Perry Rhew
Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The application was denied by the Director, Vermont Service Center, and is now before the Administrative Appeals Office on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The applicant claims to be a native and citizen of El Salvador who is seeking Temporary Protected Status (TPS) under section 244 of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. §1254.

The director determined that the applicant failed to establish he: 1) had continuously resided in the United States since February 13, 2001; 2) had been continuously physically present in the United States since March 9, 2001; and 3) was eligible for late registration. The director, therefore, denied the application.

On appeal, counsel states that the applicant is eligible for late initial registration because he had an application for change of status pending during the initial registration period. The applicant also submits evidence in an attempt to establish continuous residence and continuous physical presence in the United States during the qualifying periods. The applicant also states that he will submit a brief and/or additional evidence within 30 days. To date, there has been no further correspondence from the applicant or counsel. Therefore, the record must be considered complete.

Section 244(c) of the Act, and the related regulations in 8 C.F.R. § 244.2, provide that an applicant who is a national of a foreign state as designated by the Attorney General is eligible for temporary protected status only if such alien establishes that he or she:

- (a) Is a national, as defined in section 101(a)(21) of the Act, of a foreign state designated under section 244(b) of the Act;
- (b) Has been continuously physically present in the United States since the effective date of the most recent designation of that foreign state;
- (c) Has continuously resided in the United States since such date as the Attorney General may designate;
- (d) Is admissible as an immigrant except as provided under section 244.3;
- (e) Is not ineligible under 8 C.F.R. § 244.4; and
- (f)
 - (1) Registers for TPS during the initial registration period announced by public notice in the Federal Register, or
 - (2) During any subsequent extension of such designation if at the time of the initial registration period:
 - (i) The applicant is a nonimmigrant or has been granted voluntary departure status or any relief from removal;

- (ii) The applicant has an application for change of status, adjustment of status, asylum, voluntary departure, or any relief from removal which is pending or subject to further review or appeal;
 - (iii) The applicant is a parolee or has a pending request for reparole; or
 - (iv) The applicant is a spouse or child of an alien currently eligible to be a TPS registrant.
- (g) Has filed an application for late registration with the appropriate Service director within a 60-day period immediately following the expiration or termination of conditions described in paragraph (f)(2) of this section.

Continuously physically present, as defined in 8 C.F.R. § 244.1, means actual physical presence in the United States for the entire period specified in the regulations. An alien shall not be considered to have failed to maintain continuous physical presence in the United States by virtue of brief, casual, and innocent absences as defined within this section.

Continuously resided, as defined in 8 C.F.R. § 244.1, means residing in the United States for the entire period specified in the regulations. An alien shall not be considered to have failed to maintain continuous residence in the United States by reason of a brief, casual, and innocent absence as defined within this section or due merely to a brief temporary trip abroad required by emergency or extenuating circumstances outside the control of the alien.

Persons applying for TPS offered to El Salvadorans must demonstrate that they have continuously resided in the United States since February 13, 2001, and that they have been continuously physically present in the United States since March 9, 2001. On July 9, 2002, the Attorney General announced an extension of the TPS designation until September 9, 2003. Subsequent extensions of the TPS designation have been granted, with the latest extension granted until September 9, 2010, upon the applicant's re-registration during the requisite period.

The initial registration period for El Salvadorans was from March 9, 2001 through September 9, 2002. The record shows that the applicant filed this application on October 16, 2007.

The burden of proof is upon the applicant to establish that he or she meets the above requirements. Applicants shall submit all documentation as required in the instructions or requested by United States Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS). 8 C.F.R. § 244.9(a). The sufficiency of all evidence will be judged according to its relevancy, consistency, credibility, and probative value. To meet his or her burden of proof, the applicant must provide supporting documentary evidence of eligibility apart from his or her own statements. 8 C.F.R. § 244.9(b).

The first issue in this proceeding is whether the applicant is eligible for late registration.

The record of proceeding confirms that the applicant filed his application after the initial registration period had closed. To qualify for late registration, the applicant must provide evidence that during the initial registration period from March 9, 2001 through September 9, 2002, he fell within the provisions described in 8 C.F.R. § 244.2(f)(2) (listed above). If the qualifying condition or application has expired or been terminated, the individual must file within a 60-day period immediately following the expiration or termination of the qualifying condition in order to be considered for the late initial registration. 8 C.F.R. § 244.2(g).

The director determined that the applicant failed to establish his eligibility for late initial registration. Therefore, the director denied the application.

On appeal, counsel states that the applicant is eligible for late initial registration because he had an application for change of status pending during the initial registration period.

The record reflects that the applicant submitted a Form I-589, Application for Asylum and Withholding of Removal, on December 4, 2006, after the initial registration period for citizens of El Salvador. The asylum application was denied on January 29, 2008 and the applicant was also informed by separate notice on January 29, 2008, that his request for suspension of deportation/special rule cancellation of removal pursuant to section 203 of the Nicaraguan Adjustment and Central American Relief Act (NACARA) was not granted and his application would be referred to an Immigration Judge for decision because the applicant had not “established that you have been a person of good moral character.” A Form I-862, Notice to Appear, was provided to the applicant. The record reflects that at a hearing on October 22, 2008, the applicant withdrew his NACARA Application and his asylum application. While an applicant’s asylum application and ABC Class membership can technically render an applicant eligible for late registration, the applicant has not established that during the initial registration period from March 9, 2001 through September 9, 2002, he fell within the provisions described in 8 C.F.R. § 244.2(f)(2) (listed above). Consequently, the director’s conclusion that the applicant failed to establish his eligibility for late registration will be affirmed.

The second and third issues in this proceeding are whether the applicant has established his continuous residence in the United States since February 13, 2001, and his continuous physical presence in the United States since March 9, 2001.

In a sworn statement at his interview on June 15, 2007 in connection with his application for NACARA, the applicant stated that he first came to the United States on February 1, 1990 and left the United States for El Salvador on June 12, 1994. He stated that after four months, he reentered the United States and left again to El Salvador in 1998. According to the applicant’s testimony, he lived in El Salvador between 1998 and 2001, and he applied for a visa to the United States in 2001 but was refused. He stated that in May 2001, one week after his application was refused, he entered the United States without inspection. The applicant further stated that he left the United States in 2003 and went to Aruba where he remained for about three weeks and subsequently arrived in the United States at Miami on February 20, 2003 as a crewman. The applicant stated that he left the United States the same day and after three weeks in El Salvador, he returned to the United States.

The applicant has submitted copies of his tax returns for the years 2000 through 2004 and statements from individuals claiming to have known the applicant in the United States for various periods of time. However, this evidence does not establish that the applicant continuously resided in the United States from February 13, 2001 and was continuously physically present from March 9, 2001 through the date he filed the TPS application. The applicant's own testimony confirms that he did not meet the continuous residence and continuous physical presence criteria for TPS. He has, therefore, failed to establish that he has met the criteria described in 8 C.F.R. § 244.2(b) and (c). Consequently, the director's decision to deny the application for temporary protected status on these grounds will also be affirmed.

Beyond the director's decision, it is noted that although the applicant has submitted a copy of a birth certificate with English translation, it was not accompanied by a passport or any national identity document from his country of origin bearing photo and/or fingerprint to establish his nationality and identity. Therefore, the application must be denied on this basis as well.

The application will be denied for the above stated reasons, with each considered as an independent and alternative basis for denial. An alien applying for temporary protected status has the burden of proving that he or she meets the requirements enumerated above and is otherwise eligible under the provisions of section 244 of the Act. The applicant has failed to meet this burden.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
