John F. Grissom
Acting Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The waiver application was denied by the District Director, Mexico City, Mexico, and is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The record reflects that the applicant is a native and citizen of Mexico who was found to be inadmissible to the United States pursuant to section 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(II) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(i)(II), for having been unlawfully present in the United States for more than one year and seeking readmission within 10 years of his last departure from the United States. The record indicates that the applicant is married to a United States citizen and he is the beneficiary of an approved Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130). The applicant seeks a waiver of inadmissibility pursuant to section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(v), in order to reside in the United States with his United States citizen wife and son.

The District Director found that the applicant failed to establish that extreme hardship would be imposed on the applicant's spouse and denied the Application for Waiver of Grounds of Excludability (Form I-601) accordingly. Decision of the District Director, dated December 26, 2006.

On appeal, the applicant, through counsel, asserts that the District Director's decision "was in error as the [applicant's] spouse will suffer extreme hardship to a level that would warrant the approval of the requested waiver." Form I-290B. Counsel claims that the applicant's spouse is suffering an extreme level of psychological anxiety from having to choose between staying in the United States with all of her family or joining her husband in Mexico. Id.

The record includes, but is not limited to, counsel's brief, a psychological evaluation by [REDACTED] and the applicant's marriage certificate. The entire record was reviewed and considered in arriving at a decision on the appeal.

Section 212(a)(9)(B) of the Act provides, in pertinent part:

(B) Aliens Unlawfully Present.-

- (i) In general.-Any alien (other than an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence) who-
  - ....
  - (II) has been unlawfully present in the United States for one year or more, and who again seeks admission within 10 years of the date of such alien's departure or removal from the United States, is inadmissible.
  - ....
- (v) Waiver.-The Attorney General [now the Secretary of Homeland Security, "Secretary"] has sole discretion to waive clause (i) in the case of an immigrant who is the spouse or son or daughter of a United States citizen or of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence, if it is established to the satisfaction of the [Secretary] that the refusal of admission to such immigrant alien would result in extreme hardship to the citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of such alien.

The AAO notes that the record contains several references to the hardship that the applicant's son would suffer if the applicant were denied admission into the United States. Section 212(a)(9)(B)(i) of the Act provides that a waiver, under section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act, is applicable solely where the applicant establishes extreme hardship to his citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent. Unlike a waiver under section 212(h) of the Act, Congress does not mention extreme hardship to United States citizen or lawful permanent resident children. In the present case, the applicant's wife is the only qualifying relative, and hardship to the applicant's son will not be considered, except as it may cause hardship to the applicant's spouse.

In the present application, the record indicates that the applicant initially entered the United States in January 2001 without inspection. On September 11, 2003, the applicant's United States citizen wife filed a Form I-130 on behalf of the applicant. On September 1, 2004, the applicant's Form I-130 was approved. In December 2005, the applicant departed the United States. On December 15, 2005, the applicant filed a Form I-601. On December 26, 2006, the District Director denied the Form I-601, finding the applicant accrued more than a year of unlawful presence and he failed to demonstrate extreme hardship to his United States citizen spouse.

The applicant accrued unlawful presence from January 2001, the date the applicant entered the United States without inspection, until December 2005, the date the applicant departed the United States. The applicant is attempting to seek admission into the United States within 10 years of his December 2005 departure from the United States. The applicant is, therefore, inadmissible to the United States under section 212(a)(9)(B)(II) of the Act for being unlawfully present in the United States for a period of more than one year.

A section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) waiver of the bar to admission resulting from section 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(II) of the Act is dependent first upon a showing that the bar imposes an extreme hardship to the citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of the applicant. Hardship the applicant himself experiences upon removal is irrelevant to a section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) waiver proceeding. Once extreme hardship is established, it is but one favorable factor to be considered in the determination of whether the Secretary should exercise discretion. See Matter of Mendez, 21 I&N Dec. 296 (BIA 1996).

In Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, 22 I&N Dec. 560, 565-66 (BIA 1999), the Board of Immigration Appeals (Board) provided a list of factors it deemed relevant in determining whether an alien has established extreme hardship to a qualifying relative. The factors include the presence of a lawful permanent resident or United States citizen spouse or parent in this country; the qualifying relative's family ties outside the United States; the conditions in the country or countries to which the qualifying relative would relocate and the extent of the qualifying relative's ties in such countries; the financial impact of departure from this country; and significant conditions of health, particularly when tied to an unavailability of suitable medical care in the country to which the qualifying relative would relocate.

Counsel claims that the applicant's wife and son have suffered extreme hardship since the applicant departed the United States. See appeal brief, dated January 26, 2007. [REDACTED] states the applicant's wife "is experiencing a clinical depression and excessive amounts of anxiety which goes beyond what could be considered normal." Psychological evaluation by [REDACTED] [REDACTED] dated January 11, 2007. Although the input of any mental health professional is respected and valuable, the AAO notes that the submitted assessment is based on one interview between the applicant's wife and psychologist. There was no evidence submitted establishing an ongoing relationship between the psychologist and the applicant's wife. Moreover, the conclusions reached in the submitted assessment, being based on one interview, do not reflect the insight and elaboration commensurate with an established relationship with a mental health professional, thereby rendering the psychologist's findings speculative and diminishing the assessment's value to a determination of extreme hardship. Additionally, [REDACTED] diagnosed the applicant's son with experiencing separation anxiety and depression; however, the AAO notes that the applicant's son is not a qualifying relative for a waiver under section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act. Counsel states the applicant's wife has lived her whole life in the United States and she is currently residing with her parents and siblings. See appeal brief, supra. Counsel claims that that the applicant's wife had to quit her job "due to her psychological distress and the loss of her husband." Id. at 15. Additionally, counsel states that "it is unlikely, almost impossible, that [the applicant's wife] will be able to find employment" in Mexico. Id. The AAO notes that the applicant has not established that his wife has no transferable skills that would aid her in obtaining a job in Mexico. Additionally, the AAO notes that the applicant's wife speaks and writes in Spanish, and it has not been established that she has no family ties in Mexico. The AAO finds that the applicant failed to establish that his wife would suffer extreme hardship if she joined him in Mexico.

In addition, counsel does not establish extreme hardship to the applicant's wife if she remains in the United States, in close proximity to her family. As a United States citizen, the applicant's wife is not required to reside outside of the United States as a result of denial of the applicant's waiver request. Counsel claims that the applicant's wife is raising her son on her own; however, the AAO notes that the applicant's wife is currently living with her parents and siblings. See appeal brief, supra. Counsel states that the applicant cannot find a job in Mexico; however, beyond generalized assertions regarding country conditions in Mexico, the record fails to demonstrate that the applicant will be unable to contribute to her wife's financial wellbeing from a location outside of the United States. Id. Moreover, the United States Supreme Court has held that the mere showing of economic detriment to qualifying family members is insufficient to warrant a finding of extreme hardship. INS v. Jong Ha Wang, 450 U.S. 139 (1981).

United States court decisions have repeatedly held that the common results of deportation or exclusion are insufficient to prove extreme hardship. See Hassan v. INS, 927 F.2d 465, 468 (9th Cir. 1991). For example, in Matter of Pilch, 21 I&N Dec. 627 (BIA 1996), the Board held that emotional hardship caused by severing family and community ties is a common result of deportation and does not constitute extreme hardship. In addition, Perez v. INS, 96 F.3d 390 (9th Cir. 1996), held that the common results of deportation are insufficient to prove extreme hardship and defined extreme hardship as hardship that was unusual or beyond that which would normally be expected upon deportation. In Hassan, supra, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals held further that the uprooting of family and separation from friends does not necessarily amount to extreme hardship but rather represents the type of inconvenience and hardship experienced by the families of most aliens being deported.

A review of the documentation in the record fails to establish the existence of extreme hardship to the applicant's spouse caused by the applicant's inadmissibility to the United States. Having found the applicant statutorily ineligible for relief, no purpose would be served in discussing whether he merits a waiver as a matter of discretion.

In proceedings for application for waiver of grounds of inadmissibility under section 212(a)(9)(B) of the Act, the burden of proving eligibility remains entirely with the applicant. See section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. Here, the applicant has not met that burden. Accordingly, the appeal will be dismissed.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
