Perry Rhew
Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The waiver application was denied by the District Director, Mexico City (Ciudad Juarez), Mexico. The matter is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The applicant is a native and citizen of Mexico who was found to be inadmissible to the United States pursuant to section 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(II) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(i)(II), for having been unlawfully present in the United States for more than one year and seeking readmission within ten years of his last departure from the United States. The applicant is the fiancé of a U.S. citizen and he seeks a waiver of inadmissibility in order to reside in the United States.

In a decision dated November 14, 2006, the district director found that the applicant failed to establish extreme hardship to his qualifying relative as a result of his inadmissibility and did not warrant the favorable exercise of the Secretary's discretion. The application was denied accordingly.

In a Notice of Appeal to the AAO dated December 13, 2006, counsel states that the district director abused his discretion in denying the applicant's waiver application. Counsel states that the applicant did not accrue unlawful presence because he was in the United States as a student on an F-1 visa. He states that his U.S. citizen fiancée will suffer extreme hardship if the waiver is not granted.

The AAO notes that a search of United States Citizenship and Immigration Services' records does not support the statements made by counsel regarding the applicant having entered the United States on an F-1 student visa. Furthermore, the applicant filed and signed a waiver application stating that he entered the United States without inspection in August 1995 and remained in the United States until May 2000. Therefore, the applicant accrued unlawful presence from April 1, 1997, the date the unlawful presence provisions were enacted until May 2005. In applying for a K nonimmigrant visa, the applicant is seeking admission within ten years of his May 2000 departure from the United States. Therefore, the applicant is inadmissible to the United States under section 212(a)(9)(B)(II) of the Act for being unlawfully present in the United States for a period of more than one year.

Section 212(a)(9)(B) of the Act provides, in pertinent part:

(B) Aliens Unlawfully Present.-

(i) In general. - Any alien (other than an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence) who-

(II) has been unlawfully present in the United States for one year or more, and who again seeks admission within 10 years of the date of such alien's departure or removal from the United States, is inadmissible.

(v) Waiver. – The Attorney General [now the Secretary of Homeland Security (Secretary)] has sole discretion to waive clause (i) in the case of an immigrant who is the spouse or son or daughter of a United States citizen or of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence, if it is established to the satisfaction of the Attorney General [Secretary] that the refusal of admission to such immigrant alien would result in extreme hardship to the citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of such alien.

If an applicant seeking a K nonimmigrant visa is inadmissible, the applicant's ability to seek a waiver of inadmissibility is governed by 8 C.F.R. § 212.7(a), which provides, in pertinent part:

(a) General—(1) Filing procedure—(i) Immigrant visa or K nonimmigrant visa applicant. An applicant for an immigrant visa or “K” nonimmigrant visa who is inadmissible and seeks a waiver of inadmissibility shall file an application on Form I-601 at the consular office considering the visa application. Upon determining that the alien is admissible except for the grounds for which a waiver is sought, the consular officer shall transmit the Form I-601 to the Service for decision.

The AAO notes that section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act provides that a waiver of inadmissibility is dependent first upon a showing that the bar to admission imposes an extreme hardship on a qualifying family member. In this case, the relative that qualifies is the applicant's fiancée. Hardship to the applicant is not considered under the statute and will be considered only insofar as it results in hardship to a qualifying relative. If extreme hardship is established, the Secretary then assesses whether an exercise of discretion is warranted.

In Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, 22 I&N Dec. 560, 565-66 (BIA 1999), the BIA provided a list of factors it deemed relevant in determining whether an alien has established extreme hardship to a qualifying relative. The factors include the presence of a lawful permanent resident or United States citizen spouse or parent in this country; the qualifying relative's family ties outside the United States; the conditions in the country or countries to which the qualifying relative would relocate and the extent of the qualifying relative's ties in such countries; the financial impact of departure from this country; and significant conditions of health, particularly when tied to an unavailability of suitable medical care in the country to which the qualifying relative would relocate. The BIA added that not all of the foregoing factors need be analyzed in any given case and emphasized that the list of factors was not an exclusive list. See id.

Relevant factors, though not extreme in themselves, must be considered in the aggregate in determining whether extreme hardship exists. In each case, the trier of fact must consider the entire range of factors concerning hardship in their totality and determine whether the combination of hardships takes the case beyond those hardships ordinarily associated with deportation. Matter of O-J-O-, 21 I&N Dec. 381, 383 (BIA 1996). (Citations omitted).

The AAO notes that in Salcido-Salcido v. INS, 138 F.3d 1292, 1293 (9th Cir. 1998), the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals held that, “the most important single hardship factor may be the separation of the alien from family living in the United States”, and that, “[w]hen the BIA fails to give considerable, if not predominant, weight to the hardship that will result from family separation, it has abused its discretion.” (Citations omitted). Although the present case did not arise in the Ninth Circuit, separation of family will be given appropriate weight in the assessment of hardship factors.

The AAO notes further, however, that U.S. court decisions have repeatedly held that the common results of deportation or exclusion are insufficient to prove extreme hardship. See Hassan v. INS, 927 F.2d 465, 468 (9th Cir. 1991). For example, in Matter of Pilch, 21 I&N Dec. 627 (BIA 1996), the BIA held that emotional hardship caused by severing family and community ties is a common result of deportation and does not constitute extreme hardship. In Perez v. INS, 96 F.3d 390 (9th Cir. 1996), the Court defined “extreme hardship” as hardship that was unusual or beyond that which would normally be expected upon deportation. The Court emphasized that the common results of deportation are insufficient to prove extreme hardship. Moreover, the U.S. Supreme Court held in INS v. Jong Ha Wang, 450 U.S. 139 (1981), that the mere showing of economic detriment to qualifying family members is insufficient to warrant a finding of extreme hardship.

An analysis under Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez is appropriate. The AAO notes that extreme hardship to a qualifying relative must be established in the event that he or she accompanies the applicant and in the event that he or she remains in the United States, as a qualifying relative is not required to reside outside of the United States based on the denial of the applicant’s waiver request.

The record of hardship includes a letter from the applicant’s spouse and phone records showing telephone contact between the applicant and his fiancée.

In an undated letter the applicant’s fiancée states that she is suffering financial and personal hardship as a result of the applicant’s inadmissibility. She states that she owns an elder care business in rural Oregon and traveling to Mexico two to three times a month is very expensive and she has to hire someone to manage her business. She states that it is also physically exhausting and her telephone bills are very expensive. The applicant’s fiancée states that the applicant is trained as a caregiver and will help her with her business upon his return to the United States. The AAO notes that the record does not contain any documentation to support the assertions regarding the applicant's fiancée owning a business. The applicant's fiancée also states that she is deeply in love with the applicant and that they share the same cultural background and common interests.

The AAO recognizes that the applicant's spouse will endure hardship as a result of the applicant's inadmissibility. However, the current record does not establish that the applicant's fiancée's hardship rises to the level of extreme hardship. Furthermore, the record does not address the issue of whether the applicant's fiancée will suffer extreme hardship as a result of relocating to Mexico to be with the applicant. Going on record without supporting documentary evidence is not sufficient for purposes of meeting the burden of proof in these proceedings. Matter of Soffici, 22 I&N Dec. 158, 165 (Comm. 1998) (citing Matter of Treasure Craft of California, 14 I&N Dec. 190 (Reg. Comm. 1972)). The applicant must submit documentation to support any claims of hardship.

A review of the documentation in the record fails to establish the existence of extreme hardship to the applicant's fiancée caused by the applicant's inadmissibility to the United States. Having found the applicant statutorily ineligible for relief, no purpose would be served in discussing whether she merits a waiver as a matter of discretion.

In proceedings for application for waiver of grounds of inadmissibility under section 212(a)(9)(B) of the Act, the burden of proving eligibility remains entirely with the applicant. See section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. Here, the applicant has not met that burden. Accordingly, the appeal will be dismissed.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
