Perry Rhew
Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The waiver application was denied by the District Director, Mexico City, Mexico. The matter is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The applicant is a native and citizen of Mexico who was found to be inadmissible to the United States under section 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(II) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(i)(II), for having been unlawfully present in the United States for more than one year and seeking readmission within ten years of his last departure from the United States. The applicant is married to a naturalized United States citizen. He seeks a waiver of inadmissibility in order to reside in the United States with his spouse.

The District Director found that, based on the evidence in the record, the applicant had failed to establish extreme hardship to his qualifying relative. The application was denied accordingly. Decision of the District Director, dated December 26, 2006.

On appeal, the applicant's spouse asserts that she would suffer extreme hardship if the waiver application is denied. Form I-290B, Notice of Appeal to the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO).

In support of the waiver application, the record includes, but is not limited to, statements from the applicant's spouse. The AAO notes that the record also includes a document submitted in the Spanish language unaccompanied by a certified translation as required by the regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(b)(3). Accordingly, the AAO will not review this document. The remainder of the record was considered in rendering a decision on the appeal.

Section 212(a)(9)(B) of the Act provides, in pertinent part:

(B) Aliens Unlawfully Present.-

(i) In general. - Any alien (other than an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence) who-

(II) has been unlawfully present in the United States for one year or more, and who again seeks admission within 10 years of the date of such alien's departure or removal from the United States, is inadmissible.

(v) Waiver. - The Attorney General [now the Secretary of Homeland Security (Secretary)] has sole discretion to waive clause (i) in the case of an immigrant who is the spouse or son or daughter of a United States citizen or of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence, if it is established to the satisfaction of the Attorney General [Secretary] that the refusal of admission to such immigrant alien would result in extreme hardship to the citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of such alien.

In the present case, the record indicates that the applicant entered the United States without inspection in May 1998 and voluntarily departed on December 13, 2005, returning to Mexico. Consular Notes, American Consulate General, Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, dated December 15, 2005. The applicant, therefore, accrued unlawful presence from May 1998 until he departed the United States on December 13, 2005. In applying for an immigrant visa, the applicant is seeking admission within ten years of his December 13, 2005 departure from the United States. The applicant is, therefore, inadmissible to the United States under section 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(II) of the Act for being unlawfully present in the United States for a period of more than one year.

A section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) waiver of the bar to admission resulting from a violation of section 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(II) of the Act are dependent first upon a showing that the bar imposes an extreme hardship to the citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of the applicant. The plain language of the statute indicates that hardship that the applicant would experience as a result of his inadmissibility is not directly relevant to the determination as to whether he is eligible for a waiver. The only directly relevant hardship in the present case is hardship suffered by the applicant's spouse if the applicant is found to be inadmissible. Hardship to a non-qualifying relative will be considered to the extent that it affects the applicant's spouse. If extreme hardship is established, it is but one favorable factor to be considered in the determination of whether the Secretary should exercise discretion. See Matter of Mendez, 21 I&N Dec. 296 (BIA 1996).

Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, 22 I&N Dec. 560 (BIA 1999) provides a list of factors the Board of Immigration Appeals deems relevant in determining whether an alien has established extreme hardship pursuant to section 212(i) of the Act. These factors include the presence of a lawful permanent resident or United States citizen family ties to this country; the qualifying relative's family ties outside the United States; the conditions in the country or countries to which the qualifying relative would relocate and the extent of the qualifying relative's ties in such countries; the financial impact of departure from this country; and significant conditions of health, particularly when tied to an unavailability of suitable medical care in the country to which the qualifying relative would relocate.

The AAO notes that extreme hardship to the applicant's spouse must be established whether she resides in Mexico or the United States, as she is not required to reside outside the United States based on the denial of the applicant's waiver request. The AAO will consider the relevant factors in the adjudication of this case.

If the applicant's spouse joins the applicant in Mexico, the applicant needs to establish that his spouse will suffer extreme hardship. The applicant's spouse was born in Mexico. Form G-325A, Biographic Information, for the applicant. The record does not address how the applicant's spouse would be affected if she resides in Mexico. The record fails to indicate whether the applicant's spouse has familial and cultural ties in Mexico. The record does not address employment opportunities for the applicant's spouse in Mexico, nor does the record document, through published country conditions reports, the economic situation in Mexico and the cost of living. The record does not indicate that the applicant's spouse suffers from any type of health condition, physical or mental, that would require treatment in Mexico and if so, that she would be unable to receive adequate care. When looking at the record before it, the AAO does not find that the applicant has demonstrated extreme hardship to his spouse if she were to reside in Mexico.

If the applicant's spouse resides in the United States, the applicant needs to establish that his spouse will suffer extreme hardship. As previously noted, the applicant's spouse was born in Mexico. Form G-325A, Biographic Information, for the applicant. The applicant's spouse states that she and the applicant wish to have children but that she cannot pay bills, childcare, rent, and food with just one paycheck. Statement from the applicant's spouse, dated December 13, 2005. While the AAO acknowledges this statement, it notes that the applicant and his spouse do not have children and the applicant's spouse is referring to a potential future event, not to hardship she is currently experiencing. The record does not include any documentation, such as rent/mortgage statements, credit card statements, or monthly household expenses for the applicant's spouse, that establishes she is currently experiencing financial hardship. Furthermore, there is nothing in the record to show that the applicant would be unable to obtain employment and contribute to his spouse's financial well-being from a location other than the United States.

The applicant's spouse also states that she is lonely without the applicant and misses him a lot. Statement from the applicant's spouse, dated December 13, 2005. The AAO acknowledges the difficulties faced by the applicant's spouse. However, U.S. court decisions have repeatedly held that the common results of deportation or exclusion are insufficient to prove extreme hardship. See Hassan v. INS, 927 F.2d 465, 468 (9th Cir. 1991). For example, Matter of Pilch, 21 I&N Dec. 627 (BIA 1996), held that emotional hardship caused by severing family and community ties is a common result of deportation and does not constitute extreme hardship. In addition, Perez v. INS, 96 F.3d 390 (9th Cir. 1996), held that the common results of deportation are insufficient to prove extreme hardship and defined extreme hardship as hardship that was unusual or beyond that which would normally be expected upon deportation. Hassan v. INS, supra, held further that the uprooting of family and separation from friends does not necessarily amount to extreme hardship but rather represents the type of inconvenience and hardship experienced by the families of most aliens being deported. Separation from a loved one is a normal result of the removal process. The AAO recognizes that the applicant's spouse will endure hardship as a result of her separation from the applicant. However, the record does not distinguish her situation, if she remains in the United States, from that of other individuals separated as a result of removal. Accordingly, it does not establish that the hardship experienced by the applicant's spouse would rise to the level of extreme hardship. When looking at the aforementioned factors, the AAO does not find that the applicant has demonstrated extreme hardship to his spouse if she were to reside in the United States.

Having found the applicant statutorily ineligible for relief, no purpose would be served in discussing whether he merits a waiver as a matter of discretion.

In proceedings for application for waiver of grounds of inadmissibility under section 212(a)(9)(B) of the Act, the burden of proving eligibility remains entirely with the applicant. See section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. Here, the applicant has not met that burden. Accordingly, the appeal will be dismissed.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
