

identifying data deleted to prevent clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy

U.S. Department of Homeland Security
U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services
Office of Administrative Appeals MS 2090
Washington, DC 20529-2090

U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services

PUBLIC COPY

H6

FILE:

Office: MEXICO CITY, MEXICO
(CIUDAD JUAREZ)

Date: OCT 15 2010

IN RE:

Applicant:

APPLICATION:

Immigrant Application for Waiver of Grounds of Inadmissibility pursuant to section 212(a)(9)(B) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)

ON BEHALF OF APPLICANT:

SELF-REPRESENTED

INSTRUCTIONS:

Enclosed please find the decision of the Administrative Appeals Office in your case. All of the documents related to this matter have been returned to the office that originally decided your case. Please be advised that any further inquiry that you might have concerning your case must be made to that office.

Thank you,

Tariq Syed
for

Perry Rhew

Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The waiver application was denied by the Acting District Director, Mexico City, Mexico. The matter is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be sustained.

The applicant is a native and citizen of Mexico who was found to be inadmissible to the United States under section 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(II) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(i)(II), for having been unlawfully present in the United States for more than one year and seeking readmission within ten years of his last departure from the United States. The applicant is married to a United States citizen. He seeks a waiver of inadmissibility in order to reside in the United States with his spouse and child.

The Acting District Director found that, based on the evidence in the record, the applicant had failed to establish extreme hardship to his qualifying relative. The application was denied accordingly. Decision of the Acting District Director, dated April 15, 2008.

On appeal, the applicant's spouse asserts that extreme hardship applies in this case. Form I-290B, Notice of Appeal or Motion.

In support of this assertion the record includes, but is not limited to, statements from the applicant; a police clearance letter for the applicant; a medical letter for the applicant's spouse; medical records for the child of the applicant's spouse; earnings statements for the applicant's spouse; tax statements for the applicant's spouse; and a W-2 Form for the applicant's spouse. The entire record was reviewed and considered in rendering a decision on the appeal.

Section 212(a)(9)(B) of the Act provides, in pertinent part:

(B) Aliens Unlawfully Present.-

(i) In general. - Any alien (other than an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence) who-

.....

(II) has been unlawfully present in the United States for one year or more, and who again seeks admission within 10 years of the date of such alien's departure or removal from the United States, is inadmissible.

(iii) Exceptions

(I) Minors

No period of time in which an alien is under 18 years of age shall be taken into account in determining the period of unlawful presence in the United States under clause (i).

(v) Waiver. – The Attorney General [now the Secretary of Homeland Security (Secretary)] has sole discretion to waive clause (i) in the case of an immigrant who is the spouse or son or daughter of a United States citizen or of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence, if it is established to the satisfaction of the Attorney General [Secretary] that the refusal of admission to such immigrant alien would result in extreme hardship to the citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of such alien.

In the present case, the record indicates that the applicant entered the United States without inspection in November 1999 and voluntarily departed in August 2007, returning to Mexico. Consular Memorandum, American Consulate General, Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, dated August 27, 2007. The applicant was born on April 27, 1985. Birth certificate for the applicant. The applicant, therefore, accrued unlawful presence from April 27, 2003, the date of his eighteenth birthday, until he departed the United States on August 27, 2007. In applying for an immigrant visa, the applicant is seeking admission within ten years of his August 27, 2007 departure from the United States. The applicant is, therefore, inadmissible to the United States under section 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(II) of the Act for being unlawfully present in the United States for a period of more than one year.¹

Section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act provides for a waiver of section 212(a)(9)(B)(i) inadmissibility as follows:

The Attorney General [now Secretary of Homeland Security] has sole discretion to waive clause (i) in the case of an immigrant who is the spouse or son or daughter of a United States citizen or of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence, if it is established . . . that the refusal of admission to such immigrant alien would result in extreme hardship to the citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of such alien.

¹ The AAO also observes that in 2004 the applicant was arrested for Resisting an Officer – Obstruction without Violence, Forgery of – Alter License Plate Validation Sticker, Fraud – Impersonation – Giving False Name, and Probation Violation. FBI sheet. The AAO notes that the record does not include criminal records and court dispositions for the arrests. The AAO will not analyze whether the applicant's crimes constitute crimes involving moral turpitude and render him inadmissible under section 212(a)(2)(A) of the Act. The AAO notes that the extreme hardship analysis to the applicant's spouse under section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act would be the same as that conducted under section 212(h). The AAO would find that a section 212(h) waiver would be met if a section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) waiver is met.

A waiver of inadmissibility under section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act is dependent on a showing that the bar to admission imposes extreme hardship on a qualifying relative, which includes the U.S. citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of the applicant. Hardship to the applicant or children can be considered only insofar as it results in hardship to a qualifying relative. The applicant's spouse is the only qualifying relative in this case. If extreme hardship to a qualifying relative is established, the applicant is statutorily eligible for a waiver, and USCIS then assesses whether a favorable exercise of discretion is warranted. See Matter of Mendez-Morales, 21 I&N Dec. 296, 301 (BIA 1996).

As a qualifying relative is not required to depart the United States as a consequence of an applicant's inadmissibility, two distinct factual scenarios exist should a waiver application be denied: either the qualifying relative will join the applicant to reside abroad or the qualifying relative will remain in the United States. Ascertaining the actual course of action that will be taken is complicated by the fact that an applicant may easily assert a plan for the qualifying relative to relocate abroad or to remain in the United States depending on which scenario presents the greatest prospective hardship, even though no intention exists to carry out the alleged plan in reality. Cf. Matter of Ige, 20 I&N Dec. 880, 885 (BIA 1994) (addressing separation of minor child from both parents applying for suspension of deportation). Thus, we interpret the statutory language of the various waiver provisions in section 212 of the Act to require an applicant to establish extreme hardship to his or her qualifying relative(s) under both possible scenarios. To endure the hardship of separation when extreme hardship could be avoided by joining the applicant abroad, or to endure the hardship of relocation when extreme hardship could be avoided by remaining in the United States, is a matter of choice and not the result of removal or inadmissibility. As the Board of Immigration Appeals stated in Matter of Ige:

[W]e consider the critical issue . . . to be whether a child would suffer extreme hardship if he accompanied his parent abroad. If, as in this case, no hardship would ensue, then the fact that the child might face hardship if left in the United States would be the result of parental choice, not the parent's deportation.

Id. See also Matter of Pilch, 21 I&N Dec. 627, 632-33 (BIA 1996)

Extreme hardship is "not a definable term of fixed and inflexible content or meaning," but "necessarily depends upon the facts and circumstances peculiar to each case." Matter of Hwang, 10 I&N Dec. 448, 451 (BIA 1964). In Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, the Board provided a list of factors it deemed relevant in determining whether an alien has established extreme hardship to a qualifying relative. 22 I&N Dec. 560, 565 (BIA 1999). The factors include the presence of a lawful permanent resident or United States citizen spouse or parent in this country; the qualifying relative's family ties outside the United States; the conditions in the country or countries to which the qualifying relative would relocate and the extent of the qualifying relative's ties in such countries; the financial impact of departure from this country; and significant conditions of health, particularly when tied to an unavailability of suitable medical care in the country to which the qualifying relative would relocate. Id. The Board added that not all of the foregoing factors need be analyzed in any given case and emphasized that the list of factors was not exclusive. Id. at 566.

The Board has also held that the common or typical results of deportation, removal and inadmissibility do not constitute extreme hardship, and has listed certain individual hardship factors considered common rather than extreme. These factors include: economic disadvantage, loss of current employment, inability to maintain one's present standard of living, inability to pursue a chosen profession, separation from family members, severing community ties, cultural readjustment after living in the United States for many years, cultural adjustment of qualifying relatives who have never lived outside the United States, inferior economic and educational opportunities in the foreign country, or inferior medical facilities in the foreign country. See generally Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, 22 I&N Dec. at 568; Matter of Pilch, 21 I&N Dec. at 631-32; Matter of Ige, 20 I&N Dec. at 883; Matter of Ngai, 19 I&N Dec. 245, 246-47 (Comm'r 1984); Matter of Kim, 15 I&N Dec. 88, 89-90 (BIA 1974); Matter of Shaughnessy, 12 I&N Dec. 810, 813 (BIA 1968).

However, though hardships may not be extreme when considered abstractly or individually, the Board has made it clear that "[r]elevant factors, though not extreme in themselves, must be considered in the aggregate in determining whether extreme hardship exists." Matter of O-J-O, 21 I&N Dec. 381, 383 (BIA 1996) (quoting Matter of Ige, 20 I&N Dec. at 882). The adjudicator "must consider the entire range of factors concerning hardship in their totality and determine whether the combination of hardships takes the case beyond those hardships ordinarily associated with deportation." Id.

We observe that the actual hardship associated with an abstract hardship factor such as family separation; economic disadvantage, cultural readjustment, et cetera, differs in nature and severity depending on the unique circumstances of each case, as does the cumulative hardship a qualifying relative experiences as a result of aggregated individual hardships. See, e.g., In re Bing Chih Kao and Mei Tsui Lin, 23 I&N Dec. 45, 51 (BIA 2001) (distinguishing Matter of Pilch regarding hardship faced by qualifying relatives on the basis of variations in the length of residence in the United States and the ability to speak the language of the country to which they would relocate).

Family separation, for instance, has been found to be a common result of inadmissibility or removal in some cases. See Matter of Shaughnessy, 12 I&N Dec. at 813. Nevertheless, family ties are to be considered in analyzing hardship. See Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, 22 I&N Dec. at 565-66. The question of whether family separation is the ordinary result of inadmissibility or removal may depend on the nature of family relationship considered. For example, in Matter of Shaughnessy, the Board considered the scenario of parents being separated from their soon-to-be adult son, finding that this separation would not result in extreme hardship to the parents. Id. at 811-12; see also U.S. v. Arrieta, 224 F.3d 1076, 1082 (9th Cir. 2000) ("Mr. Arrieta was not a spouse, but a son and brother. It was evident from the record that the effect of the deportation order would be separation rather than relocation."). In Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, the Board considered the scenario of the respondent's spouse accompanying him to Mexico, finding that she would not experience extreme hardship from losing "physical proximity to her family" in the United States. 22 I&N Dec. at 566-67.

The decision in Cervantes-Gonzalez reflects the norm that spouses reside with one another and establish a life together such that separating from one another is likely to result in substantial hardship. It is common for both spouses to relocate abroad if one of them is not allowed to stay in the United States, which typically results in separation from other family members living in the United States. Other decisions reflect the expectation that minor children will remain with their parents, upon whom they usually depend for financial and emotional support. See, e.g., Matter of Ige, 20 I&N Dec. at 886 (“[I]t is generally preferable for children to be brought up by their parents.”). Therefore, the most important single hardship factor may be separation, particularly where spouses and minor children are concerned. Salcido-Salcido, 138 F.3d at 1293 (quoting Contreras-Buenfil v. INS, 712 F.2d 401, 403 (9th Cir. 1983)); Cerrillo-Perez, 809 F.2d at 1422.

Regardless of the type of family relationship involved, the hardship resulting from family separation is determined based on the actual impact of separation on an applicant, and all hardships must be considered in determining whether the combination of hardships takes the case beyond the consequences ordinarily associated with removal or inadmissibility. Matter of O-J-O, 21 I&N Dec. at 383. Nevertheless, though we require an applicant to show that a qualifying relative would experience extreme hardship both in the event of relocation and in the event of separation, in analyzing the latter scenario, we give considerable, if not predominant, weight to the hardship of separation itself, particularly in cases involving the separation of spouses from one another and/or minor children from a parent. Salcido-Salcido, 138 F.3d at 1293.

If the applicant's spouse joins the applicant in Mexico, the applicant needs to establish that his spouse will suffer extreme hardship. The applicant's spouse was born in the United States. Approved Form I-130, Petition for Alien Relative. The applicant's parents were born and reside in the United States. Form G-325A, Biographic Information sheet, for the applicant's spouse. At the time the Form I-601 waiver application was submitted, the applicant's spouse was pregnant with twins, and was diagnosed as having diabetes and epilepsy. Statement from [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] Statement from the applicant, undated. The applicant's spouse also has a child from a previous relationship who has been diagnosed with an upper respiratory infection and methemoglobinemia, and has received care in the United States. Medical records for the child of the applicant's spouse, dated February 11, 1997. The AAO notes that the medical documentation included in the record for the child is from 1997, and the record does not include documentation regarding the child's current state of health. While the record does not include documentation regarding the availability and adequacy of healthcare in Mexico, the AAO acknowledges the documented health conditions of the applicant's spouse and the treatment she has received in the United States. The AAO recognizes that a relocation to Mexico would cause a disruption in the healthcare she has received. The applicant notes that his spouse cares for his mother-in-law, as she has medical conditions which include heart disease, diabetes, and the first phase of dementia. Statement from the applicant, undated. While the AAO acknowledges these statements, it notes that the record fails to include any documentation from a licensed healthcare professional regarding the mother-in-law of the applicant. Going on record without supporting documentary evidence will not meet the burden of proof of this proceeding. See Matter of Soffici, 22 I&N Dec. 158, 165 (Comm. 1998)(citing Matter of Treasure Craft of California, 14 I&N Dec. 190 (Reg. Comm. 1972)). Nevertheless, when looking at the aforementioned factors, particularly the applicant's spouse's lack of familial and cultural ties to Mexico, her documented medical conditions, her caring for a child in a foreign country, and the separation from her mother, the AAO finds that the applicant has demonstrated extreme hardship to his spouse if she were to reside in Mexico.

If the applicant's spouse resides in the United States, the applicant needs to establish that his spouse will suffer extreme hardship. As previously noted, the applicant's spouse was born in the United States. Approved Form I-130, Petition for Alien Relative. The applicant's parents were born and reside in the United States. Form G-325A, Biographic Information sheet, for the applicant's spouse. The applicant states that his spouse is assisting him with [REDACTED] a business they started where workers clear properties with excessive debris or trees. Statement from the applicant, undated. His spouse lines up the jobs while he provides the manual labor. Id. He notes that his spouse is struggling until he returns and has indicated that the money they had in reserve is almost gone. Id. If he does not return soon to complete the jobs lined up, he and his family will have no income and their bills, as well as the medication for his spouse, mother and father, will not be paid. Id. While the AAO acknowledges these statements, it notes that the record fails to include documentation, such as mortgage/rent statements, utility bills, credit card statements, and medication statements, regarding the expenses of the applicant's spouse. The record also fails to include documentation regarding the existence of [REDACTED]. Going on record without supporting documentary evidence will not meet the burden of proof of this proceeding. See Matter of Soffici, 22 I&N Dec. 158, 165 (Comm. 1998)(citing Matter of Treasure Craft of California, 14 I&N Dec. 190 (Reg. Comm. 1972)). Additionally, the AAO observes the record includes a W-2 Form for the applicant's spouse showing her employer to be [REDACTED] and her earnings to be [REDACTED] for 2003. W-2 Form for the applicant's spouse; See also tax statement and earnings statement for the applicant's spouse. At the time the Form I-601 waiver application was submitted, the applicant's spouse was [REDACTED]. Statement from [REDACTED] [REDACTED] dated August 2, 2007; Statement from the applicant, undated. The AAO acknowledges the documented health conditions of the applicant's spouse and notes that as of August 2, 2007 the applicant's spouse was to minimize her work activities and have at least six to eight hours of extra bed rest a day. Statement from [REDACTED] [REDACTED] dated August 2, 2007. As previously noted, the applicant's spouse cares for a child from a previous relationship: Medical records for the child of the applicant's spouse, dated February 11, 1997. When looking at the aforementioned factors, particularly the documented health conditions of the applicant's spouse, her having to minimize her work activities due to her health conditions, and her being a single parent who is pregnant with twins, the AAO finds that the applicant has demonstrated extreme hardship to his spouse if she were to remain in the United States.

The AAO additionally finds that the applicant merits a waiver of inadmissibility as a matter of discretion. In discretionary matters, the alien bears the burden of proving eligibility in terms of equities in the United States which are not outweighed by adverse factors. See Matter of T-S-Y-, 7 I&N Dec. 582 (BIA 1957).

The adverse factors in the present case are the applicant's prior unlawful presence for which he now seeks a waiver and periods of unauthorized employment. The favorable and mitigating factors are his United States citizen spouse, the extreme hardship to his spouse if he were refused admission and his supportive relationship with his spouse and child as documented in the record.

The AAO finds that, although the immigration violations committed by the applicant are serious and cannot be condoned, when taken together, the favorable factors in the present case outweigh the adverse factors, such that a favorable exercise of discretion is warranted.

In proceedings for application for waiver of grounds of inadmissibility under section 212(a)(9)(B) of the Act, the burden of proving eligibility remains entirely with the applicant. See section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. Here, the applicant has met that burden. Accordingly, the appeal will be sustained.

ORDER: The appeal is sustained.