DISCUSSION: The application for temporary resident status pursuant to the terms of the settlement agreements reached in Catholic Social Services, Inc., et al., v. Ridge, et al., CIV. NO. S-86-1343-LKK (E.D. Cal) January 23, 2004, and Felicity Mary Newman, et al., v. United States Immigration and Citizenship Services, et al., CIV. NO. 87-4757-WDK (C.D. Cal) February 17, 2004 (CSS/Newman Settlement Agreements), was denied by the Director, Houston. The decision is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The applicant submitted a Form I-687, Application for Status as a Temporary Resident under Section 245A of the Immigration and Nationality Act (Act), and a Form I-687 Supplement, CSS/Newman Class Membership Worksheet. The director determined that the applicant had not established by a preponderance of the evidence that he had continuously resided in the United States in an unlawful status for the duration of the requisite period, and that the evidence submitted by him did not establish his eligibility for the immigration benefit sought. The director denied the application, finding that the applicant had not met his burden of proof and was, therefore, not eligible to adjust to temporary resident status pursuant to the terms of the CSS/Newman Settlement Agreements. Specifically, the director noted that the applicant submitted affidavits in support of his application but that those affidavits, and other evidence of record, fails to establish fail to establish his residence in the United States for the duration of the requisite period.

On appeal, counsel submits a brief stating that the applicant has established his eligibility for the immigration benefit sought.

An applicant for temporary resident status must establish entry into the United States before January 1, 1982, and continuous residence in the United States in an unlawful status since such date and through the date the application is filed. Section 245A(a)(2) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1255a(a)(2). The applicant must also establish that he or she has been continuously physically present in the United States since November 6, 1986. Section 245(a)(3) of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1255a(a)(3). The regulations clarify that the applicant must have been physically present in the United States from November 6, 1986 until the date of filing the application. 8 C.F.R. § 245a.2(b)(1).

For purposes of establishing residence and physical presence under the CSS/Newman Settlement Agreements, the term “until the date of filing” in 8 C.F.R. § 245a.2(b)(1) means until the date the applicant attempted to file a completed Form I-687 application and fee or was caused not to timely file during the original legalization application period of May 5, 1987 to May 4, 1988. CSS Settlement Agreement paragraph 11 at page 6; Newman Settlement Agreement paragraph 11 at page 10.

The applicant has the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that he or she has resided in the United States for the requisite period, is admissible to the United States under the provisions of section 245A of the Act, and is otherwise eligible for adjustment of status. The inference to be drawn from the documentation provided shall depend on the extent of the documentation, its credibility and amenability to verification. 8 C.F.R. § 245a.2(d)(5). To meet his or her burden of proof, an applicant must provide evidence of eligibility apart from his or her own testimony, and the sufficiency of all evidence produced by the applicant will be judged according to its probative value and credibility. 8 C.F.R. § 245a.2(d)(6).

Although the regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 245a.2(d)(3) provides an illustrative list of contemporaneous documents that an applicant may submit in support of his or her claim of continuous residence in the United States in an unlawful status since prior to January 1, 1982, the submission of any other relevant document is permitted pursuant to 8 C.F.R. § 245a.2(d)(3)(vi)(L).

The “preponderance of the evidence” standard requires that the evidence demonstrate that the applicant's claim is “probably true,” where the determination of “truth” is made based on the factual circumstances of each individual case. Matter of E-M-, 20 I&N Dec. 77, 79-80 (Comm. 1989). In evaluating the evidence, Matter of E-M- also stated that “[t]ruth is to be determined not by the quantity of evidence alone but by its quality.” Id. at 80. Thus, in adjudicating the application pursuant to the preponderance of the evidence standard, the director must examine each piece of evidence for relevance, probative value, and credibility, both individually and within the context of the totality of the evidence, to determine whether the fact to be proven is probably true.

Even if the director has some doubt as to the truth, if the petitioner submits relevant, probative, and credible evidence that leads the director to believe that the claim is “probably true” or “more likely than not,” the applicant or petitioner has satisfied the standard of proof. See U.S. v. Cardozo-Fonseca, 480 U.S. 421, 431 (1987) (defining “more likely than not” as a greater than 50 percent probability of something occurring). If the director can articulate a material doubt, it is appropriate for the director to either request additional evidence or, if that doubt leads the director to believe that the claim is probably not true, deny the application or petition.

The issue in this proceeding is whether the applicant (1) entered the United States before January 1, 1982 and (2) has continuously resided in the United States in an unlawful status for the requisite period of time. The record contains the following evidence which is material to the applicant’s claim:

- The applicant submitted witness statements from 10 individuals in support of his application. The statements are general in nature with the witnesses stating that they know the applicant and that he has been a resident of the United States for all, or a portion of, the requisite period.

As stated previously, the evidence must be evaluated not by the quantity of evidence alone but by its quality. The witness statements provided do not provide detailed evidence establishing how the witnesses knew the applicant, the details of their association or relationship, or detailed accounts of an ongoing association establishing a relationship under which the witnesses could be reasonably expected to have personal knowledge of the applicant’s residence, activities and whereabouts during the requisite period covered by the applicant’s Form I-687. To be considered probative, witness statements must do more than simply state that a witness knows an applicant and that the applicant has lived in the United States for a specific time period. The statements must contain sufficient detail, generated by the asserted contact with the applicant, to establish that a relationship does in fact exist, how the relationship was established and sustained, and that the witness does, by virtue of that relationship, have knowledge of the facts asserted. The witness statements submitted by the applicant, therefore, are not deemed probative and are of little evidentiary value.

- The applicant submitted a United States Postal Service money order receipt dated June 9, 1981. The receipt is in the amount of $325.00 payable to [REDACTED] in Mexico from the applicant at [REDACTED]. This address is the address listed by the applicant on the Form I-687 for that time period.
- The applicant submitted stamped envelopes addressed from him to [REDACTED] in Mexico bearing the following postmark dates: May 19, 1986; June 9, 1986; June 26, 1986; and August 20, 1986. The return address on these envelopes is not an address listed by the applicant as a former place of residence on the Form I-687.
- The applicant submitted pay stubs dated December 1, 1984 and May 18, 1985 payable to [REDACTED]. The applicant also submitted a copy of an identification card, which expired in August of 1984. The applicant's picture is on the identification card. The address noted on the card, however, is not an address listed by the applicant as a former address on the Form I-687.

The applicant submitted two employment statements that are relevant to the requisite period.

- [REDACTED] submitted a statement stating that the applicant was employed by her at [REDACTED] from 1987 to 1989 and the applicant worked five or six hours per day as a helper.
- [REDACTED] submitted a statement stating that the applicant worked for him at [REDACTED] from April 15, 1981 to December of 1986 and the applicant worked as a cement worker 40 hours per week earning $6.00 per hour. [REDACTED] states that the applicant worked until 1986 when the applicant went to Mexico.

The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 245a.2(d)(3)(i) states that letters from employers attesting to an applicant's employment must: provide the applicant's address at the time of employment; identify the exact period of employment; show periods of layoff; state the applicant's duties; declare whether the information was taken from company records; and identify the location of such company records and state whether such records are accessible or in the alternative state the reason why such records are unavailable. The employment statements submitted by the applicant fail to provide the information required by the above-cited regulation. The statements do not provide: the applicant's address at the time of employment; show periods of layoff (or state that there were none); declare whether the information provided was taken from company records; or identify the location of such company records and state whether they are accessible or in the alternative why they are unavailable. As such, the employment statements are not deemed probative and are of little evidentiary value.

The applicant submitted contradictory information about his activities and whereabouts during the requisite period. On November 18, 1991, the applicant signed a sworn statement before a United States immigration officer stating that he entered the United States for the first time in 1979. He remained in the United States except for short visits to Mexico in 1981, 1982 and 1984. The applicant stated that he did not apply for legalization until 1990 because he had no money and because he was afraid of being deported. According to a statement from an immigration officer contained in the record of proceeding, the applicant appeared again on November 19, 1991, this time with his attorney, before the same immigration officer who took his statement the previous day, and recanted the previous day's statement. On November 19, 1991, the applicant presented a copy of his Form I-687 which states that he left the United States in 1987 and that he did not apply for amnesty because he had left the country without advance parole. The applicant stated that he made the incorrect statements the previous day "because he couldn't think." The inconsistencies noted have not been explained and are material to the applicant's claim because they have a direct bearing on the applicant's activities and whereabouts during the requisite period. It is incumbent upon the applicant to resolve any inconsistencies in the record by independent objective evidence. Any attempt to explain or reconcile such inconsistencies will not suffice unless the petitioner submits competent objective evidence pointing to where the truth lies. Doubt cast on any aspect of the petitioner's proof may lead to a reevaluation of the reliability and sufficiency of the remaining evidence offered in support of the visa petition. Matter of Ho, 19 I&N Dec. 582, 591-92 (BIA 1988).

The only other evidence submitted by the applicant in support of his application is his personal statement. The applicant's statement, however, in the absence of other credible and relevant evidence establishing that he resided in the United States throughout the requisite period, will not sustain his claim. As previously noted, in order to meet his or her burden of proof, an applicant must provide evidence of eligibility apart from his or her own testimony, and the sufficiency of all evidence produced by the applicant will be judged according to its probative value and credibility. 8 C.F.R. § 245a.2(d)(6).

The absence of sufficiently detailed documentation to corroborate the applicant's claim of continuous residence for the entire requisite period, and the inconsistencies noted above, seriously detract from the credibility of his claim. Pursuant to 8 C.F.R. § 245a.2(d)(5), the inference to be drawn from the documentation provided shall depend on the extent of the documentation, its credibility and amenability to verification. Given the applicant's reliance upon documents with minimal probative value, and the inconsistencies noted, it is concluded that the evidence submitted fails to establish continuous residence in an unlawful status in the United States during the requisite period.

Therefore, based upon the foregoing, the applicant has failed to establish by a preponderance of the evidence that he has continuously resided in an unlawful status in the United States for the requisite period as required under both 8 C.F.R. § 245a.2(d)(5) and Matter of E- M--, supra. The applicant is, therefore, ineligible for temporary resident status under section 245A of the Act on this basis.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed. This decision constitutes a final notice of ineligibility.
