Acting Chief Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The waiver application was denied by the District Director, Mexico City, Mexico, and is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The applicant, [REDACTED] is a native and citizen of Mexico who was found to be inadmissible to the United States under section 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(II), of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(i)(II), for having been unlawfully present in the United States for more than one year.

The applicant sought a waiver of inadmissibility pursuant to section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(v), so that he may immigrate to the United States and live with his U.S. citizen wife. The district director concluded that the applicant had failed to establish that his bar to admission would impose extreme hardship on a qualifying relative, and denied the Application for Waiver of Grounds of Inadmissibility (Form I-601) accordingly. Decision of the District Director, dated August 17, 2006. The applicant submitted a timely appeal.

On appeal, the applicant's wife, [REDACTED] submits a letter dated August 27, 2006, in which she states that she never imagined having to raise her young son on her own. She conveys that she has a close relationship with her husband and separation from him has caused her to have stomach aches and crying spells. She states that she lives with her parents, but would prefer having her own home with her husband.

The AAO will first address the finding of inadmissibility.

Inadmissibility for unlawful presence is found under section 212(a)(9) of the Act. That section provides, in part:

(B) Aliens Unlawfully Present

(i) In general. - Any alien (other than an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence) who-

(I) was unlawfully present in the United States for a period of more than 180 days but less than 1 year, voluntarily departed the United States . . . and again seeks admission within 3 years of the date of such alien's departure or removal, or

(II) has been unlawfully present in the United States for one year or more, and who again seeks admission within 10 years of the date of such alien's departure or removal from the United States, is inadmissible.

Unlawful presence accrues when an alien remains in the United States after period of stay authorized by the Attorney General has expired or is present in the United States without being admitted or paroled. Section 212(a)(9)(B)(ii) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(ii). For purposes of section 212(a)(9)(B) of the Act, time in unlawful presence begins to accrue on April 1, 1997.<sup>1</sup>

The three- and ten-year bars of sections 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(I) and (II) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(i)(I) and (II), are triggered by a departure from the United States following accrual of the specified period of unlawful presence. If someone accrues the requisite period of unlawful presence but does not subsequently depart the United States, sections 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(I) and (II) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(i)(I) and (II), would not apply. See Memo, note 1.

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) records reflect that the applicant entered the United States without inspection in February 2001 and remained until October 2005. The applicant therefore accrued six years of unlawful presence and triggered the ten-year-bar when he left the United States, rendering him inadmissible under section 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(II) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(9)(B)(i)(II).

The waiver for unlawful presence is found under section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(v). That section provides that:

(v) Waiver. – The Attorney General [now Secretary, Homeland Security, “Secretary”] has sole discretion to waive clause (i) in the case of an immigrant who is the spouse or son or daughter of a United States citizen or of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence, if it is established to the satisfaction of the Attorney General [Secretary] that the refusal of admission to such immigrant alien would result in extreme hardship to the citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of such alien.

The waiver under section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act is dependent upon a showing that the bar to admission imposes an extreme hardship on a qualifying relative, i.e., the U.S. citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of the applicant. Hardship to an applicant and to his or her child is not a consideration under section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act, and unlike section 212(h) of the Act where a child is included as a qualifying relative, children are not included under section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act, and will be considered only to the extent that it results in hardship to a qualifying relative, who in this case is the applicant’s U.S. citizen spouse. Once extreme hardship is established, it is one of the favorable factors to be considered in determining whether the Secretary should exercise discretion. See Matter of Mendez, 21 I&N Dec. 296 (BIA 1996).

<sup>1</sup> Memorandum by Lori Scialabba, Assoc. Director, Refugee, Asylum and International Operations Directorate and Pearl Chang, Acting Chief, Office of Policy and Strategy, Consolidation of Guidance Concerning Unlawful Presence for Purposes of Sections 212(a)(9)(B)(i) and 212(a)(9)(C)(i)(I) of the Act; AFM Update AD 08-03; May 6, 2009.

“Extreme hardship” is not a definable term of “fixed and inflexible meaning”; establishing extreme hardship is “dependent upon the facts and circumstances of each case.” Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, 22 I&N Dec. 560, 565 (BIA 1999). Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez lists the factors considered relevant in determining whether an applicant has established extreme hardship pursuant to section 212(i) of the Act. The factors relate to an applicant’s qualifying relative and include the presence of a lawful permanent resident or United States citizen spouse or parent in this country; the qualifying relative’s family ties outside the United States; the conditions in the country or countries to which the qualifying relative would relocate and the extent of the qualifying relative’s ties in such countries; the financial impact of departure from this country; and significant conditions of health, particularly when tied to an unavailability of suitable medical care in the country to which the qualifying relative would relocate. Id. at 565-566.

The factors to consider in determining whether extreme hardship exists “provide a framework for analysis,” and the “[r]elevant factors, though not extreme in themselves, must be considered in the aggregate in determining whether extreme hardship exists.” Matter of O-J-O-, 21 I&N Dec. 381, 383 (BIA 1996). The trier of fact considers the entire range of hardship factors in their totality and then determines “whether the combination of hardships takes the case beyond those hardships ordinarily associated with deportation.” (citing Matter of Ige, 20 I&N Dec. 880, 882 (BIA 1994).

Applying the Cervantes-Gonzalez factors here, extreme hardship to the applicant’s spouse must be established in the event that she remains in the United States without him, and alternatively, if she joins the applicant to live in Mexico. A qualifying relative is not required to reside outside of the United States based on the denial of the applicant’s waiver request.

The record contains letters by family members and friends of [REDACTED]. Many of the letters convey that [REDACTED] and her husband have a close relationship and that [REDACTED] needs her husband’s help in raising their child. The letter by [REDACTED], who is [REDACTED] sister, states that [REDACTED] is having a hard time financially, even though [REDACTED] works, because of the high cost of babysitting. Some of the letters convey that since [REDACTED] returned to Mexico [REDACTED] has not been able to continue her education in accounting after receiving an Associates in Arts degree. The letter dated September 5, 2006, by a professor with Bakersfield College conveys that [REDACTED] has taken all of his classes, but has not been able to continue her education because she has had to work to support herself while caring for her one-year-old child. [REDACTED] letter, which is dated September 9, 2006, states that [REDACTED] husband supported Ms. [REDACTED] while she attended community college and that [REDACTED] cannot continue her education without financial support from her husband. [REDACTED] states that [REDACTED] has put school on the back burner until [REDACTED] return to the United States. The letter dated September 3, 2006 by [REDACTED] states that education is very important to [REDACTED] and that [REDACTED] does not have enough money to attend college and cannot study and care for the baby. She states that once [REDACTED] returns to the United States [REDACTED] will be able to attend college full time.

The letter by Vintage Nurseries LLC dated June 13, 2007 reflects that [REDACTED] was offered permanent employment to begin January 1, 2008, and that [REDACTED] is presently a contract worker performing accounting responsibilities. In her letter dated June 29, 2007, [REDACTED] indicates that she was not seeking permanent employment because she would like to be able to visit her husband.

Courts have stated that “the most important single hardship factor may be the separation of the alien from family living in the United States,” and also, “[w]hen the BIA fails to give considerable, if not predominant, weight to the hardship that will result from family separation, it has abused its discretion.” Salcido-Salcido v. INS, 138 F.3d 1292, 1293 (9th Cir. 1998) (citations omitted); Cerrillo-Perez v. INS, 809 F.2d 1419, 1424 (9th Cir. 1987) (remanding to BIA) (“We have stated in a series of cases that the hardship to the alien resulting from his separation from family members may, in itself, constitute extreme hardship.”) (citations omitted).

However, in Hassan v. INS, 927 F.2d 465, 468 (9th Cir. 1991), the Ninth Circuit upheld the finding that deporting the applicant and separating him from his wife and child was not conclusive of extreme hardship as it “was not of such a nature which is unusual or beyond that which would normally be expected from the respondent's bar to admission.” (citing Patel v. INS, 638 F.2d 1199, 1206 (9th Cir.1980) (severance of ties does not constitute extreme hardship). As stated in Perez v. INS, 96 F.3d 390, 392 (9th Cir. 1996), “[e]xtreme hardship” is hardship that is “unusual or beyond that which would normally be expected” upon deportation and “[t]he common results of deportation or exclusion are insufficient to prove extreme hardship.” (citing Hassan v. INS, 927 F.2d 465, 468 (9th Cir.1991)).

Having considered all of the hardship factors both individually and cumulatively, the applicant has established that his wife would experience extreme hardship if she were to remain in the United States without him. The combined hardships of a single mother raising a young child and associated financial issues, and her inability to continue her education, cumulatively rise to the level of extreme hardship. However, neither the applicant nor his wife state that his wife would experience extreme hardship if she were to join him to live in Mexico. The AAO cannot, therefore, find that the applicant has established extreme hardship to his wife based on the denial of his waiver application.

Having found the applicant statutorily ineligible for relief, no purpose would be served in discussing whether he merits a waiver as a matter of discretion.

In proceedings for application for waiver of grounds of inadmissibility under section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act, the burden of establishing that the application merits approval remains entirely with the applicant. See section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. The applicant has not met that burden. Accordingly, the appeal will be dismissed. The application will be denied.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed. The waiver application is denied.
