John F. Grissom
Acting Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The waiver application was denied by the District Director, Mexico City, Mexico. The matter is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The record reflects that the applicant is a native and citizen of Mexico who was found to be inadmissible to the United States pursuant to section 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(II) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(i)(II), for having been unlawfully present in the United States for more than one year. The applicant is married to a naturalized U.S. citizen and seeks a waiver of inadmissibility pursuant to section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 212(a)(9)(B)(v), in order to reside with her husband and children in the United States.

The district director found that the applicant failed to establish extreme hardship to her U.S. citizen spouse and denied the application accordingly. Decision of the District Director, dated November 8, 2006.

The record contains, inter alia: a declaration from the applicant; a declaration from the applicant's husband, [REDACTED]; copies of report cards for two of the couple's sons; and a copy of an approved Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130).¹ The entire record was reviewed and considered in rendering this decision on the appeal.

Section 212(a)(9)(B) of the Act provides, in pertinent part:

(B) Aliens Unlawfully Present.-

(i) In general. - Any alien (other than an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence) who -

(II) has been unlawfully present in the United States for one year or more, and who again seeks admission within 10 years of the date of such alien's departure or removal from the United States, is inadmissible.

¹ The AAO notes that [REDACTED] submitted an untranslated letter dated November 1, 2005. The regulations at 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(b)(3) require that any document containing foreign language submitted to USCIS be accompanied by a full English language translation which the translator has certified as complete and accurate, and by the translator's certification that he or she is competent to translate from the foreign language into English. As this letter is not translated it can not be considered in this proceeding.

(v) Waiver. – The Attorney General [now the Secretary of Homeland Security (Secretary)] has sole discretion to waive clause (i) in the case of an immigrant who is the spouse or son or daughter of a United States citizen or of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence, if it is established to the satisfaction of the Attorney General [Secretary] that the refusal of admission to such immigrant alien would result in extreme hardship to the citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of such alien.

In this case, the district director found, and the applicant does not contest, that the applicant entered the United States in September 2001 without inspection and remained until October 2005. The applicant accrued unlawful presence for four years. She now seeks admission within ten years of her 2005 departure. Accordingly, she is inadmissible to the United States under section 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(II) of the Act for being unlawfully present in the United States for a period of one year or more.

A section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) waiver of the bar to admission resulting from section 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(II) of the Act is dependent first upon a showing that the bar imposes an extreme hardship to the U.S. citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of the applicant. See section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(v). Once extreme hardship is established, it is but one favorable factor to be considered in the determination of whether the Secretary should exercise discretion. See Matter of Mendez, 21 I&N Dec. 296 (BIA 1996).

Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, 22 I&N Dec. 560, 565-566 (BIA 1999), provides a list of factors the Board of Immigration Appeals deems relevant in determining whether an alien has established extreme hardship under the Act. These factors include: the presence of a lawful permanent resident or United States citizen spouse or parent in this country; the qualifying relative's family ties outside the United States; the conditions in the country or countries to which the qualifying relative would relocate and the extent of the qualifying relative's ties in such countries; the financial impact of departure from this country; and significant conditions of health, particularly when tied to an unavailability of suitable medical care in the country to which the qualifying relative would relocate.

It is not evident from the record that the applicant's spouse has suffered or will suffer extreme hardship as a result of the applicant's waiver being denied.

In this case, [REDACTED] states that since his wife departed the United States, his children's grades at school have gone from A's and B's to D's and F's. He states that "[t]aking them out of the country will not be the solution to this problem." [REDACTED] contends that it has been "very hard to take care of [the] children, work[, and] support two homes," one in the United States and one in Mexico. He contends he cannot sleep and is suffering "great pain morally and physically." He claims he is afraid of what would happen to his children if he were to get sick from all of the stress. Declaration of [REDACTED] [REDACTED], dated November 27, 2006; see also Declaration of [REDACTED] [REDACTED] dated November 27, 2006 (stating the applicant “was the one that assisted [the children] with their homework.”).

The AAO recognizes that [REDACTED] has endured hardship, and that the couple’s children’s grades have fallen since the applicant departed the United States and is sympathetic to the family’s circumstances. However, [REDACTED] does not discuss the possibility of moving back to Mexico, where he was born and where the couple married, to avoid the hardship of separation, and he does not address whether such a move would represent a hardship to him. Rather, if [REDACTED] decides to stay in the United States, their situation is typical to individuals separated as a result of deportation or exclusion and does not rise to the level of extreme hardship based on the record. The Board of Immigration Appeals and the Courts of Appeals have repeatedly held that the common results of deportation or exclusion are insufficient to prove extreme hardship. For example, Matter of Pilch, 21 I&N Dec. 627 (BIA 1996), held that emotional hardship caused by severing family and community ties is a common result of deportation and does not constitute extreme hardship. In addition, Perez v. INS, 96 F.3d 390 (9th Cir. 1996), held that the common results of deportation are insufficient to prove extreme hardship and defined extreme hardship as hardship that was unusual or beyond that which would normally be expected upon deportation. See also Hassan v. INS, 927 F.2d 465, 468 (9th Cir. 1991) (uprooting of family and separation from friends does not necessarily amount to extreme hardship but rather represents the type of inconvenience and hardship experienced by the families of most aliens being deported).

To the extent [REDACTED] states he cannot sleep, is in physical pain, and may get sick from stress, there is no evidence [REDACTED] has sought treatment from any health care professional. There is no evidence, and [REDACTED] does not claim, that he has ever seen a mental health professional or been diagnosed with any mental health condition. As such, there is no evidence that the stress [REDACTED] is experiencing rises to the level of extreme hardship. Going on record without any supporting documentary evidence is insufficient for purposes of meeting the burden of proof in these proceedings. Matter of Soffici, 22 I&N Dec. 158, 165 (BIA 1998) (citing Matter of Treasure Craft of California, 14 I&N Dec. 190 (Reg. Comm. 1972)).

A review of the documentation in the record fails to establish the existence of extreme hardship to the applicant’s husband caused by the applicant’s inadmissibility to the United States. Having found the applicant statutorily ineligible for relief, no purpose would be served in discussing whether she merits a waiver as a matter of discretion.

In proceedings for application for waiver of grounds of inadmissibility under section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act, the burden of proving eligibility remains entirely with the applicant. See Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. Here, the applicant has not met that burden. Accordingly, the appeal will be dismissed.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
