Perry Rhew
Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The waiver application was denied by the District Director, Mexico City, Mexico, and is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The applicant, [REDACTED], is a citizen of Mexico who was found to be inadmissible to the United States under section 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(II), of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(i)(II), for having been unlawfully present in the United States for more than one year. The applicant is the spouse of a lawful permanent resident of the United States. The applicant sought a waiver of inadmissibility pursuant to section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(v), so as to immigrate to the United States. The director concluded that the applicant had failed to establish that his bar to admission would impose extreme hardship on a qualifying relative, and denied the Application for Waiver of Grounds of Inadmissibility (Form I-601) accordingly. Decision of the District Director, February 8, 2007. The applicant filed a timely appeal.¹

On appeal, the applicant's spouse, [REDACTED], asserts that she needs financial support from her husband because her income is not enough for her expenses. She claims that she no longer has a vehicle because it was repossessed. She indicates that her daughters miss their father.

Inadmissibility for unlawful presence is found under section 212(a)(9)(B) of the Act. That section provides, in part:

(B) Aliens Unlawfully Present

(i) In general. - Any alien (other than an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence) who-

(I) was unlawfully present in the United States for a period of more than 180 days but less than 1 year, voluntarily departed the United States . . . and again seeks admission within 3 years of the date of such alien's departure or removal, or

(II) has been unlawfully present in the United States for one year or more, and who again seeks admission within 10 years of the date of such alien's departure or removal from the United States, is inadmissible.

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) records reflect that the applicant entered the United States without inspection in January 2000. He began to accrue unlawful presence from January 2000 until February 2006, when he left the country and triggered the ten-year bar, rendering him inadmissible under section 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(II) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1101(a)(9)(B)(i)(II).

The waiver for unlawful presence is found under section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(v). That section provides that:

(v) Waiver. – The Attorney General [now Secretary, Homeland Security, “Secretary”] has sole discretion to waive clause (i) in the case of an immigrant who is the spouse or son or daughter of a United States citizen or of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence, if it is established to the satisfaction of the Attorney General [Secretary] that the refusal of admission to such immigrant alien would result in extreme hardship to the citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of such alien.

The waiver under section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act is dependent upon a showing that the bar to admission imposes an extreme hardship on a qualifying relative, i.e., the U.S. citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of the applicant. Hardship to an applicant is not a consideration under the statute, and will be considered only to the extent that it results in hardship to a qualifying relative, who in this case is the applicant’s lawful permanent resident spouse. Once extreme hardship is established, it is but one favorable factor to be considered in determining whether the Secretary should exercise discretion. See Matter of Mendez-Morales, 21 I&N Dec. 296, 301 (BIA 1996).

“Extreme hardship” is not a definable term of “fixed and inflexible meaning”; establishing extreme hardship is “dependent upon the facts and circumstances of each case.” Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, 22 I&N Dec. 560, 565 (BIA 1999). Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez lists the factors considered relevant in determining whether an applicant has established extreme hardship pursuant to section 212(i) of the Act. The factors relate to an applicant’s qualifying relative and include the presence of a lawful permanent resident or United States citizen spouse or parent in this country; the qualifying relative’s family ties outside the United States; the conditions in the country or countries to which the qualifying relative would relocate and the extent of the qualifying relative’s ties in such countries; the financial impact of departure from this country; and significant conditions of health, particularly when tied to an unavailability of suitable medical care in the country to which the qualifying relative would relocate. Id. at 565-566.

The factors to consider in determining whether extreme hardship exists “provide a framework for analysis,” and the “[r]elevant factors, though not extreme in themselves, must be considered in the aggregate in determining whether extreme hardship exists.” Matter of O-J-O-, 21 I&N Dec. 381, 383 (BIA 1996). The trier of fact considers the entire range of hardship factors in their totality and then determines “whether the combination of hardships takes the case beyond those hardships ordinarily associated with deportation.” (citing Matter of Ige, 20 I&N Dec. 880, 882 (BIA 1994).

In rendering this decision, the AAO has carefully considered all of the evidence in the record, including letters and the repossession order.

The AAO notes that the letters dated July 17, 2007, June 29, 2007, September 15, 2006, July 10, 2006, and March 20, 2006 do not have an English language translation. The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(b)(3) states:

(3) Translations. Any document containing foreign language submitted to USCIS shall be accompanied by a full English language translation which the translator has certified as complete and accurate, and by the translator's certification that he or she is competent to translate from the foreign language into English.

In that the letters are written completely in Spanish and have no translation, the letters will carry no weight in this proceeding.

Applying the Cervantes-Gonzalez factors here, extreme hardship to the applicant's spouse must be established in the event that she remains in the United States without the applicant, and alternatively, if she joins the applicant to live in Mexico. A qualifying relative is not required to reside outside of the United States based on the denial of an applicant's waiver request.

█ claims that she needs financial assistance from her husband because her income is not enough to pay her expenses. She states in a letter dated May 22, 2007 that she may lose her house due to economic problems and she states on appeal that her vehicle is to be repossessed, as shown in the order to repossess a vehicle. Although the AAO acknowledges that █ has experienced financial difficulties such as vehicle repossession due to no longer having income from her husband, her claim of not having enough income to pay her expenses lacks persuasion in that she has provided no corroborating evidence of her income such as wage statements and income tax records, or expenses such as utility, telephone, and mortgage invoices. In the absence of such documentation the AAO cannot determine whether her income is not sufficient to meet her financial obligations. Going on record without supporting documentary evidence is sufficient for purposes of meeting the burden of proof in these proceedings. Matter of Soffici, 22 I&N Dec. 158, 165 (Comm. 1998) (citing Matter of Treasure Craft of California, 14 I&N Dec. 190 (Reg. Comm. 1972).

█ conveys that the applicant needs to be in the United States for the family to be together. Family separation must be considered in determining hardship. See, e.g., Salcido-Salcido v. INS, 138 F.3d 1292, 1293 (9th Cir. 1998) ("the most important single hardship factor may be the separation of the alien from family living in the United States"). However, courts have found that family separation does not conclusively establish extreme hardship. In Hassan v. INS, 927 F.2d 465, 468 (9th Cir. 1991), the Ninth Circuit upheld the finding that deporting the applicant and separating him from his wife and child was not conclusive of extreme hardship as it "was not of such a nature which is unusual or beyond that which would normally be expected from the respondent's bar to admission." (citing Patel v. INS, 638 F.2d 1199, 1206 (9th Cir.1980) (severance of ties does not constitute extreme hardship). Perez v. INS, 96 F.3d 390, 392 (9th Cir. 1996), states that "[e]xtreme hardship" is hardship that is "unusual or beyond that which would normally be expected" upon deportation and "[t]he common results of deportation or exclusion are insufficient to prove extreme hardship." (citing Hassan v. INS, 927 F.2d 465, 468 (9th Cir.1991).

The AAO is mindful of and sympathetic to the emotional hardship that is endured as a result of family separation. After careful consideration of the record, we find that █ has not fully explained or provided corroborating documentation to show how the emotional hardship that she has experienced and will continue to experience as a result of separation from the applicant is “unusual or beyond that which would normally be expected” from an applicant's bar to admission to the United States. See Hassan and Perez, supra.

When the AAO considers the entire range of hardship factors in their totality in order to determine whether the combination of hardships is beyond those hardships ordinarily associated with removal, we find that [REDACTED] presentation of the vehicle repossession order, without documentation of her income and expenses, such as wage statements, income tax records, and invoices of household expense, is not sufficiently persuasive of financial hardship. Her claim of emotional hardship due to family separation has not been fully explained so as to convey that her hardship is “unusual or beyond that which would normally be expected” from an applicant's bar to admission to the United States. When the combination of hardship factors, which factors are [REDACTED] claim of financial and emotional hardship, are considered collectively, the AAO finds they fail to establish extreme hardship to [REDACTED] if she remained in the United States without her spouse.

There is no claim made that [REDACTED] would experience extreme hardship if she were to join her husband to live in Mexico.

The factors presented in this case, when considered collectively, do not constitute extreme hardship to a qualifying family member for purposes of relief under section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(v).

Because the applicant is statutorily ineligible for relief, no purpose is served in discussing whether he merits a waiver as a matter of discretion.

In proceedings for application for waiver of grounds of inadmissibility under section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act, the burden of establishing that the application merits approval remains entirely with the applicant. See section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. The applicant has not met that burden. Accordingly, the appeal will be dismissed.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed. The waiver application is denied.
