IN RE: [REDACTED]

APPLICATION: Application for Waiver of Grounds of Inadmissibility under section 212(a)(9)(B) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)

ON BEHALF OF APPLICANT:

INSTRUCTIONS:

This is the decision of the Administrative Appeals Office in your case. All documents have been returned to the office that originally decided your case. Any further inquiry must be made to that office.

If you believe the law was inappropriately applied or you have additional information that you wish to have considered, you may file a motion to reconsider or a motion to reopen. Please refer to 8 C.F.R. § 103.5 for the specific requirements. All motions must be submitted to the office that originally decided your case by filing a Form I-290B, Notice of Appeal or Motion, with a fee of $585. Any motion must be filed within 30 days of the decision that the motion seeks to reconsider, as required by 8 C.F.R. 103.5(a)(1)(i).

Perry Rhew
Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The waiver application was denied by the Officer in Charge (OIC), Ciudad Juarez, Mexico. The matter is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The applicant is a native and citizen of Mexico who was found to be inadmissible to the United States pursuant to section 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(II) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(i)(II), for having been unlawfully present in the United States for more than one year and seeking readmission within ten years of his last departure from the United States. The applicant is married to a U.S. citizen and seeks a waiver of inadmissibility in order to reside in the United States.

In a decision, dated August 17, 2006, the OIC found that the record failed to establish extreme hardship to the applicant's U.S. citizen spouse as a result of his inadmissibility. The application was denied accordingly.

In the attachment to the applicant's Notice of Appeal to the AAO (Form I-290B), counsel states that the OIC erred in not granting the applicant's waiver. He states that a lesser standard should be applied to waivers under section 212(a)(9) of the Act than are applied to waivers under section 212(h) of the Act. The AAO notes that counsel does not cite any legal authority to support this assertion. Counsel states further that the district director confuses the normal circumstances and extreme circumstances of hardship. Finally, counsel states that the applicant's spouse has a health issue, she needs her husband in the United States to help care for the family and she cannot wait ten years for his return.

The AAO notes that counsel submits a letter, dated August 20, 2008, which states that the applicant's spouse has become incapacitated due to complications from a brain aneurysm that she suffered earlier in the year. The letter states that she is now being cared for by family members and is in great need of the applicant for emotional and financial support and to care for her daily needs. Counsel submits medical documentation to support these statements.

The record indicates that the applicant entered the United States without inspection in February 1997. The applicant remained in the United States until June 2005. Therefore, the applicant accrued unlawful presence from April 1, 1997, the date the unlawful presence provisions were enacted until June 2005, when he departed the United States. In applying for an immigrant visa, the applicant is seeking admission within ten years of his June 2005 departure from the United States. Therefore, the applicant is inadmissible to the United States under section 212(a)(9)(B)(II) of the Act for being unlawfully present in the United States for a period of more than one year.

Section 212(a)(9)(B) of the Act provides, in pertinent part:

(B) Aliens Unlawfully Present.-

(i) In general. - Any alien (other than an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence) who-

(II) has been unlawfully present in the United States for one year or more, and who again seeks admission within 10 years of the date of such alien's departure or removal from the United States, is inadmissible.

(v) Waiver. - The Attorney General [now the Secretary of Homeland Security (Secretary)] has sole discretion to waive clause (i) in the case of an immigrant who is the spouse or son or daughter of a United States citizen or of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence, if it is established to the satisfaction of the Attorney General [Secretary] that the refusal of admission to such immigrant alien would result in extreme hardship to the citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of such alien.

A section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) waiver of the bar to admission resulting from section 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(II) of the Act is dependent first upon a showing that the bar imposes an extreme hardship to the U.S. citizen or lawfully resident spouse and/or parent of the applicant. Hardship the applicant experiences due to separation is not considered in section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) waiver proceedings unless it causes hardship to the applicant's U.S. citizen or lawfully permanent resident spouse and/or parent. Once extreme hardship is established, it is but one favorable factor to be considered in the determination of whether the Secretary should exercise discretion. See Matter of Mendez, 21 I&N Dec. 296 (BIA 1996).

In Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, 22 I&N Dec. 560, 565-66 (BIA 1999), the BIA provided a list of factors it deemed relevant in determining whether an alien has established extreme hardship to a qualifying relative. The factors include the presence of a lawful permanent resident or United States citizen spouse or parent in this country; the qualifying relative's family ties outside the United States; the conditions in the country or countries to which the qualifying relative would relocate and the extent of the qualifying relative's ties in such countries; the financial impact of departure from this country; and significant conditions of health, particularly when tied to an unavailability of suitable medical care in the country to which the qualifying relative would relocate. The BIA added that not all of the foregoing factors need be analyzed in any given case and emphasized that the list of factors was not an exclusive list. See id.

Relevant factors, though not extreme in themselves, must be considered in the aggregate in determining whether extreme hardship exists. In each case, the trier of fact must consider the entire range of factors concerning hardship in their totality and determine whether the combination of hardships takes the case beyond those hardships ordinarily associated with deportation. Matter of O-J-O-, 21 I&N Dec. 381, 383 (BIA 1996). (Citations omitted).

The AAO notes that in Salcido-Salcido v. INS, 138 F.3d 1292, 1293 (9th Cir. 1998), the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals held that, “the most important single hardship factor may be the separation of the alien from family living in the United States”, and that, “[w]hen the BIA fails to give considerable, if not predominant, weight to the hardship that will result from family separation, it has abused its discretion.” (Citations omitted). Although the present case did not arise in the Ninth Circuit, separation of family will be given appropriate weight in the assessment of hardship factors.

The AAO notes further, however, that U.S. court decisions have repeatedly held that the common results of deportation or exclusion are insufficient to prove extreme hardship. See Hassan v. INS, 927 F.2d 465, 468 (9th Cir. 1991). For example, in Matter of Pilch, 21 I&N Dec. 627 (BIA 1996), the BIA held that emotional hardship caused by severing family and community ties is a common result of deportation and does not constitute extreme hardship. In Perez v. INS, 96 F.3d 390 (9th Cir. 1996), the Court defined “extreme hardship” as hardship that was unusual or beyond that which would normally be expected upon deportation. The Court emphasized that the common results of deportation are insufficient to prove extreme hardship. Moreover, the U.S. Supreme Court held in INS v. Jong Ha Wang, 450 U.S. 139 (1981), that the mere showing of economic detriment to qualifying family members is insufficient to warrant a finding of extreme hardship.

The record of hardship includes medical documentation for the applicant’s spouse, a brief by counsel, and a statement in Spanish from the applicant’s spouse. The AAO notes that the applicant’s statement was submitted without certified English translations. Because the applicant failed to submit certified translations of the documents, the AAO cannot determine whether the evidence supports the applicant’s claims. See 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(b)(3). Accordingly, the evidence is not probative and will not be accorded any weight in this proceeding.

The AAO notes that extreme hardship to the applicant’s spouse must be established in the event that she resides in Mexico and in the event that she resides in the United States, as she is not required to reside outside of the United States based on the denial of the applicant’s waiver request. The AAO will consider the relevant factors in adjudication of this case.

As stated above in counsel’s letter, dated August 20, 2008, the applicant’s spouse is suffering complications from a brain aneurysm. The record includes medical documentation showing that the applicant’s spouse underwent surgery for “acute hydrocephalus” on March 25, 2008. The record also shows that on March 26, 2008 she was treated for a brain aneurysm and continued to receive in-hospital care through April 2008.

Medical documentation dated June 11, 2003 and submitted with the initial appeal states that the applicant’s spouse suffered from lower back pain and bilateral lower extremity pain, which the applicant’s spouse’s doctor stated requires surgery.

The AAO finds that the applicant has not shown that his U.S. citizen spouse will suffer extreme hardship as a result of his inadmissibility to the United States. The record lacks information regarding the overall circumstances of the applicant's spouse's situation. The AAO acknowledges that the applicant's spouse has shown that she suffered a life-threatening health problem when she had surgery for a brain aneurysm in March 2008. However, other than counsel's statement in August 2008 that she was being cared for by family members, the record contains no information about the condition of the applicant's spouse and/or how the applicant's absence from her life is causing her to suffer extreme hardship. Going on record without supporting documentary evidence is not sufficient for purposes of meeting the burden of proof in these proceedings. Matter of Soffici, 22 I&N Dec. 158, 165 (Comm. 1998) (citing Matter of Treasure Craft of California, 14 I&N Dec. 190 (Reg. Comm. 1972)). Without documentary evidence to support the claim, the assertions of counsel will not satisfy the applicant's burden of proof. The unsupported assertions of counsel do not constitute evidence. Matter of Obaigbena, 19 I&N Dec. 533, 534 (BIA 1988); Matter of Laureano, 19 I&N Dec. 1 (BIA 1983); Matter of Ramirez-Sanchez, 17 I&N Dec. 503, 506 (BIA 1980). The record contains no statements from family members, no statements from the applicant or his spouse. The record does not indicate the financial situation of the applicant and his spouse. In addition, the record does not address the possibility of the applicant's spouse relocating to Mexico.

A review of the documentation in the record fails to establish the existence of extreme hardship to the applicant's spouse caused by the applicant's inadmissibility to the United States. Having found the applicant statutorily ineligible for relief, no purpose would be served in discussing whether he merits a waiver as a matter of discretion.

In proceedings for application for waiver of grounds of inadmissibility under section 212(a)(9)(B) of the Act, the burden of proving eligibility remains entirely with the applicant. See section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. Here, the applicant has not met that burden. Accordingly, the appeal will be dismissed.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
