John F. Grissom
Acting Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The waiver application was denied by the Officer in Charge (OIC), Providence, Rhode Island, and the matter is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The AAO notes that on appeal, the applicant, through counsel, requested 30 days to submit a brief and/or evidence to the AAO. Form I-290B, filed August 21, 2002. The record contains no evidence that a brief or additional evidence was filed within 30 days; therefore, the record is considered complete.

The record reflects that the applicant is a native and citizen of Ghana who was found to be inadmissible to the United States pursuant to section 212(a)(6)(C)(i) of Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(6)(C)(i), for entering the United States by presenting a Ghanaian passport in someone else's name. The record indicates that the applicant is married to a United States citizen and is the beneficiary of an approved Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130). The applicant seeks a waiver of inadmissibility pursuant to section 212(i) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(i), in order to reside in the United States with his spouse.

The OIC found that the applicant failed to establish that extreme hardship would be imposed on his qualifying relative and denied the Application for Waiver of Grounds of Excludability (Form I-601) accordingly. Decision of the Officer in Charge, dated July 23, 2002.

On appeal, the applicant, through counsel, asserts that the OIC's "determination that the [applicant's wife] would not suffer extreme hardship is in error and should be reversed." Form I-290B, supra.

The record includes, but is not limited to, letters from the applicant and his wife; letters from the applicant's wife's therapist and psychiatrists; medical documentation regarding the applicant's wife's infertility treatments; and the applicant's marriage certificate. The entire record was reviewed and considered in arriving at a decision on the appeal.

Section 212(a)(6)(C) of the Act provides, in pertinent part, that:

- (i) In general.-Any alien who, by fraud or willfully misrepresenting a material fact, seeks to procure (or has sought to procure or has procured) a visa, other documentation, or admission into the United States or other benefit provided under this Act is inadmissible.
- (iii) Waiver authorized.-For provision authorizing waiver of clause (i), see subsection (i).

Section 212 of the Act provides, in pertinent part, that:

- (i) (1) The Attorney General [now the Secretary of Homeland Security, "Secretary"] may, in the discretion of the [Secretary], waive the application of clause (i) of subsection (a)(6)(C) in the case of an immigrant who is the spouse, son, or daughter of a United States citizen or of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence, if it is established to the satisfaction of the [Secretary] that the refusal of admission to the United States of such immigrant alien would result in extreme hardship to the citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of such an alien...

In the present application, the record indicates that on July 30, 1995, the applicant entered the United States by presenting a Ghanaian passport in someone else's name. On April 18, 2000, the applicant's United States citizen wife filed a Form I-130 on behalf of the applicant. On the same day, the applicant filed an Application to Register Permanent Residence or Adjust Status (Form I-485). On October 22, 2001, the applicant filed a Form I-601. On July 23, 2002, the OIC denied the applicant's Form I-601, finding the applicant failed to demonstrate extreme hardship to his qualifying relative. On February 21, 2008, the applicant's Form I-130 was approved. On February 25, 2008, the Field Office Director, Providence, Rhode Island denied the applicant's Form I-485.

The applicant is seeking a section 212(i) waiver of the bar to admission resulting from a violation of section 212(a)(6)(C)(i) of the Act. A waiver under section 212(i) of the Act is dependent first upon a showing that the bar imposes an extreme hardship to the citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of the applicant. Hardship the alien himself experiences upon removal is irrelevant to section 212(i) waiver proceedings; the only relevant hardship in the present case is hardship suffered by the applicant's spouse. Once extreme hardship is established, it is but one favorable factor to be considered in the determination of whether the Secretary should exercise discretion. See Matter of Mendez, 21 I&N Dec. 296 (BIA 1996).

In Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, 22 I&N Dec. 560, 565-66 (BIA 1999), the Board of Immigration Appeals (Board) provided a list of factors it deemed relevant in determining whether an alien has established extreme hardship to a qualifying relative. The factors include the presence of a lawful permanent resident or United States citizen spouse or parent in this country; the qualifying relative's family ties outside the United States; the conditions in the country or countries to which the qualifying relative would relocate and the extent of the qualifying relative's ties in such countries; the financial impact of departure from this country; and significant conditions of health, particularly when tied to an unavailability of suitable medical care in the country to which the qualifying relative would relocate.

Counsel asserts that the applicant's wife will suffer extreme hardship if the applicant is removed to Ghana. Form I-290B, supra. The applicant's wife's therapist and psychiatrists diagnosed her with depression and dysthymic disorder, and prescribed her anti-depressants. See letter from [REDACTED], dated September 5, 2002; see also letter from [REDACTED], dated August 29, 2002; see also letter from [REDACTED], dated August 28, 2002. The applicant's wife states she is not taking the Prozac anymore; however, she is taking an herbal supplement and "that seems to be enough to ease [her] depression.” Statement of [REDACTED], dated September 13, 2002. The applicant’s wife states she depends on the applicant for emotional and financial support. Id. The AAO notes that it has not been established that the applicant’s wife has no transferable skills that would aid her in obtaining a job in Ghana. The applicant provided medical documentation establishing that his wife was undergoing infertility treatments; however, the AAO notes that the applicant and his wife are currently separated. See statement of [REDACTED] undated; see also statement of the applicant, undated. The AAO notes that all of the medical and psychological documents submitted by the applicant are dated prior to the applicant and his wife’s separation in October 2002, which is detailed in undated statements from the applicant and his wife in the record. Additionally, the AAO notes that the applicant’s wife obtained a temporary restraining order against the applicant on September 30, 2002, which he violated on October 1, 2002 and October 2, 2002. Furthermore, the AAO notes that the applicant’s wife failed to provide an updated statement on appeal regarding the extreme hardship she would suffer if the applicant were removed from the United States. The AAO finds that the applicant failed to establish that his wife would suffer extreme hardship if she joined the applicant in Ghana.

In addition, counsel does not establish extreme hardship to the applicant’s wife if she remains in the United States, maintaining her employment and in close proximity to her family. As a United States citizen, the applicant’s wife is not required to reside outside of the United States as a result of denial of the applicant’s waiver request. The AAO notes that the record fails to demonstrate that the applicant will be unable to contribute to his wife’s financial wellbeing from a location outside of the United States. Moreover, the United States Supreme Court has held that the mere showing of economic detriment to qualifying family members is insufficient to warrant a finding of extreme hardship. INS v. Jong Ha Wang, 450 U.S. 139 (1981).

United States court decisions have repeatedly held that the common results of deportation or exclusion are insufficient to prove extreme hardship. See Hassan v. INS, 927 F.2d 465, 468 (9th Cir. 1991). For example, in Matter of Pilch, 21 I&N Dec. 627 (BIA 1996), the Board held that emotional hardship caused by severing family and community ties is a common result of deportation and does not constitute extreme hardship. In addition, Perez v. INS, 96 F.3d 390 (9th Cir. 1996), held that the common results of deportation are insufficient to prove extreme hardship and defined extreme hardship as hardship that was unusual or beyond that which would normally be expected upon deportation. In Hassan, supra, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals held further that the uprooting of family and separation from friends does not necessarily amount to extreme hardship but rather represents the type of inconvenience and hardship experienced by the families of most aliens being deported.

A review of the documentation in the record fails to establish the existence of extreme hardship to the applicant’s spouse caused by the applicant’s inadmissibility to the United States. Having found the applicant statutorily ineligible for relief, no purpose would be served in discussing whether he merits a waiver as a matter of discretion.

In proceedings for application for waiver of grounds of inadmissibility under section 212(a)(6)(C)(i) of the Act, the burden of proving eligibility remains entirely with the applicant. See section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. Here, the applicant has not met that burden. Accordingly, the appeal will be dismissed.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
