IN RE: Applicant: [REDACTED]

APPLICATION: Application for Waiver of Grounds of Inadmissibility under section 212(a)(9)(B)(v), 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(v), of the Immigration and Nationality Act.

ON BEHALF OF APPLICANT:

SELF-REPRESENTED

INSTRUCTIONS:

This is the decision of the Administrative Appeals Office in your case. All documents have been returned to the office that originally decided your case. Any further inquiry must be made to that office.

If you believe the law was inappropriately applied or you have additional information that you wish to have considered, you may file a motion to reconsider or a motion to reopen. Please refer to 8 C.F.R. § 103.5 for the specific requirements. All motions must be submitted to the office that originally decided your case by filing a Form I-290B, Notice of Appeal or Motion, with a fee of $585. Any motion must be filed within 30 days of the decision that the motion seeks to reconsider or reopen, as required by 8 C.F.R. § 103.5(a)(1)(i).

John F. Grissom,
Acting Chief Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The waiver application was denied by the District Director, Mexico City, Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, and is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The applicant is a native and citizen of Mexico who was found to be inadmissible to the United States under section 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(II), of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(i)(II), for having been unlawfully present in the United States for more than one year.

The applicant is the spouse of a U.S. citizen. He seeks a waiver of inadmissibility pursuant to section 212(a)(9)(B)(v), 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(v), of the Act in order to immigrate to the United States and live with his U.S. citizen wife. The district officer concluded that the applicant had failed to establish that his bar to admission would impose extreme hardship on a qualifying relative, and denied the Application for Waiver of Grounds of Inadmissibility (Form I-601) accordingly. Decision of the District Director, dated June 26, 2006. The applicant submitted a timely appeal.

On appeal, in a letter dated July 25, 2006, the applicant's wife, _____ states that she married the applicant on August 16, 2002 in California and lived in Mexico with him, and returned to the United States shortly thereafter because she was pregnant. _____ states that their son was born on October 8, 2005 in California and that his birth was a sad occasion without her husband. She conveys that she and her son joined her husband in Mexico on May 12, 2006, but returned to the United States due to stomach problems and diarrhea. She states that they want to raise their son together and have had medical, economic, and family hardships due to separation.

The AAO will first address the finding of inadmissibility.

Inadmissibility for unlawful presence is found under section 212(a)(9) of the Act. That section provides, in part:

(B) Aliens Unlawfully Present

(i) In general. - Any alien (other than an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence) who-

(I) was unlawfully present in the United States for a period of more than 180 days but less than 1 year, voluntarily departed the United States . . . and again seeks admission within 3 years of the date of such alien's departure or removal, or

(II) has been unlawfully present in the United States for one year or more, and who again seeks admission within 10 years of the date of such alien's departure or removal from the United States, is inadmissible.

Unlawful presence accrues when an alien remains in the United States after period of stay authorized by the Attorney General has expired or is present in the United States without being admitted or paroled. Section 212(a)(9)(B)(ii) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(ii). For purposes of section 212(a)(9)(B) of the Act, time in unlawful presence begins to accrue on April 1, 1997.¹

The three- and ten-year bars of sections 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(I) and (II) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(i)(I) and (II), are triggered by a departure from the United States following accrual of the specified period of unlawful presence. If someone accrues the requisite period of unlawful presence but does not subsequently depart the United States, sections 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(I) and (II) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(i)(I) and (II), would not apply. See Memo, note 1.

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) records reflect that the applicant entered the United States without inspection in February 1996 and remained in the country until December 2002. The applicant therefore accrued five years of unlawful presence from April 1, 1997 to December 2002, and triggered the ten-year-bar when he left the United States, rendering him inadmissible under section 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(II) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(9)(B)(i)(II).

The waiver for unlawful presence is found under section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(v). That section provides that:

- (v) Waiver. – The Attorney General [now Secretary, Homeland Security, “Secretary”] has sole discretion to waive clause (i) in the case of an immigrant who is the spouse or son or daughter of a United States citizen or of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence, if it is established to the satisfaction of the Attorney General [Secretary] that the refusal of admission to such immigrant alien would result in extreme hardship to the citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of such alien.

The waiver under section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act is dependent upon a showing that the bar to admission imposes an extreme hardship on a qualifying relative, i.e., the U.S. citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of the applicant. Hardship to an applicant and to his or her child is not a consideration under section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act. Unlike section 212(h) of the Act where a child is included as a qualifying relative, children are not included under section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act. Hardship to children will be considered only to the extent that it results in hardship to a qualifying relative, who in this case is the applicant’s U.S. citizen spouse. Once extreme hardship is established, it is one of the favorable factors to be considered in determining whether the Secretary should exercise discretion. See Matter of Mendez, 21 I&N Dec. 296 (BIA 1996).

¹ Memorandum by Lori Scialabba, Assoc. Director, Refugee, Asylum and International Operations Directorate and Pearl Chang, Acting Chief, Office of Policy and Strategy, Consolidation of Guidance Concerning Unlawful Presence for Purposes of Sections 212(a)(9)(B)(i) and 212(a)(9)(C)(i)(I) of the Act; AFM Update AD 08-03; May 6, 2009.

“Extreme hardship” is not a definable term of “fixed and inflexible meaning”; establishing extreme hardship is “dependent upon the facts and circumstances of each case.” Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, 22 I&N Dec. 560, 565 (BIA 1999). Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez lists the factors considered relevant in determining whether an applicant has established extreme hardship pursuant to section 212(i) of the Act. The factors relate to an applicant’s qualifying relative and include the presence of a lawful permanent resident or United States citizen spouse or parent in this country; the qualifying relative’s family ties outside the United States; the conditions in the country or countries to which the qualifying relative would relocate and the extent of the qualifying relative’s ties in such countries; the financial impact of departure from this country; and significant conditions of health, particularly when tied to an unavailability of suitable medical care in the country to which the qualifying relative would relocate. Id. at 565-566.

The factors to consider in determining whether extreme hardship exists “provide a framework for analysis,” and the “[r]elevant factors, though not extreme in themselves, must be considered in the aggregate in determining whether extreme hardship exists.” Matter of O-J-O-, 21 I&N Dec. 381, 383 (BIA 1996). The trier of fact considers the entire range of hardship factors in their totality and then determines “whether the combination of hardships takes the case beyond those hardships ordinarily associated with deportation.” (citing Matter of Ige, 20 I&N Dec. 880, 882 (BIA 1994).

Applying the Cervantes-Gonzalez factors here, extreme hardship to the applicant’s qualifying relative must be established in the event that she or he remains in the United States without the applicant, and alternatively, if she or he joins the applicant to live in Mexico. A qualifying relative is not required to reside outside of the United States based on the denial of the applicant’s waiver request.

The hardship in this case is both emotional and financial in nature. _____ expresses the hardships of family separation in her letter submitted on appeal. In addition, she states in letters that separation has been an extreme emotional hardship, especially because there is no bonding between her husband and son and her husband has not been present for her son’s first step and first words. Letters by the applicant’s spouse dated November 13, 2006 and March 22, 2007. She states that financially it has been very hard since she has to work and place her son in daycare, and cannot afford to travel to Mexico and has only a week of vacation each year. Id. The birth certificate in the record shows the applicant’s son was born on October 8, 2005.

Family separation must be considered in determining hardship. See, e.g., Salcido-Salcido v. INS, 138 F.3d 1292, 1293 (9th Cir. 1998) (“the most important single hardship factor may be the separation of the alien from family living in the United States”).

However, in Hassan v. INS, 927 F.2d 465, 468 (9th Cir. 1991), the Ninth Circuit upheld the finding that deporting the applicant and separating him from his wife and child was not conclusive of extreme hardship as it “was not of such a nature which is unusual or beyond that which would normally be expected from the respondent’s bar to admission.” (citing Patel v. INS, 638 F.2d 1199, 1206 (9th Cir.1980) (severance of ties does not constitute extreme hardship). As stated in Perez v. INS, 96 F.3d 390, 392 (9th Cir. 1996), “[e]xtreme hardship” is hardship that is “unusual or beyond that which would normally be expected” upon deportation and “[t]he common results of deportation or exclusion are insufficient to prove extreme hardship.” (citing Hassan v. INS, 927 F.2d 465, 468 (9th Cir.1991).

The record conveys that the applicant's wife is very concerned about separation from the applicant and the impact of his separation on their son. The AAO is mindful of and sympathetic to the emotional hardship that is undoubtedly endured as a result of separation from a loved one. After a careful and thoughtful consideration of the record, however, the AAO finds that the situation of the applicant's wife, if she remains in the United States, is typical to individuals separated as a result of removal and does not rise to the level of extreme hardship as required by the Act. The record before the AAO is insufficient to show that the emotional hardship, which certainly will be endured by the applicant's wife, is unusual or beyond that which is normally to be expected upon removal. See Hassan and Perez, supra.

In regard to joining her husband to live in Mexico, the applicant's wife states that while in Mexico she and her son were treated for diarrhea and stomach problems. In view of the fact that the applicant's spouse and son were able to receive medical treatment for their ailments, the AAO finds that their health problems are not so serious in nature as to warrant a finding that the applicant's spouse would experience extreme hardship if she were to join her husband to live in Mexico.

The applicant has established extreme hardship to his wife if she were to remain in the United States without him. When considered individually or in the aggregate the submitted evidence fails to demonstrate [REDACTED] would experience extreme hardship if she were to join her husband to live in Mexico.

It is thereby concluded that the factors presented do not in this case constitute extreme hardship to a qualifying family member for purposes of relief under section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(v).

Having found the applicant statutorily ineligible for relief, no purpose would be served in discussing whether he merits a waiver as a matter of discretion.

In proceedings for application for waiver of grounds of inadmissibility under section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act, the burden of proving eligibility remains entirely with the applicant. See Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. The applicant has not met that burden. Accordingly, the appeal will be dismissed.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
