Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The waiver application was denied by the District Director, Newark, New Jersey. The matter is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be sustained. The District Director shall reopen the applicant's adjustment proceeding.

The applicant is a native and a citizen of Haiti who was found to be inadmissible to the United States pursuant to section 212(a)(6)(C) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(6)(C). She is the spouse of a U.S. citizen and the daughter of two naturalized U.S. citizens. The applicant is seeking a waiver under section 212(i) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(i) in order to reside in the United States.

The District Director concluded that the applicant had failed to establish that the bar to her admission would impose extreme hardship on a qualifying relative, her U.S. citizen parents or that a favorable exercise of discretion was warranted. He denied the Application for Waiver of Grounds of Inadmissibility (Form I-601) on August 11, 2007.

On appeal, counsel for the applicant asserts that United States Citizenship and Immigration Services' decision is not supported by the facts.

Section 212(a)(6)(C) Misrepresentation, states in pertinent part:

- (i) In general. Any alien who, by fraud or willfully misrepresenting a material fact, seeks to procure (or has sought to procure or has procured) a visa, other documentation, or admission into the United States or other benefit provided under this chapter is inadmissible.

Section 212(a)(6)(C)(iii) authorizes a waiver, in the discretion of the Attorney General, as proscribed by Section 212(i):

- (1) The Attorney General may, in the discretion of the Attorney General, waive the application of clause (i) of subsection (a)(6)(C) of this section in the case of an immigrant who is the spouse, son, or daughter of a United States citizen or of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence if it is established to the satisfaction of the Attorney General that the refusal of admission to the United States of such immigrant alien would result in extreme hardship to the citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of such an alien

The record indicates that the applicant used a passport and visa issued to another individual to enter the United States on March 20, 2000. Accordingly, the applicant is inadmissible to the United States under section 212(a)(6)(C) of the Act for having obtained an immigration benefit through fraud or the willful misrepresentation of a material fact.

A waiver of inadmissibility under section 212(i) is dependent upon a showing that the bar to admission imposes an extreme hardship on a qualifying relative, in this case the U.S. citizen spouse and/or parents of the applicant. If extreme hardship to a qualifying relative is established, the Secretary then assesses whether an exercise of discretion is warranted. Section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act; see also Matter of Mendez-Moralez, 21 I&N Dec. 296 (BIA 1996).

The concept of extreme hardship to a qualifying relative “is not . . . fixed and inflexible,” and whether extreme hardship has been established is determined based on an examination of the facts of each individual case. Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, 22 I&N Dec. 560, 565 (BIA 1999). In Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, the Board of Immigration Appeals set forth a list of non-exclusive factors relevant to determining whether an applicant has established extreme hardship to a qualifying relative pursuant to section 212(i) of the Act. These factors include, with respect to the qualifying relative, the presence of family ties to U.S. citizens or lawful permanent residents in the United States, family ties outside the United States, country conditions where the qualifying relative would relocate and family ties in that country, the financial impact of departure, and significant health conditions, particularly where there is diminished availability of medical care in the country to which the qualifying relative would relocate. Id. at 566.

Relevant factors, though not extreme in themselves, must be considered in the aggregate in determining whether extreme hardship exists. In each case, the trier of fact must consider the entire range of factors concerning hardship in their totality and determine whether the combination of hardships takes the case beyond those hardships ordinarily associated with deportation.

Matter of O-J-O-, 21 I&N Dec. 381, 383 (BIA 1996) (citations omitted).

An analysis under Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez is appropriate. The AAO notes that extreme hardship to a qualifying relative must be established whether he or she relocates with the applicant or remains in the United States, as a qualifying relative is not required to reside outside the United States based on the denial of the applicant’s waiver request.

The entire record was reviewed and all relevant evidence considered in rendering this decision.

The Department of Homeland Security (DHS) Secretary, Janet Napolitano, has determined that an 18-month designation of Temporary Protected Status (TPS) for Haiti is warranted because of the devastating earthquake and aftershocks which occurred on January 12, 2010. As a result, Haitians in the United States are unable to return safely to their country. Even prior to the current catastrophe, Haiti was subject to years of political and social turmoil and natural disasters. In a travel warning issued on January 28, 2009 the U.S. Department of State noted the extensive damage to the country after four hurricanes struck in August and September 2008 and the chronic danger of violent crime, in particular kidnapping. U.S. Department of State, Travel Warning – Haiti, January 28, 2009. Based on the designation of TPS for Haitians and the disastrous conditions that have compounded an already unstable environment and will affect the country and people of Haiti for years to come, the AAO finds that the applicant’s spouse and parents would suffer extreme hardship if they were to join the applicant in Haiti.

For the same reasons, the AAO finds that the applicant’s spouse and parents would also experience extreme hardship were they to remain in the United States without the applicant. This finding is based on the extreme emotional harm they will experience due to the emotional stress resulting from the applicant’s return to Haiti, a country recently experiencing devastating earthquakes and in a state of national emergency. The emotional stress that would result from a family member having to re-enter a country in Haiti's condition at this time is well beyond the common results of removal or inadmissibility to most aliens facing exclusion, and therefore constitutes an extreme hardship.

The AAO also finds the applicant to merit a waiver of inadmissibility as a matter of discretion. In discretionary matters, the alien bears the burden of proving eligibility in terms of equities in the United States which are not outweighed by adverse factors. See Matter of T-S-Y-, 7 I&N Dec. 582 (BIA 1957).

In evaluating whether section 212(h)(1)(B) relief is warranted in the exercise of discretion, the factors adverse to the alien include the nature and underlying circumstances of the exclusion ground at issue, the presence of additional significant violations of this country's immigration laws, the existence of a criminal record, and if so, its nature and seriousness, and the presence of other evidence indicative of the alien's bad character or undesirability as a permanent resident of this country. The favorable considerations include family ties in the United States, residence of long duration in this country (particularly where alien began residency at a young age), evidence of hardship to the alien and his family if he is excluded and deported, service in this country's Armed Forces, a history of stable employment, the existence of property or business ties, evidence of value or service in the community, evidence of genuine rehabilitation if a criminal record exists, and other evidence attesting to the alien's good character (e.g., affidavits from family, friends and responsible community representatives).

See Matter of Mendez-Moralez, 21 I&N Dec. 296, 301 (BIA 1996). The AAO must then, "[B]alance the adverse factors evidencing an alien's undesirability as a permanent resident with the social and humane considerations presented on the alien's behalf to determine whether the grant of relief in the exercise of discretion appears to be in the best interests of the country." Id. at 300. (Citations omitted).

The favorable discretionary factors for the applicant in this case include the applicant's U.S. citizen spouse and her elderly U.S. citizen parents, the extreme hardship that would be experienced by her spouse and parents if her waiver request were to be denied, the health conditions of the applicant's parents, and the absence of any criminal record for the applicant during her residence in the United States, which reflects positively on her character. The negative factor in this case is the applicant's prior misrepresentation for which she now seeks a waiver. The AAO finds that, although the immigration violation committed by the applicant was serious and cannot be condoned, when taken together, the favorable factors in the present case outweigh the adverse factor, such that a favorable exercise of discretion is warranted. Accordingly, the appeal will be sustained.

In proceedings for an application for waiver of grounds of inadmissibility under section 212(h) of the Act, the burden of establishing that the application merits approval rests with the applicant. See section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. In this case, the applicant has met her burden.

ORDER: The appeal is sustained. The District Director shall reopen the applicant's Form I-485 for action consistent with this decision.
