Perry Rhew
Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The waiver application was denied by the District Director, Mexico City, Mexico, and is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The record establishes that the applicant, a native and citizen of Mexico, entered the United States without authorization in July 1996 and did not depart until October 2005. The applicant accrued unlawful presence from April 1, 1997, the date of the enactment of the unlawful presence provisions, until his departure in October 2005. The applicant was thus found to be inadmissible to the United States pursuant to section 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(II) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(i)(II), for having been unlawfully present in the United States for more than one year.¹ The applicant does not contest the district director's finding of inadmissibility. Rather,

¹ The record indicates that the applicant may also be inadmissible under section 212(a)(6)(C)(i) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(6)(C)(i), for having attempted to procure entry into the United States by fraud or willful misrepresentation. Notes from the consular officer indicate that the applicant attempted to enter the United States in July 1996 by falsely declaring to be a United States citizen. The AAO notes that aliens making false claims to U.S. citizenship on or after September 30, 1996 are ineligible to apply for a Form I-601 waiver. See Sections 212(a)(6)(C)(ii) and (iii) of the Act. Provisions of the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996 afford aliens making false claims to U.S. citizenship prior to September 30, 1996, the eligibility to apply for a waiver.

In considering a case where a false claim to U.S. citizenship has been made, Service [CIS] officers should review the information on the alien to determine whether the false claim to U.S. citizenship was made before, on, or after September 30, 1996. If the false claim was made before the enactment of IIRIRA, Service [CIS] officers should then determine whether (1) the false claim was made to procure an immigration benefit under the Act; and (2) whether such claim was made before a U.S. Government official. If these two additional requirements are met, the alien should be inadmissible under section 212(a)(6)(C)(i) of the Act and advised of the waiver requirements under section 212(i) of the Act.

Memorandum by Joseph R. Greene, Acting Associate Commissioner, Office of Programs, Immigration and Naturalization Service, dated April 8, 1998 at 3.

Section 212(a)(6)(C) of the Act provides, in pertinent part, that:

- (i) Any alien who, by fraud or willfully misrepresenting a material fact, seeks to procure (or has sought to procure or has procured) a visa, other documentation, or admission into the United States or other benefit provided under this Act is inadmissible.

Section 212(i) of the Act provides that:

- (1) The Attorney General [now the Secretary of Homeland Security (Secretary)] may, in the discretion of the Attorney General (Secretary), waive the application of clause (i) of subsection (a)(6)(C) in the case of an immigrant who is the spouse, son or daughter of a the applicant seeks a waiver of inadmissibility in order to reside in the United States with his U.S. citizen spouse.

The district director concluded that the applicant had failed to establish that extreme hardship would be imposed on a qualifying relative and denied the Form I-601, Application for Waiver of Ground of Excludability (Form I-601) accordingly. Decision of the District Director, dated August 30, 2006.

In support of the appeal, counsel for the applicant submits a brief, dated September 27, 2006, and referenced exhibits. The entire record was reviewed and considered in rendering this decision.

Section 212(a)(9)(B) of the Act provides, in pertinent part:

Aliens Unlawfully Present.-

(i) In general. - Any alien (other than an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence) who-

(II) has been unlawfully present in the United States for one year or more, and who again seeks admission within 10 years of the date of such alien's departure or removal from the United States, is inadmissible.

(v) Waiver. - The Attorney General [now the Secretary of Homeland Security (Secretary)] has sole discretion to waive clause (i) in the case of an immigrant who is the spouse or son or daughter of a United States citizen or of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence, if it is established to the satisfaction of the Attorney General [Secretary] that the refusal of admission to such immigrant alien would result in extreme hardship to the citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of such alien...

United States citizen or of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence if it is established to the satisfaction of the Attorney General (Secretary) that the refusal of admission to the United States of such immigrant alien would result in extreme hardship to the citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of such an alien...

The AAO notes that no documentation is contained in the record with respect to the applicant's attempted entry to the United States in July 1996, to establish inadmissibility under section 212(a)(6)(C)(i) of the Act. Nevertheless, as the AAO has already determined that the applicant is inadmissible under section 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(II) of the Act, for unlawful presence, it is not necessary to determine whether the applicant is also inadmissible under section 212(a)(6)(C)(i) of the Act, for fraud and/or willful misrepresentation.

The concept of extreme hardship to a qualifying relative “is not . . . fixed and inflexible,” and whether extreme hardship has been established is determined based on an examination of the facts of each individual case. Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, 22 I&N Dec. 560, 565 (BIA 1999). In Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, the Board of Immigration Appeals set forth a list of non-exclusive factors relevant to determining whether an alien has established extreme hardship to a qualifying relative. These factors include, with respect to the qualifying relative, the presence of family ties to U.S. citizens or lawful permanent residents in the United States, family ties outside the United States, country conditions where the qualifying relative would relocate and family ties in that country, the financial impact of departure, and significant health conditions, particularly where there is diminished availability of medical care in the country to which the qualifying relative would relocate. Id. at 566. The BIA held in Matter of O-J-O-, 21 I&N Dec. 381, 383 (BIA 1996) (citations omitted) that:

Relevant factors, though not extreme in themselves, must be considered in the aggregate in determining whether extreme hardship exists. In each case, the trier of fact must consider the entire range of factors concerning hardship in their totality and determine whether the combination of hardships takes the case beyond those hardships ordinarily associated with deportation.

Section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act provides that a waiver under section 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(II) of the Act is applicable solely where the applicant establishes extreme hardship to his or her citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent. In the present case, the applicant’s U.S. citizen spouse is the only qualifying relative, and hardship to the applicant and/or the applicant’s spouse’s parents cannot be considered, except as it may affect the applicant’s U.S. citizen spouse.

The applicant’s U.S. citizen spouse asserts that she will suffer extreme emotional hardship were she to remain in the United States while the applicant resides abroad due to his inadmissibility. In a declaration she states that she and her husband wish to have children together but their inability to reunite as a family is causing her emotional hardship. Declaration of [REDACTED] dated September 27, 2006. In addition, counsel notes that the applicant and his spouse lived with the applicant’s spouse’s parents and helped care for them, but due to the applicant’s inadmissibility, the burden to assist her parents has become too great for the applicant’s spouse to bear alone. Brief in Support of Appeal, dated September 27, 2006.

It has not been established that the applicant’s spouse is suffering extreme emotional hardship. Nor has it been established that the applicant’s spouse is unable to travel to Mexico regularly to visit her spouse. Going on record without supporting documentary evidence is not sufficient for purposes of meeting the burden of proof in these proceedings. Matter of Soffici, 22 I&N Dec. 158, 165 (Comm. 1998) (citing Matter of Treasure Craft of California, 14 I&N Dec. 190 (Reg. Comm. 1972)). As for the hardship referenced by counsel with respect to the applicant’s spouse’s care of her parents without her husband’s daily support, the AAO notes that without documentary evidence to support the claim, the assertions of counsel will not satisfy the petitioner's burden of proof. The unsupported assertions of counsel do not constitute evidence. Matter of Obaigbena, 19 I&N Dec. 533, 534 (BIA 1988); Matter of Laureano, 19 I&N Dec. 1 (BIA 1983); Matter of Ramirez-Sanchez, 17 I&N Dec. 503, 506 (BIA 1980). Finally, while the AAO sympathizes with the applicant and his spouse's desire to have children, all couples separated by removal have to make alternate arrangements if they want to conceive. It has not been documented that such arrangements rise to the level of extreme hardship.

Although the depth of concern and anxiety over the applicant's inadmissibility is neither doubted or minimized, the fact remains that Congress provided for a waiver of inadmissibility only under limited circumstances. In nearly every qualifying relationship, whether between husband and wife or parent and child, there is a deep level of affection and a certain amount of emotional and social interdependence. While, in common parlance, the prospect of separation or involuntary relocation nearly always results in considerable hardship to individuals and families, in specifically limiting the availability of a waiver of inadmissibility to cases of "extreme hardship," Congress did not intend that a waiver be granted in every case where a qualifying relationship exists. The current state of the law, viewed from a legislative, administrative, or judicial point of view, requires that the hardship be above and beyond the normal, expected hardship involved in such cases.

The AAO recognizes that the applicant's spouse will endure hardship as a result of separation from the applicant. However, her situation if she remains in the United States, is typical to individuals separated as a result of removal and does not rise to the level of extreme hardship based on the record. The AAO concludes that although the applicant's spouse may need to make alternate arrangements with respect to her own care and the maintenance of the household since the applicant is unable to reside in the United States, it has not been established that such arrangements would cause the applicant's spouse extreme hardship.

The AAO notes that extreme hardship to a qualifying relative must be established in the event that he or she relocates abroad based on the denial of the applicant's waiver request. Counsel asserts that the applicant's spouse will suffer hardship as she will lose the proximity and support of her own parents, siblings, cousins and grandparents and she is unfamiliar with the Mexican culture. Supra at 6. In addition, the applicant's spouse contends that she will not be able to continue her work as a teacher in Mexico, as she "neither has the degree nor the skills to teach in Spanish..." Supra at 12. No documentation has been provided to establish that a relocation abroad would cause the applicant's spouse, a bilingual Spanish speaking teacher as noted by her employer, extreme hardship. See Letter from [REDACTED] Los Angeles Unified School District, Forty-Ninth Street Elementary, dated September 26, 2006. As noted above, assertions without supporting documentation do not suffice to establish extreme hardship. It has thus not been established that the applicant's spouse would suffer extreme hardship were she to relocate abroad to reside with the applicant due to his inadmissibility.

The record, reviewed in its entirety and in light of the Cervantes-Gonzalez factors, cited above, does not support a finding that the applicant's U.S. citizen spouse will face extreme hardship if the applicant is unable to reside in the United States. Rather, the record demonstrates that she will face no greater hardship than the unfortunate, but expected, disruptions, inconveniences, and difficulties arising whenever a spouse is removed from the United States and/or refused admission. Although the AAO is not insensitive to the applicant's spouse's situation, the record does not establish that the hardship he would face rises to the level of "extreme" as contemplated by statute and case law.

In proceedings for application for waiver of grounds of inadmissibility, the burden of proving eligibility remains entirely with the applicant. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. Here, the applicant has not met that burden. Accordingly, the appeal will be dismissed.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed. The waiver application is denied.
