan v. INS, 927 F.2d 465, 468 (9th Cir. 1991). In addition, Perez v. INS, 96 F.3d 390 (9th Cir. 1996), held that the common results of deportation are insufficient to prove extreme hardship and defined extreme hardship as hardship that was unusual or beyond that which would normally be expected upon deportation.

Although [REDACTED] is now unemployed, she does not indicate that she is unable or unqualified to work. On Form G-325A, Biographic Information, [REDACTED] lists employment in sales prior to her marriage. [REDACTED] states that she is depressed, but submits no evidence indicating that she suffers from a diagnosed medical condition. Although the statement by [REDACTED] is relevant and has been taken into consideration, little weight can be afforded it in the absence of supporting evidence. Matter of Kwan, 14 I & N Dec. 175 (BIA 1972) (“Information in an affidavit should not be disregarded simply because it appears to be hearsay; in administrative proceedings, that fact merely affects the weight to be afforded it.”). Going on record without supporting documentary evidence is not sufficient for purposes of meeting the burden of proof in these proceedings. Matter of Soffici, 22 I&N Dec. 158, 165 (Comm. 1998)(citing Matter of Treasure Craft of California, 14 I&N Dec. 190 (Reg. Comm. 1972)).

In this case, the record does not contain sufficient evidence to show that the hardships faced by the qualifying relative, considered in the aggregate, rise beyond the common results of removal or inadmissibility to the level of extreme hardship. The AAO therefore finds that the applicant failed to establish extreme hardship to his U.S. citizen spouse as required under section 212(i) of the Act. Having found the applicant statutorily ineligible for relief, no purpose would be served in discussing whether he merits a waiver as a matter of discretion.

In proceedings for application for waiver of grounds of inadmissibility under section 212(i), the burden of establishing that the application merits approval remains entirely with the applicant. See section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. See section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. Here, the applicant has not met that burden. Accordingly, the appeal will be dismissed.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.