

Identifying data deleted to prevent clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy

U.S. Department of Homeland Security
U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services
Office of Administrative Appeals
20 Massachusetts Ave. N.W. MS 2090
Washington, D.C. 20529-2090
U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services

PUBLIC COPY

tlc

DATE: MAY 10 2012

OFFICE: MEXICO CITY, MEXICO

FILE:

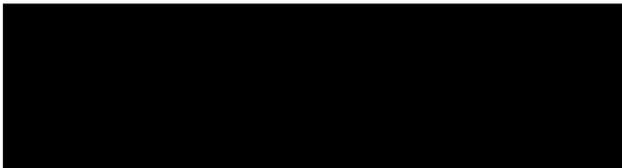

IN RE:

Applicant:

APPLICATION:

Application for Waiver of Grounds of Inadmissibility under section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(v)

ON BEHALF OF APPLICANT:

INSTRUCTIONS:

Enclosed please find the decision of the Administrative Appeals Office in your case. All of the documents related to this matter have been returned to the office that originally decided your case. Please be advised that any further inquiry that you might have concerning your case must be made to that office.

If you believe the law was inappropriately applied by us in reaching our decision, or you have additional information that you wish to have considered, you may file a motion to reconsider or a motion to reopen. The specific requirements for filing such a request can be found at 8 C.F.R. § 103.5. All motions must be submitted to the office that originally decided your case by filing a Form I-290B, Notice of Appeal or Motion, with a fee of $630. Please be aware that 8 C.F.R. § 103.5(a)(1)(i) requires that any motion must be filed within 30 days of the decision that the motion seeks to reconsider or reopen.

Thank you,

Perry Rhew

Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The waiver application was denied by the Field Office Director, Mexico City, Mexico, and is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The record reflects that the applicant is a native and citizen of Mexico who was found to be inadmissible to the United States pursuant to section 212(a)(9)(B)(i) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(i), for having been unlawfully present in the United States for more than one year and seeking admission within 10 years of her last departure from the United States. The applicant is the spouse of a Lawful Permanent Resident and is the beneficiary of an approved Petition for Alien Relative (Form I-130). The applicant, through counsel, does not contest this finding of inadmissibility. Rather, she seeks a waiver of inadmissibility pursuant to section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1182(a)(9)(B)(v), in order to reside with her spouse, adult daughters, sons, and children in the United States.

The Field Office Director concluded that the applicant failed to establish that extreme hardship would be imposed on a qualifying relative and denied the Application for Waiver of Grounds of Inadmissibility (Form I-601) accordingly. See Decision of the Field Office Director, dated January 14, 2010.

The record includes, but is not limited to: brief from counsel; letters of support; identity, financial, medical, and school documents; an accident report; country conditions information; and photographs. The entire record was reviewed and considered in rendering a decision on the appeal.

Section 212(a)(9) of the Act provides, in pertinent part:

(B) ALIENS UNLAWFULLY PRESENT.-

(i) In General.- Any alien (other than an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence) who-

...

(II) has been unlawfully present in the United States for one year or more, and who again seeks admission within 10 years of the date of such alien's departure or removal from the United States, is inadmissible.

...

(v) Waiver.-The Attorney General [now the Secretary of Homeland Security (Secretary)] has sole discretion to waive clause (i) in the case of an immigrant who is the spouse or son or daughter of a United States citizen or of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence, if it is established to the satisfaction of the Attorney General [Secretary] that the refusal of admission to such immigrant alien would result in extreme hardship to the citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of such alien. No court shall have jurisdiction to review a decision or action by the Attorney General [Secretary] regarding a waiver under this clause.

The record establishes that the applicant most recently entered the United States without inspection by U.S. immigration officials in or around February 1994 and remained until in or around February 2008, when she voluntarily departed to Mexico. The applicant accrued unlawful presence from April 1, 1997, the effective date of the unlawful presence provisions in the Act, until February 2008, a period in excess of one year. As the applicant is seeking admission within 10 years of departure, she is inadmissible pursuant to section 212(a)(9)(B)(i)(II) of the Act.

A waiver of inadmissibility under section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act is dependent on a showing that the bar to admission imposes extreme hardship on a qualifying relative, which includes the U.S. citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of the applicant. Hardship to the applicant or the applicant's adult daughters, sons, and children can be considered only insofar as it results in hardship to a qualifying relative. The applicant's husband is the only qualifying relative in this case. If extreme hardship to a qualifying relative is established, the applicant is statutorily eligible for a waiver, and USCIS then assesses whether a favorable exercise of discretion is warranted. See Matter of Mendez-Morales, 21 I&N Dec. 296, 301 (BIA 1996).

Extreme hardship is "not a definable term of fixed and inflexible content or meaning," but "necessarily depends upon the facts and circumstances peculiar to each case." Matter of Hwang, 10 I&N Dec. 448, 451 (BIA 1964). In Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, the Board provided a list of factors it deemed relevant in determining whether an alien has established extreme hardship to a qualifying relative. 22 I&N Dec. 560, 565 (BIA 1999). The factors include the presence of a lawful permanent resident or United States citizen spouse or parent in this country; the qualifying relative's family ties outside the United States; the conditions in the country or countries to which the qualifying relative would relocate and the extent of the qualifying relative's ties in such countries; the financial impact of departure from this country; and significant conditions of health, particularly when tied to an unavailability of suitable medical care in the country to which the qualifying relative would relocate. Id. The Board added that not all of the foregoing factors need be analyzed in any given case and emphasized that the list of factors was not exclusive. Id. at 566.

The Board has also held that the common or typical results of removal and inadmissibility do not constitute extreme hardship, and has listed certain individual hardship factors considered common rather than extreme. These factors include: economic disadvantage, loss of current employment, inability to maintain one's present standard of living, inability to pursue a chosen profession, separation from family members, severing community ties, cultural readjustment after living in the United States for many years, cultural adjustment of qualifying relatives who have never lived outside the United States, inferior economic and educational opportunities in the foreign country, or inferior medical facilities in the foreign country. See generally Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, 22 I&N Dec. at 568; Matter of Pilch, 21 I&N Dec. 627, 632-33 (BIA 1996); Matter of Ige, 20 I&N

Dec. 880, 883 (BIA 1994); Matter of Ngai, 19 I&N Dec. 245, 246-47 (Comm'r 1984); Matter of Kim, 15 I&N Dec. 88, 89-90 (BIA 1974); Matter of Shaughnessy, 12 I&N Dec. 810, 813 (BIA 1968).

However, though hardships may not be extreme when considered abstractly or individually, the Board has made it clear that “[r]elevant factors, though not extreme in themselves, must be considered in the aggregate in determining whether extreme hardship exists.” Matter of O-J-O-, 21 I&N Dec. 381, 383 (BIA 1996) (quoting Matter of Ige, 20 I&N Dec. at 882). The adjudicator “must consider the entire range of factors concerning hardship in their totality and determine whether the combination of hardships takes the case beyond those hardships ordinarily associated with deportation.” Id.

The actual hardship associated with an abstract hardship factor such as family separation, economic disadvantage, cultural readjustment, et cetera, differs in nature and severity depending on the unique circumstances of each case, as does the cumulative hardship a qualifying relative experiences as a result of aggregated individual hardships. See, e.g., Matter of Bing Chih Kao and Mei Tsui Lin, 23 I&N Dec. 45, 51 (BIA 2001) (distinguishing Matter of Pilch regarding hardship faced by qualifying relatives on the basis of variations in the length of residence in the United States and the ability to speak the language of the country to which they would relocate). For example, though family separation has been found to be a common result of inadmissibility or removal, separation from family living in the United States can also be the most important single hardship factor in considering hardship in the aggregate. See Salcido-Salcido, 138 F.3d at 1293 (quoting Contreras-Buenfil v. INS, 712 F.2d 401, 403 (9th Cir. 1983)); but see Matter of Ngai, 19 I&N Dec. at 247 (separation of spouse and children from applicant not extreme hardship due to conflicting evidence in the record and because applicant and spouse had been voluntarily separated from one another for 28 years). Therefore, we consider the totality of the circumstances in determining whether denial of admission would result in extreme hardship to a qualifying relative.

Counsel contends that the applicant’s spouse would suffer extreme hardship in the applicant’s absence as the spouse would suddenly be responsible for their children’s wellbeing, including schooling and healthcare. Counsel also contends that the applicant’s children would suffer extreme emotional hardship as the adult daughters would no longer be able to care for their younger siblings. And, the adult daughters, sons, and children would suffer financial hardship as the applicant has been unable to make enough money to support both households since she has been in Mexico.

The spouse indicates that he would like to have a relationship with his children, but the applicant’s presence would be necessary as a bridge given that the applicant and the two oldest daughters have been the caretakers and providers for the family and not him. He further discusses the children’s mental health and physical conditions and how they need the applicant’s presence to assist with these matters. The adult daughters, sons, and children also discuss their emotional and physical states since the applicant’s absence.

The evidence on the record is not sufficient to establish that the applicant's spouse would suffer extreme hardship in the applicant's absence. Although the record indicates that the applicant and the spouse remain legally married, the applicant indicated during her Consular interview that the relationship between her and the spouse ended around 1993. And, prior to leaving for Mexico in February 2008, the applicant lived in Grand Prairie, Texas, and the spouse has been residing in Oklahoma, Texas.

Additionally, the AAO notes the concerns for the emotional and financial hardship that the applicant's adult daughters, sons, and children have been experiencing in the applicant's absence. The AAO notes that the applicant's spouse admits that his oldest children do a better job raising the younger children than he would. As such, the AAO finds that even when this hardship is considered in the aggregate, the record fails to establish that the applicant's spouse will suffer extreme hardship as a result of separation from the applicant.

Counsel contends that the applicant's spouse would suffer extreme hardship if he were to relocate to Mexico because the spouse has lived in the United States for over 20 years, and he would not relocate to be with the applicant anyway as they have been living separately. Counsel also contends that although Matter of Monreal, 23 I&N Dec.56 (BIA 2001) is a case involving exceptional and extremely unusual hardship, the Board referenced in its decision that fewer opportunities existed in Mexico; and therefore, could be evidence of extreme hardship. Counsel further contends that the applicant's adult daughters, sons, and children's transition to living in Mexico would be difficult as they are of an age for which it would be difficult to adapt to the education, medical, and economic changes and, the applicant would be unable to adequately support them.

The record is not sufficient to establish that the applicant's spouse would suffer extreme hardship if he were to relocate to Mexico because of the applicant's inadmissibility. As noted previously, the applicant and spouse have lived separately for years, and counsel states that the spouse will not relocate to Mexico to be with the applicant. Moreover, the record indicates that the spouse is a native of Mexico, but does not include any evidence whether he maintains any familial, social, or economic ties there. The record fails to establish that the applicant's spouse will suffer extreme hardship as a result of relocation.

In this case, the record does not contain sufficient evidence to show that the hardship faced by the qualifying relative, considered in the aggregate, rises beyond the common results of removal or inadmissibility to the level of extreme hardship. The AAO therefore finds that the applicant has failed to establish extreme hardship to her Lawful Permanent Resident spouse as required under section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act. As the applicant has not established extreme hardship to a qualifying family member, no purpose would be served in determining whether the applicant merits a waiver as a matter of discretion.

In proceedings for application for waiver of grounds of inadmissibility under section 212(a)(9)(B)(v) of the Act, the burden of proving eligibility remains entirely with the applicant.

Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. Here, the applicant has not met that burden. Accordingly, the appeal will be dismissed.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.